Mail Moves Friday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Some mail began to move again Friday as pickets set up by striking federal blue-collar workers were removed from several post offices across Canada, but union representatives offered little hope that other workers would follow suit.

In Nova Scotia, a representative of the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) said a regional meeting is set for Sunday to discuss the stalemate in national bargaining and plans for future strike action.

A PSAC spokesman in Ottawa said 25 members of the union's general labor and trades group will continue pickets today at the airport in London, Ont. Toronto International Airport and the airport in Windsor, Ont., also were without PSAC maintenance workers Friday.

Ted Morris, a Toronto spokesman for Air Canada, said early today that the ministry of transport has opened one runway at the Toronto airport following a two-hour airport closure late Friday caused by ice.

Meanwhile, Jean Chretien, treasury board president, rejected businessmen's suggestion that civil servants be forbidden to strike.

He said the government is willing to adopt a majority conciliation report to give workers average wage increases of 15.4 per cent in the first year and 10.7 per cent in the second.

Average wage now is $4.42 an hour. Michael Lyons, a representative of the union, said workers have lowered demands and are seeking 37 per cent in a two-year contract. The 18,600-member union says pay for the workers is more than 45 per cent behind that of the private sector.

Contract talks broke off a week ago.

Out on Pass, Convict Dies In Stolen Car

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — John Richard Nowak, 30, of Windsor, Ont., a Collins Bay Penitentiary prisoner on a three-day pass to attend a religious retreat, died Friday of injuries sustained in a car crash.

Police said the car in which Nowak was killed had been stolen earlier in the day from a Kingston residence. Nowak was serving a six-year prison term for dangerous driving, robbery, theft over $200, escaping custody and parole forfeiture.

Nowak was eligible for release in July, 1976.

Brian Erb Wins Again

Answer Escapes Mounties' Clutch

MONTREAL (CP) — Brian Erb, idolized by his crew members as a buccaneer cast in the Errol Flynn mould, has flirted with danger all his life.

His escapade with the runaway ship Answer and a crew of 23 young men and women is the latest in a series of brushes with the authorities during the past decade.

The Answer made little if any headway Friday and her last reported position was about 43 miles southeast of Gaspe, Que., 150 miles across the drifting gulf ice from the open ocean.

But while the Mounties waited to go aboard and arrest her, Canadian authorities in Ottawa said she was in international waters, for purposes of criminal action, and there was no way to execute an arrest warrant issued Tuesday in Quebec City for Capt. Brian Erb, 37, the skipper

The question of Canadian jurisdiction in the waters where the Answer was Friday brought two different interpretations of the law by two Canadian federal ministries.

The justice department said its position was that the ship was within Canadian jurisdiction and should have been seized.

The RCMP, which functions under the justice department, took the position that she was outside the 12-mile limit and that this was as far as Canadian criminal authority reached, although the gulf has been considered Canadian waters for such things as fishing rights for more than a quarter century.

An external affairs department official supported the RCMP position, describing it as "quite correct."

But later in Ottawa, a justice department spokesman said the external affairs department was upset that one of its officials had said the RCMP was correct in not making an arrest.

Captain Erb, who has a wife and 11-year-old son living in a west-end Montreal suburb, first became a celebrity in October, 1968, when he salvaged a huge bronze propeller from the wreck of the Empress of Ireland which went down off Rimouski near the mouth of the St. Lawrence River in 1914.

Stories about Erb began to appear: About near-fatal incidents off the coast of Mexico, of tackling oil rig fires in California, of plans to salvage the Queen Elizabeth from Hong Kong harbor and even to reclaim the Titanic from its North Atlantic grave.

Experts said he performed a salvage miracle in 1969 when he resurrected the Clara Clausen, a 328-foot cattle carrier grounded on the St. Lawrence rocks near Les Escoumins, the last river pilot station for ships heading out into the Atlantic.

After buying rights from the ship's Danish owners for a nominal $1, Captain Erb blasted beneath the vessel, dug a 100-yard channel to the water, put the engine in reverse, and painstakingly refloated her.

The ship later was renamed the Atlantean and finally the Answer.

Trudeau Announces Pact

Euromart Lowers Cheese, Grain Levy

THE HAGUE (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau left for the Bavarian Alps Friday night after announcing a trade compromise that symbolizes his search for closer economic relations between Canada and the European Economic Community (EEC).

Trudeau capped two days of talks here with the announcement that the EEC has agreed to compensate Canada for British entry to the Common Market, an agreement that will affect millions of dollars worth of Canadian exports annually.

The agreement, reached in Geneva, was not connected with his talks here with Prime Minister Joop den Uyl, but Trudeau told a news conference the accord is a step towards the kind of contractual link he seeks with the EEC.

The thrust for such a link, still vaguely defined, got a boost at the same news conference when den Uyl said the Netherlands supports Canada's bid for a long-term arrangement.

In Toronto, Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie said Canadians received preferential tariff treatment for cheddar cheese and cereal grains and was granted special rates negotiated under a global offer to all countries affected by the enlargement of the EEC.

In Belleville, Arnold Johnston, general manager of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board's cheese division, said the agreement — under negotiation since Britain joined the EEC in 1973 — would provide an outlet for any surplus cheddar cheese.

Cheese remains a substantial industry in Hastings County.

While there was little surplus now, the situation could change if milk production increased in future, said Mr. Johnston.

Under the global offer, Canada will share in general reduced tariffs on about 30 products including forest products, frozen and canned salmon and domestic swine.

Trudeau said the Geneva accord shows EEC recognition "that Canada has an economy of its own and a position of its own and that it should be dealt with directly and not through some other large country."

He said the renegotiation of the global offer, earlier rejected by Canada, showed the country no longer automatically is lumped together with other countries in the EEC's view.

The earlier compensation offer, to cover trade advantages lost with the 1973 entry of Britain, Ireland and Denmark to the EEC, was accepted by the United States.

Trudeau said the new deal encompasses the recognition of Canadian identity that is fundamental to talks on stronger European ties.

The Geneva agreement was seen here by Canadian officials as a symbolic boost towards an eventual EEC link as well as a solid gain at the bargaining table.

Prior to the news conference, Trudeau and den Uyl discussed a variety of topics during a two-hour meeting at the Catshuis, the Dutch prime minister's official residence.

Den Uyl said Dutch officials will go to Ottawa within the next three months to discuss points of bilateral interest, specifically "the intensification of commercial relations, the possibility of further cultural contracts and possible investment by Holland in Canada."

Assassinations By CIA Denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former Central Intelligence Agency official who worked on an internal CIA investigation, denies a CBS news report that evidence was uncovered of agency involvement in the assassination of foreign officials.

Kurds Hijack Iraqi Airliner

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Three gunmen hijacked an Iraqi passenger jet carrying 85 passengers and crew to Tehran today and demanded a $5-million ransom and the release of 85 Kurdish prisoners from Iraqi jails, authorities said.

One source said that airport officials relayed the hijackers' demands to the Iraqi authorities in Baghdad, but there was no immediate response.

Iranian security forces immediately cordoned off the area around the plane and kept reporters and others away.

A civil aviation source said officials had warned the pilot they would not give permission for a hijacked plane to land in Tehran, but that the pilot had a gun at his head and decided to land anyway.

The informant said the pilot used the edge of the runway and landed on the dirt and gravel.

The Iraqi Airways Boeing was bound from Mosel in the Kurdish region of northeast Iraq to Baghdad when the hijackers forced the pilot to go to Tehran, the source said.

Raise Hell, Farmers Told

HALTON HILLS, Ont. (CP) — Ontario farmers will have to become more aggressive if they wish to gain anything from the government, Gordon Hill, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, told 200 Halton region farmers Thursday. "We are not going to get anywhere unless we raise some hell," he said.

Videotape Erased

TORONTO (CP) — At least 11 television programs — three of them never broadcast — were erased in error from videotape or disappeared from the CBC videotape department which is overworked and understaffed, a CBC spokesman said Friday. A CBC executive said the loss was $65,000. "We don't even know whether it was mechanical error, personal error or malice," he said.

Munro Helped Man

TORONTO (CP) — Branko Milosic, a Yugoslavian-born steelworker, who said he jumped ship in Hamilton in 1962 and avoided deportation, said Friday he thinks he is the man a Progressive Conservative MP tried to ask a question about Wednesday in the House of Commons. He said Labor Minister John Munro, then a backbencher in the Liberal opposition, prevented him from being arrested and deported.

Start Work This Summer

OTTAWA (CP) — Officials of the public works department told a news conference Friday that the government will begin work on the Pickering airport this summer.

Quebec MPP Resigns

MONTREAL (CP) — Guy Leduc, member of the Quebec national assmbly for the Montreal-area riding of Taillon, resigned from the Liberal party Friday night following what a provincial inquiry into organized crime called 'inexplicable' behavior.

Envoy Doesn't Want Politicians Talking

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Canadian ambassador to Washington says he doesn't want provincial officials from Canada winging freely around the United States and talking to U.S. authorities without him knowing about it.

If he became aware of such a thing, Ambassador Marcel Cadieux said, "I would be very quickly on the telephone to Ottawa, to warn the authorities and see what we could do about it."

The veteran ambassador's outspoken views on the ill-defined role of the provinces in foreign affairs emerged Jan. 23 when he testified in Ottawa before the Senate's foreign affairs committee.

He appeared at a closed session on Canada-U.S. relations and a text of his testimony was distributed Friday by the embassy here.

Despite assertions by Senator Allister Grosart (PC—Ont.) that provincial meetings with U.S. authorities are "happening all the time" wihtout federal government representatives sitting in, Cadieux said he is not aware of such meetings.

Hatha Yoga Great Exercise Quinte Senior Citizens Find

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Yoga is for all ages.

Ask Albert MacKenzie.

He's 86 and hasn't yet missed a class since Belleville's recreation department began running Friday yoga classes for the elderly a year ago.

"Other senior citizens should do it," says Albert, "and set a good example."

While he's "in good shape, yoga, nonetheless, "helps by keeping you limbered up".

Albert is among anywhere from 10 to 20 of the community's elderly who turn out for the weekly classes run by Mary Moore, local yoga expert who works programs for both recreation and education authorities.

The senior citizens have been responsive to the project since its first day, she says.

In fact, she expects the number of elderly participants to keep on increasing. So will the exercises as the students grow more supple.

"After all," says Mrs. Moore, "they're as interested as anyone in keeping limber and in the importance of good circulation" — among the basic benefits of the exercise.

What Mrs. Moore is now teaching her elderly students is hatha yoga — the physical twin of the meditative practice that makes up total yoga.

Yoga — the eastern practice which aims at "cleansing" the body so the mind can "open up" — has attained western-world popularity because of the strains and stresses of contemporary life, says Mrs. Moore.

She ran classes from the Mississauga recreation department before coming to Belleville four years ago. Her expertise now involves her with 270 students in Trenton and Belleville.

Hatha yoga, she says, is suited to all ages — "anyone from children right up to our seniors."

"Once it works for you, you stay with it" says Mrs. Moore.

Yoga: Energetic at 86

Albert MacKenzie, at 86, considers yoga a good way to keep limber. He's not the only one among the city's elderly taking instructions from local expert Mary Moore. She's been teaching yoga for a year now to senior citizens, as a city recreation department project.

Hospital Will Stick With Non-smoking Rules

Belleville General Hospital's board of governors saw no reason to concur with non-smoking prohibitions suggested to them Friday.

The reason: The hospital already has its own rules, banning or discouraging smoking.

Before the board was a letter being circulated to hospitals in Ontario by the York-Toronto TB and Respiratory Diseases Association.

Backed by various medical and associated groups, the letter requested regulations to guard patients against exposure to cigarette smoke.

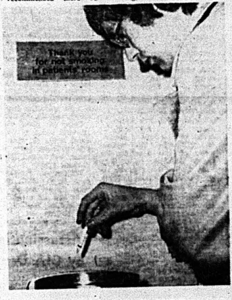
But, pointed out Phillip Rickard, BGH executive director, the hospital, as a health institution, "discourages smoking in general".

For instance: Visitors may not smoke in patients' rooms; smoking is prohibited in elevators and where oxygen is in use; tobacco and matches are taken from patients receiving oxygen.

The staff may smoke only in restricted areas — cafeteria, locker rooms, lounge and office areas.

While patients may not be prohibited from smoking — unless under doctors' orders — attempts are made to segregate smokers and non-smokers on request, and if bed space permits, an official said later.

In his report, Mr. Ricakard recommended there be no change in the hospital's existing rules against smoking.



Not at BGH

Sign at Belleville General Hospital elevator is politely-worded, but visitors can take the hint. Regulations against smoking were drafted some time ago and Friday the hospital board saw no reason to change them

Stewart Agrees on Lost Land

Ontario agriculture minister William Stewart has indicated support for the contention of the Hastings County Federation of Agriculture that the continuing disappearance of prime farm land must stop or be compensated for by the province.

Bill Langstaff, vice-president of the county federation, told the mini-cabinet session in Belleville this month that provincial authorities "should be showing some support of the farmer and his means of livelihood, the farm land."

Mr. Lanstaff was objecting to recent Queen's Park decisions that have taken "prime farm land out of production forever, in favor of unnecessary hydro lines, pipelines or sewage lagoons."

Wednesday, Mr. Stewart said he supported the stand of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture (OFA) that stated farmers must be guaranteed a minimum return for their crops.

The OFA brief indicated that if the loss of farmland continues at its present pace, there will be major deficits of beef, milk, hogs and poultry in Ontario by 1985.

"Farmers and farming must have income protection that provides sufficient incentive to attract the next generation into farming," OFA president Gordon Hill said.

Mr. Stewart said he agreed with the federation's theory of a farm commodity supplement.

Mr. Stewart said he didn't know what such subsidies might cost the province. "Perhaps it would add up to a lot of dollars, but we have to look to the future of food products."

Vardy Excels On Pig Farm

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — Two boars belonging to Donald Vardy, RR 4 Stirling, recently fetched a high price when sold for breeding purposes.

The two animals went through the record of performance test station at New Dundee, Ont., being taken in as weaners and having their rate of growth checked until they hit 200 pounds. Purebred Yorkshires, the two boars sold for $400 each.

That is the most I have every received," Mr. Vardy said in an interview. "One went to Belgrave, Ont., and the other went to Orangeville, Ont. I sold one a while ago to the agricultural college at Truro, Nova Scotia for $350."

M. Vardy runs an SPF (specific pathogen free)farrow to finish operation. He came to Stirling area in 1950 from Bancroft, and started raising purebreds three years later. His farm went under the SPF program in 1965.

To illustrate what SPF entails, baby pigs are removed from their mothers by caesarean section employing sterilized plastic bags so they never touch their possibly germ-laden mother.

The nucleus of Mr. Vardy's herd was obtained from William New, of Stroud, Ont. Mr. New's SPF pigs were obtained from his own sows being operated upon at the Guelph Agricultural College.

With precautions such as these, Mr. Vardy's pigs have normally in the past only left the farm to be sold. However, last year he entered some animals in competition at the Belleville Fair.

"I can't take pigs off the place and bring them back," M. Vardy explained. "I can't even take them to the vet for treatment. Once they leave the farm they have to stay away."

This first attempt at exhibiting was extremely successful. He competed against Hay Bay Farm (Carl Clayton, Napanee), Pigarosa Farm (Farrell Brothers, Roslin), Wheatcroft Farm (Joe Wheatley, Brighton), and Willowlee Farm (Lyle Vanclief, Ameliasburg).

Mr. Vardy's barrows won the following prizes: Grand Champion, Reserve Champion, and first on a pen of three market hogs. This also netted him the premier exhibitor award for the most points.

The Vardy SPF farm is one of few in operation. Mr. Vardy says he hasn't been pushing the breeding stock sales. "There's a lot of worry and work to it," he says. "We don't advertise."

Recently, he took his usual 15 hogs to market. Two had an index of 112, the highest obtainable. Three were 110 and three 109. An index of 107 was registered for six others and one scored index 105.

One hundred is the base index. At the time the base price was $57.70 a hundred pounds. That meant some good bonuses for Mr. Vardy. The two hogs indexing 112 netted him $64.62 a hundred pounds.

"I find I get a little better index on high moisture corn," Mr. Vardy said. "Some people argue that you have to feed more on high moisture ration to get the same nutritional value as dry food. I feed them the same amount and feel that they gain just the same plus they index better. That's what we have found, but some won't agree with that."

Sterilize Soil For Indoor Use

By ROSS HAWTHORNE

If you are a neophyte to indoor light gardening, that factor may provide you with a big advantage — an open mind. Because developments are taking place so rapidly within this mushrooming horticultural hobby that unless you're prepared to continually pursue new information, you could soon find yourself out of date.

Like the use of the soiless medium — not only simply for seeding and germination — but for transplanting and carrying your plant material right through to maturity.

Experienced indoor gardeners will tell you that one of the biggest problems they face, is soil pasteurization. Because as you are no doubt aware, all soil is saturated with bacteria, viruses and fungus mycellia.

Of course some of these organisms are not only helpful, but essential, to such processes as the decomposition of vegetable matter. But indoors, under ideal growing conditions many can be deadly enemies, wiping out seedling crops in total and without warning. And so it is recommended that you sterilize the soil you plan to use indoors via one of two accepted methods:

1) — Place soil in a covered pan, mix with water until moist and bake in a 350 degree oven for one hour;

2) — Dilute 2½-tablespoons of formaldehyde in 2 cups of water and mix thoroughly into each bushel of soil. Cover with plastic film, (or mix the whole thing in a plastic garbage bag), and let stand for 24 hours. Then uncover the soil and let it air. And be prepared to air the house too, or it will smell like somebody dropped a specimen jar in the biology lab.

And the baking in the oven process will do little to enhance the atmosphere in the household. In fact, the house will smell to the high heavens by the time you are through.

If you insist on using soil mixtures, I have found a process that works quite well.

Place your mixture in the container where you plan to seed or grow. Any container will do as long as it has lots of drainage. Sprinkle the surface with powdered fungicide and pour a kettle of boiling water slowly into the container and allow it to drain overnight. Then plant your seeds or seedlings.

But there is a way to end all of this nonsense. Don't use any soil at all. Use, instead, sterile soiless mixtures that don't contain any of these problems. After all, soil performs only two functions — it holds the plant up, and it provides nutrients.

The soiless mixtures will hold the plant up equally as well. And with the new fertilizers on the market, you can outdo nature any day in supplying nutrition.

Some of the other advantages in using a peat-vermiculite soiless mixture are:

1) Lightness — the soiless mixtures weigh only one quarter to one eighth of the soil mixutre. Which doesn't sound like much of an advantage until you start to carry flat after flat up the cellar stairs this spring.

2) Water retention — the soiless mixtures require about half the watering that the soil mixures demand.

Why not try it both ways — in soil and soiless mixes. I assure you, you've nothing to lose but your prejudices.

Tell Tourists Where to Go!

By MARG. HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Its time Prince Edward County told tourists where to go.

The Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce has erected a tourist sign directory near Outlet Provincial Park and placement of a second billboard has been discussed but the county needs more advertisement.

The summer visitor, unfamiliar with Prince Edward's country roads, is unlikely to discover each of the county's five museums, the boutiques dotting every township or the post card views at Lake-On-The-Mountain and Gull Pond.

Certainly the Chamber of Commerce has taken step one with its sign board near the Outlet-Sandbanks provincial parks but follow-ups throughout the county are important.

Prince Edward's County Museum, located near the Macaulay Mountain Conservation Area, is advertised by a small arrow-sign stuck inobtrusively at the top of the Town Hill.

Possibly directions would prove more attention-catching if a small sign board could be hung from the light pole on the traffic island at the top of the hill.

This location is much more central and there is ample room for a larger sign.

Bloomfield village has erected an excellent business directory at its outskirts to assist tourists in finding needed services.

This type of advertisement could benefit the town of Picton by cataloguing boutiques, restaurants and antique shops.

A huge billboard at Prince Edward yacht club might be considered as an advertisement for the county's craft shops and scenic drives.

The tourist information centre on Main St. annually does an excellent job of directing summer visitors to special attractions in the county.

Other advertisement, such as signs at the outskirts of towns and villages, billboards and directories should not be overlooked.

Boutique owners throughout the county might band together to inquire about the placement of a sign to show visitors where to buy pottery or discover a painting or a patchwork quilt as a holiday souvenir.

A list of scenic county drives, complete with maps, might be printed and placed in the county museums, hotels, motels and restaurants for distribution.

Although visitors probably do find popular sites such as the Sandbanks and the Outlet, how many have ever visited the fishing colony at Gull Pond or enjoyed the super-scenic drive around Big Island?

Since tourism plays an important role in Prince Edward's economy its time this industry was given a gentle push in the advertising department.

The county is filled with historic buildings, scenic drives and historic sites waiting to be enjoyed by the hundreds of tourists calling here annually.

Toques Off To Batawa Skiers

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Upon walking into the chalet, one is almost immediately impressed by the enthusiasm that abounds in the place.

Perhaps that sense of welcome stems from the nature of the Batawa Ski Club. It's run by volunteers now and has been for 15 years. It's a poor and distant cousin, if indeed, it is related, to some of the lavish resort centres in other parts of Ontario.

Alpine skiing seems such a joyously, fool-hardy sport and one, strengely enough, that I'd take up if my intestinal fortitude was greater than it is.

Given my bias, it is not hard to see how I'm impressed by the club, and more so, by the 49 youngsters who skied club slopes in a 24-hour ski-a-thon last weekend. Precisely, 28 brave souls went the limit in an effort to raise money for a new trail the club plans.

The cause they dedicated their young bones to was the creation of a third trail at the club in Batawa.

Existing trails are too steep and too short (some 700 to 800 feet long). The new trail, still in the planning stages, will be 1,500 long and on the northeast slope of the hill the club leases from Bata Ltd. for $1 a year.

It's location will save it from the rapid deterioration of snow during late-winter days when the sun is more potent.

President John Cormack says the club has taken a beating in the past two year because its supportive membership dropped due to poor snow conditions. Coupled with that problem is another. Some people learn to ski at Batawa and go off to other slopes longer and gentler.

The longer slope would keep such transient skiers at Batawa. For no matter how decicated the volunteers — they built their own chalet — membership dues are needed to pay debts.

Given the problem, the youngsters in the club acted. The ski-a-thon was organized and at least $2,000 will be raised once pledges are collected. The action is commendable, and as Mr. Cormack says, should be pointed out as one that puts a firm wedge in the image of today's youth as ne'er do wells and troublemaker.

Strike Pattern

Everyone knows that because of the actions of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, a variety of activities of national interest from mail service to West Coast grain handling have been brought to a standstill.

There is talk that mail disruption may continue for as much as two months, along with threats by the postal unions of a full mail strike. Can anything be done about this? By either Government or public? It seems not; the same wretched pattern that has prevailed in countless stoppages in the past is being repeated.

In these strike situations one of the factors that is most apparent is the preparedness of the union leadership. They snap their fingers and next thing the pickets are out, signs ready and doing their picket shuffle.

Someone is sitting there in a warm office in Toronto or wherever, plotting — and we use the word advisedly — it all, and suddenly it's down tools and nobody, but nobody, within the ranks is going to say no.

Multiply this throughout the union scene, and on an annual basis, and see what it is doing to the country. There is a very good chance that, given this continual fanning of the inflationary fires, the economy will be severely, if not irreparably damaged.

Ever stop to think moreover that, as one citizen expressed it, the civil rights of everyone are being violated? The right to work, to receive mail, that sort of thing. By their actions the strikers in effect are taking action detrimental to people's livelihood, as manifested through non-delivery of all kinds of mail, packages and so on which are a vital element in the conduct of business.

The Canadian economy and the Canadian people are being taken for a ride. The country is at the mercy of reckless and irresponsible elements which put their own voracious desires before the overall economic and material good.

And the worst of it is that the majority are just standing by and watching it happen.

A Grim Joke

The "right to strike" enacted by the Pearson government has become almost as much a grim joke as the "right to bear arms" in the United States. It's all one way — an avalanche sweeping the general public into oblivion. The great mass of citizens, caught in the middle, have no say in the matter.

Three years ago two professors of ethics on two Toronto faculties made some pertinent observations on this theme. They were not denying the right to strike, abused though it is, but were concerned about the public interest.

"The consumer — who organizes for him?" asked the Rev. Reginald Stackhouse. And not to mention pensioners.

"Perhaps consumers should be organized . . . and be a party at all labor negotiations," was the suggestion of the Rev. John Gallagher.

The latter idea makes sense, for it is the public in the end that pays the piper.

The Government meanwhile bays at the moon with empty gestures about prosecuting workers who walk off the job illegally — a lengthy process which can be nullified by the six-month statute of limitations.

The "right to strike" in reality is a political tiger-by-the-tail and, not surprisingly, it is virtually uncontrollable.

Hamstrung Economy

Looking at the present inflationary situation, now assuming horrendous proportions, and at the stopgap and essentially impotent counter measures of Government, the future may emerge as something like Toronto columnist Richard Needham visualizes it: "Our business and industrial system, attacked and weakened and hamstrung by so many people in so many ways, is perhaps going down, with nothing clearly in sight to take its place."

Religion and Politics Often Make Pretty Strange Bed-partners

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Mystery religions, those spring-offs from conventional faiths, often take on political overtones. Remember the way Social Credit began in Alberta? Its followers have always used a major spiritual input in their platform and many of their meetings.

"Bible-belt" politics is really not new in the Canadian and American mid-west. The historic Nineteenth century cause of fiery orator William Jennings Bryan against the economic stranglehold of the eastern money interests is ever remembered in American politics in his "cross of gold" speech, a quasi-religious appeal to the masses.

Politics based on a religious or spiritual bent usually flourish in hard economic times. Canada and the United States are indeed not unique in experiencing them.

In Japan, a political movement based on traditional contemplative Japanese vieiws about the social order, is on the rise and is already much more powerful in Japan's political and social systems than our Social Credit can ever be.

The Japanese party or movement, (it looks like both) is called Soka Gakkai (Value-Creation Society). Based on Buddhism, its chief is Daisaku Ikeda, 46, involved in earlier political-spiritual movements in modern Japan.

The largest of these is the still-existing Komeito (Clean Government Party which came out second only to traditional Socialist and Communist parties in the Japanese Diet or parliament after the last election.

Japan's Value Creation Society is based on Buddhist thought, though it has no connection with Zen which became immensely popular throughout the West during the 60s. Soka Gakkai places great emphasis on what we would call "group therapy" and the repeating of a "worship formula" (Diamoku). suasion" (Shakubuku) as it's called in Japanese has all the overtones of brain-washing which we in the West associate with psychological persuasion methods in large groups.

Nevertheless Soka Gakkai in a once-booming Japan is a deeper inflation than Canada and the United States, is a spreading phenomenon. It has about 10 million converts in Japan and is at present seeking converts in 30 other countries, Western as well as Asian.

Its connections with the previously-formed Komeito Party, (which now has 30 seats in the Diet), is denied by Ikeda. But the principles of both look the same to outsiders.

Mr. Ikeda acts more and more like a politician, less and less like a spiritual guide. He called for Japanese recognition of Communist China long before conventional Japanese politicians did so and has travelled widely to be received by the likes of China's Premier Chou En-lai and UN Secretary General Kurt Taldheim.

Not only Japan's deepening recession but the history of such movements in that mystical nation, almost guarantee even greater growth for this movement.

In the 20s and 30s it was an earlier Japanese religion called Shinto, which the Japanese military and imperialist governments elevated to a state religion.

State Shinto was the spiritual thrust which guided Japanese soldiers during the Second World War and was largely responsible for their suicide alternative when defeated in battle, and which baffled Japan's Western enemies during the war.

Capital Investment Shows Decline

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

One of the strongest underpinnings of the economy has weakened significantly in the past three months.

Last fall, Statistics Canada did a survey of capital-spending intentions in 1975.

It showed that Canada's largest companies were planning to increase their 1975 investment in new plant and equipment by 30.1 per cent over 1974. Such an increase would help to sustain the economy and specifically create more jobs.

The statisticians have just compiled the result of a second survey to see whether intentions have changed.

They have indeed changed—and for the worse.

The latest survey shows that the business sector now expects to increase its capital outlays this year by only 18 per cent. Last year's rise was 24 per cent over 1973.

When all categories of capital investment are counted—business, government, social—this year's intentions add up to $36,770-million. That's 13.5 per cent more than the spending for 1974—which in turn was 21.5 per cent greater than in 1973.

A major reason for the cutback in capital-spending intentions is the slowdown in the housing sector.

Current expectations is that spending on new residential construction will drop three per cent this year to $6,750-million, and that the number of new houses started will fall to 210,000 from about 230,000 in 1974.

It's incongruous that we should be cutting back on the growth of our housing supply, when the combined pressures of a high rate of family formation and a flood of immigrants have created a shortage of near-crisis proportions.

Just as incongruous, in a time of concern about future energy costs, is the cutback in capital investment plans of the natural-resources industries.

Such spending for oil wells, mining and quarrying is expected to increase by only 14 per cent this year, or barely more than the anticipated rate of inflation. Just last November it was reported that the oil and gas companies were planning to increase their 1975 spending by 42.9 per cent.

The disappointing results of the latest survey of investment intentions are a bitter commentary on the federal government's November budget.

In effect, Messrs. Trudeau and Turner chose a policy of short-term economic stimulation in that budget, and rejected the alternative of an anti-inflationary policy that would slow the economy down for a year or so while ridding it of the disease of inflation.

But those who make capital-investment decisions have apparently not found the tax concessions stimulating enough. Rather, they seem to have grown more cautious in the face of uncontrolled inflation and the spreading mood of recession.

The result is that federal policy has backfired. Instead of the stimulus the government wanted, we have higher unemployment and spending cutback that it sought to avoid.

And the inflation spiral, which the government saw as the lesser evil, goes on unchecked.

Conditions Improving

Farm Workers and Minimum Wage

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The announcement by Labor Minister John MacBeth that farm workers would in future come under the minimum wage is a step forward.

But not such a dramatic change as it might seem at first glance.

In its favor is that it shows finally an independence from that sizeable group of farmers who have been bull-headedly opposed, as only farmers can be bull-headed, to any regulation of their wage standards.

But it probably won't do much, if anything, to improve farm wages.

It is traditional that we think of farm work as almost a form of slavery, with the farm hand working long, long hours for a pittance.

At one time this probably was true but statistics show that at present it isn't.

In recent years farm wages have shot up dramatically. And though the farm worker still may not drive a Cadillac he at least is earning up to the $2.50 an hour standard.

At least on a total pay per week basis, if not on an hourly basis.

The latest figures we have are for 1973 and these show that the approximately 13,000 permanent workers and 50,000-60,000 seasonal workers in that year were earning better than $400 a month.

The fact is, however, that without any minimum wage standard, farm wages almost certainly would shoot up through natural supply and demand.

Minister of Agriculture and Food William Stewart said just a short while ago that there was an extremely urgent need in the province at that time for dairy herdsmen. The shortage was so bad that dairy men were getting out of the business.

And this, of course, is only the tip of the iceberg.

When we come to seasonal workers we have been bringing them into the province for years.

In 1973, again, in the seasonal work force were 2,500 from the Caribbean, 1,200 foreign students, 2,000-3,000 other foreigners and illegal immigrants and 6,000 migrant workers from Quebec and the Maritimes.

And the availability of these imported seasonal workers has been declining, which means inevitably that higher wages will be needed as an attraction.

Scott Young
The Globe and Mail

Recently I quoted some wry comments from James G. Endicott — who for many years was more or less revered, and reviled as leader of the Canadian Peace Congress (until he came down in support of China too forcefully to please the more prominent USSR-niks among his colleagues). The passage I used was from a sermon a year earlier, with the text from Exodus. Dr. Endicott's contention was that in modern terms Moses had led one of the most spectacular walkouts in history — and that, as rarely happens, the world has accepted the underdog's account of it. He thought that if Pharoah had employed a modern public relations consultant he might have managed to make the whole thing look like the actions of a pack of leftist riff-raff. Anyway, I remarked that Dr. Endicott was not listened to much any more. This brought letters of reproach, including one from Lillian Robinson listing more than 50 speaking engagements and a good deal of writing on Dr. Endicott's 1974 schedule "in spite of almost constant pain from an arthritic hip." Also, I received a letter from the man himself. He is 75 and is home now from the Orthopedic and Arthritic Hospital on Wellesley Street where he was fitted with "another metal ball point hip joint." He now has two, and praises "that remarkable hospital and especially the pioneer work of Dr. James E. Bateman." The hospital's nurses and physiotherapists, he said, "remind this old warhorse of Chief Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes who, at 90 years, was walking with a friend when they passed a lively, beautiful young woman. "That lady," he sighed, "makes me wish I were 70 again."...

Legacy of Spanish Conflict

Before Hiroshima . . . Guernica

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

For the past 30 years the one-word shorthand for the concept of terror bombing from aircraft has been Hiroshima. Before 1945 the word was Guernica, the name of a small town in the northwest corner of Spain. It became the one-word title of Picasso's famous painting that epitomizes the savagery of the Spanish Civil War of the '1930s

Before April 26, 1937, when waves of Stuka dive-bombers systematically destroyed Guernica, the concept of warfare by terror bombing of urban areas had been theoretical. Journalists and politicians wrote and spoke about how terrible it would be if it did happen and military analysts showed how it could happen.

Hitler was then building the war machine that he unleashed 2½ years later to start the Second World War. He was giving military aid to the rightists in Spain. Guernica was a test operation to get some practical experience for the men and machines of Hitler's air force.

The news available for the front page of The Kitchener Daily Record of April 7 was scanty. The estimate then was that 800 civilians, of a population of 7,000 had been killed, by bombing and low-level machine-gunning. Later estimates have been as high as 1,600 killed, 1,000 wounded.

Whatever the toll was, this demonstration of the power of air bombing sent shivers through the spines of governments of peace-loving countries. Guernica had a shock effect that made appeasement popular for a while.

Workmen have just unearthed an unexploded 500-pound bomb in Guernica. It has been successfully defused. but it has been there as a hidden menace for nearly 33 years. What evil men do can persist long after the evil men are gone.

Leprosy: New Theories Advanced

BBC London Letter

London scientists have put forward a revolutionary new theory about the underlying cause of the symptoms of the commonest form of leprosy. Their work seems likely to lead to new ways of diagnosing the disease early, and perhaps eventually to new and improved treatments.

Dr. Colin Crawford, Dr. Lodwich Evans and Eileen Evans, in the Anatomy Department of University College London, have found an ingenious way to use animals, rabbits, not to be infected with leprosy — which only affects humans — but to imitate its symptoms or, as scientists say, to provide a model.

This model has now provided them with evidence to support a new theory of the real cause of the symptoms of non-lepromatous leprosy — the form which afflicts 80 or 90 per cent of all leprosy sufferers.

Non-lepromatous leprosy is characterised by separate patches of hairless, colorless skin with no sensation, unlike the lepromatous form in which the whole body is diffusely affected.

It has generally been believed that these separate patches are due to a strong defensive reaction against the organisms, the mycrobacteria which cause the disease, walling them off and forming protective tissue around them.

But the University College team's experiments suggest instead that the skin changes are really due to what is called an auto-immune reaction, one in which the body's defence system, instead of doing its proper job of killing bacteria, instead mistakenly attacks parts of the body itself.

Climate Control and All That

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In your February 26 issue two items caught my eye:

Firstly, there was the news that the Belleville Plaza was to be converted from its present meagre condition to a fully-enclosed status; complete with a "good mix" of retail outlets, and a price tag of about $1½ million ... all (apparently) courtesy of S and A Investments.

Secondly, the observation by Dr. Richard Bogg of Hall State University that inhabitants of Ireland seem to have, along with letter bombs and apparently perpetual insurrection, excellent complexions ... as compared with the youth of North America at any rate. "Their color is fantastic. Those young people are almost all rosy-checked." enthuses Dr. Bogg. He even goes so far as to venture the truly radical suggestion that ... "Perhaps regular exercise in cool, moist air is good, not only for the skin but for the heart and disposition."

Now, compare this opinion with Mr. Stanley Albert's (S and A Investments) ... "the days of shopping plazas are gone ... enclosed shopping areas are a necessity during Canadian winters."

What shall we make of this? It cannot be that Mr. Albert is concerned for the financial well-being of consumers since they must eventually pay the $1½ million dollars (plus interest) for this new plaza, in addition to the legitimate cost of the goods to be sold there — and Dr. Bogg has clearly rendered the proffered reason suspect.

Is Mr. Albert (and S and A Investments) endeavoring to prevent social unrest in Canada by keeping us preoccupied with acne.?

The Politics of Ireland Today

Letter in
The Christian Science Monitor

I am writing to correct the letter from Rev. Daniel Lyons S.J. It would be impossible to answer it adequately in a short reply but two points should be stated clearly.

First, discrimination against Roman Catholics in employment is certainly not widespread in Northern Ireland today.

Second, it is ludicrously incorrect to say that only 2 percent of government jobs are filled by Roman Catholics. Religious affiliation is not a factor in the selection of candidates to fill posts in the government service and therefore no official figures are available but any informed observer would confirm that probably 40 percent to 50 percent of posts in the Northern Ireland Civil Service are filled by Roman Catholics. Certainly more than the one-third of the posts which would be justified by the Roman Catholic proportion of the population as a whole, are so filled.

In any event the present strife in the community is not about job discrimination or civil rights. It is caused by the determination of a tiny minorty to impose by violence a political "solution" which could not be achieved by democratic means because it is unacceptable to the majority of the population.

The British Government must historically take some share of the blame for the present situation in Northern Ireland but during the last five years they and the British people have behaved with remarkable generosity toward Northern Ireland. Others are also to blame, not least the churches in Ireland, the government of the Republic of Ireland, and politicians on both sides.

But as one who has worked full time for the past 18 months in the interests of peace and reconciliation with people of many shades of religious opinion and of none, I know that people of good will here are no longer interested in barren recriminations or the apportioning of blame. They are looking not to the past but to the present and the future and their efforts toward reconciliation are only hindered by the ill-informed dissemination of false propaganda by people like Fr. Lyons.

Catholic Church Is Striving For Working Tie with Judaism

NEW YORK (AP) — On a worldwide basis, the Roman Catholic Church is launching a point-by-point effort to rid itself of insinuations against Jews and establish deepened, working bonds with Judaism.

Although that faith gave birth to Christianity, mutual misimpressions have marred their attitudes towards each other for 2,000 years, the Vatican says, adding that conditions now are open for building a "new relationship."

The spiritual bonds and historical links binding the church to Judaism . . . render obligatory a better mutual understanding and renewed mutual esteem," the Vatican said in guidelines toward that goal.

A Jewish leader hailed the document generally, saying its implementation "would constitute nothing less than a revolution in esteem between Catholics and Jews everywhere." But he sharply deplored certain aspects of it.

Rabbi Marc H. Tannenberg, co-secretary of the International Jewish Committee for Interreligious Consultations, said the guidelines assert a "conversionary intention" toward Jews, implying that Judaism is inadequate for them, and that God's covenant with them has ended.

This is "totally unacceptable to the Jewish conscience," he said, adding that Judaism centres "on the critical conviction that God's covenant with Israel is everlasting" and not subject to substitution.

He said some Christian scholars, both Protestant and Catholic, have developed a new theological view of Judaism as being permanently valid to Jews, with Jesus' work extending redemption to others.

That concept "provides the only basis for genuine mutual acceptance and mutual trust between Christians and Jews."

Nevertheless, he welcomed the document generally, saying its condemnation of anti-Semitism takes on "heightened importance today" in light of international exploitation of anti-Semitism by "enemies of the Jewish people."

The guidelines, issued by the Vatican's Christian unity secretariat, say in urging increased dialogue with Judaism that the church by its nature "must preach Jesus Christ to the world."

"Lest the witness of Catholics to Jesus Christ should give offence to Jews, they must take care to live and spread their Christian faith while maintaining the strictest respect for religious liberty," the document adds.

The document calls for mathe scriptural context shows the meaning actually is "the leaders of the Jews" or "adjor Catholic initiatives to instill a more positive view of Judaism, emphasizing that Jesus, His apostles and first followers were Jews and that he used teaching methods of a rabbi.

It reiterates the Second Vatican Council's declaration that Jesus' death cannot be blamed on all Jews then nor Jews today, and calls for preaching and teaching to clarify New Testament passages commonly misinterpreted to put "the Jewish people . . . in an unfavorable light."

For example, the document notes that the Gospel of John often refers to "the Jews" as acting against Jesus, when versaries of Jesus."

Similar corrective explanations are urged in regard to pejorative implications about the Pharisees, and erroneous insinuations that Judaism is a religion of "justice, fear and legalism," when actually the Old Testament contains passages emphasizing love and mercy, parallelling those in the New Testament.

Both Old and New Testaments were inspired by God and "illume and explain each other," the document says, adding that on the "practical level in particular, Christians must strive to acquire a better knowledge of the basic components . . . of Judaism."

African Churches Mix Pagan, Christian Rites

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (CP) — The search for religion is as varied as man, but perhaps nowhere more so than in Rhodesia, where now African churches often mix Christian and pagan rituals.

There are many so-called independent African churches often having such picturesque names as the Amapostolo (The Apostles) and the Amaprofiti (The Prophets).

Most of these movements have two things in common: They are purely African and they meet in the open air, in an amphitheatre of boulders or merely under a large tree in the bush.

One church is known as The Donkey Church and a donkey is present at all services. When it brays it's a sign for the congregation to pray. Another church caters specifically to divorcees.

Most of these cults incorporate ancient primitive beliefs in their ritual. A hill which has deep tribal significance as an ancestral shrine, for example, will be called The Mount of Olives.

These churches take community worship to the masses.

Years ago, before towns such as Salisbury and Bulawayo engulfed the African, he would, when worried or distressed, feel the need to appease the family spirits and accordingly approach the family elders. This personal religion was something close to the family group—a continuity of all ancestors dwelling in the rafters in the main house of the kraal.

The separatist churches today have largely replaced the need for family worship by Africans who are not committed to a specific church or who, through geographical circumstances, are unable to attend the church to which they nominally belong.

Most of the leaders of these churches are untrained, but feel some sort of "divine call." Some are not above conjuring up evil spirits of tribal lore to prove points to their congregation. Other churches display photographs showing their leaders surrounded by angels.

Many of these separatist churches preach a brand of religion based on brotherly love and a deep faith in their beliefs.

They generally teach their flock to be content with their lot in life—"There is little hope of prosperity and happiness on earth unless you practise what you expect to receive and enjoy in your next life."

Contemplation, Worship Way Spirit Nourished

By DR. GORDON C. SMYTH

"I believe that everybody has a duty to think as wisely, speak as firmly and act as decisively as possible on political and social matters.

I also believe that the performance of our duty to the world requires strength not only of body and mind, but also of spirit. It is one thing to know what to live for. It is another thing to know what to live from.

What feeds the spirit? Historically, there have been two principal methods by which the spirit has been nourished: contemplation and communal worship.

Only when the boy Samuel lay on his bed in quiet contemplation was he in a state to respond, "speak, Lord, for Thy servant hears." Before his commanding ministry began, it was evidently imperative that St. Paul spend several years in the wilderness of "Arabia."

Jesus, "the Man for others", lived from God. He indicated, repeatedly that He was inspired, informed by the Spirit of God.

Arnold Edinborough suggests that Anglicans make a complete rereading of the New Testament a Lenten project. We would do well to join them, in the approach that he recommends in the Canadian Churchman.

Mr. Edinborough writes, "It is significant that Time magazine devoted one of its recent issue's cover stories to the Bible: how it is being published in new versions and in what huge quantities it is being bought and, presumably therefore, being read."

Communal worship also nourishes the spirit. Faith does not generate worship. Worship generates faith. What surprised the ancient world into which the Gospel went was the spectacle of Christians meeting to sing hymns to Christ as to God.

I recall the story about Beethoven in his early years. He went to a distant cathedral in which, it was said, there was the greatest organ in Europe. As the elderly monk on duty looked at him, the youth, begrimed with the dust of the journey, looked wistfully at the console.

The monk refused him permission to play the organ. However, his appeal was granted to "but touch the keys". Of course, the young man could not restrain himself. He swept the keyboard with his genius.

When he stopped, the monk stood there deeply moved. "Who are you?" "I am Beethoven." The old man uncovered his head and crossed himself, "My God, to think I almost missed letting the master use my humble instrument!"

Jesus Christ is the great Master. In His touch there is music, power, food and life for the soul.

Just Guess What's For Breakfast?

Scientists, Agriculture Canada tells us, are teaching apples new tricks.

To quote: "The trees are learning to ripen their fruit on cue, to not drop too many apples on the ground and to grow the right proportion of leaves and blossoms for the next year."

Agriculture Canada goes on to tell us it's all the work of chemical growth regulators. The growth regulators are "a boon to apple growers who now can plan harvesting dates with greater certainty, thus reducing labor problems and increasing profits."

The magic stuff is Alar, which keeps apples on the trees when sprayed on, and Ethrel, which later stimulates apple ripening and fruit drop. Ethrel also has "a dramatic effect on apple color".

I'm not sure why I find this bit of scientific wonder just a little depressing but I think it has something to do with apples we had for lunch around here the other day.

They were a dark deep red — big and beautiful and firm to the touch. The insides were so white they were almost blue.

But we swore they'd never seen a tree because they tasted like absolutely nothing.

I'm sure they had wonderful keeping qualities and all kinds of other commercially desirable characteristics but they didn't taste like apples are supposed to taste. I'm increasingly sure that the more scientists fool around with food the worse it gets.

At a recent Toronto meeting of food writers, one experienced cook — she's a Cordon Bleu-trained chef — moaned bitterly about battery-raised chickens and ducks which made good cooking virtually impossible.

Now Agriculture Canada tells us that even strawberries aren't safe from progress. It seems that in the past the nature of the delicate plants prevented the use of powerful herbicides — they killed the strawberries along with grasses and broad-leaved weeds. Now the scientists find they can dip strawberry roots in charcoal solution which lets them survive in spite of the herbicides which would normally kill them.

On another food front, the Confectionery Manufacturers Association of Canada has declared March as Candy Month — they even have a Ms. Candy Month, believe it or not.

The idea is to get everyone to eat more candy, I guess. They mention that every Canadian eats 17 lbs. of confectionery products annually.

"Candy has the widest distribution of any food product in Canada," says Fred Finlayson, president of the CMAC. I suspect he says it happily. And why not? Candy is a very big business with 75,000 retail outlets offering confectionery products for sale; they sell 350 million pounds of candies.

In the interest of doing an even better business, the manufacturers are encouraging you to have candy for breakfast to "perk up your family and get people off to a good week's start" with rolls made with caramels. In fact, the manufacturers even inform us that three British researchers, whoever they may be, conclude that "confectionery may be included in a slimming diet"

I'm not going to say anything about all of that — or at least not much.

It's just that some days it seems like one has to nearly do battle with the supermarkets and farmers and manufacturers and even the government to just get plain wholesome food to eat.

Candy for breakfast, indeed.

The evening is being organized by Ruth Brown of Carrying Place who is local reresentative for Holly Hill Fashion Accessories.

The show and bingo is being held to introduce women in this area to the Holly Hill line of jewellery and scarves in an entertaining way that doesn't require any purchase, she explains.

Holly Hill products are sold by hostesses who hold jewellery parties in their homes. The rings, bracelets, pins and necklaces range in cost between $3.50 to $30.

A demonstration by an expert in the art of scarf tying will also be featured Monday evening. Holly Hill scarves and jewellery will be given as door and bingo prizes.

AGRICULTURAL CONVENTION

Rita Holmes, Margaret Trudeau, Blanche Countryman, Isabel Martin and Lucille Keilty attended the recent Convention of Ontario Agricultural Societies at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, last week.

Janet Hamilton of Trenton, past-representative of this district, was elected president of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies, Ladies' Section.

Site Restored

NEW HARMONY, Ind. (AP) — The site of the first free public kindergarten in the United States is being restored by Historic New Harmony Inc., a non-profit organization. The institution, for both boys and girls, was established in 1826 by Tilliam McClure, a Scottish geologist and philanthropist.

Quinte Women's Directory

Forms have been sent to women's organizations in the Belleville area in preparation for the second annual Quinte Women's Directory.

However a change has occurred since the forms were mailed.

The date for the directory's publication has been moved to June, so that the information it contains about elected officers, will be more timely. Groups are not required to send in their completed forms to the Women's Department until April.

If any women's club or auxiliary has not yet received a form, write the Women's Department of The Intelligencer, 45 Bridge Street E., Belleville.

You Can Be Anything You Like!

That's the message of hope and good cheer being spread throughout the province by the ministry of labor's representative, Judy Stoffman. She's communications co-ordinator for the women's bureau. And her job is to reach young people — and old ones too — with the news.

Ms. Stoffman visited Quinte Secondary School Thursday to speak to interested students about job opportunities. Her audience was mainly a female one, but a handful of boys also attended during the day-long series of discussion groups.

The fact that she was there to speak to both sexes was stressed by Ms. Stoffman.

"The idea of women's liberation is not just to free women to become whatever they'd like, but to free men too. There should be nothing to hold back people from any kind of job they are able to do."

Government legislation in recent years has eliminated hiring practices that discriminated against either sex. Women are being encouraged to play a more active political role.

And yet the old ways still remain. Most women work in traditionally female jobs — nursing, teaching and being secretaries — that are also traditionally underpaid.

'A survey of 100 men and women by Manpower showed that 70 per cent of the women would work for $3.50 or less an hour. However, only 40 per cent of the men would agree to that wage," she said.

"What this shows is that not only does society place a lower value on work done by women, so do women themselves. Women have less self-esteem, although this is changing at last."

The problem with entering the traditionally female fields is that these areas are not expanding at the same rate as women are joining the work force, she explained "You have a better chance of a good job if you choose one of the "untraditional" jobs." said Ms. Stoffman.

And what kind of jobs are these? They're jobs that used to be male-dominated but can be done just as well by women. Pilot, nuclear physicist, veterinarian, chemist, technician, dentist, archeologist; the list is endless and the challenge infinite.

Jobs that men may enter now with less prejudice against them include nursing, secretarial jobs, child care, and food services.

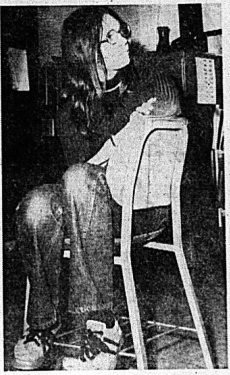
"You don't have to choose between a happy marriage and an interesting job," said Ms. Stoffman.

"Things have changed, and are still changing, so that you can combine work and motherhood. You CAN do everything you want.

'There is nothing intrinsically wrong with the traditional role that women have had," she assured the girls. "But it is wrong when that role isn't what a woman wants. It is wrong to put a square peg in a round hole.

"And the unfair thing is, that men have never had to choose. They've never had to decide between being a father and having a job."

'You're free to be yourself' says Judy Stoffman



Thinking of the future, Helen Hewitt listens

Traditional Limits Are Disappearing

As part of her presentation, Judy Stoffman showed a film strip about the doors that are opening now that public opinion is changing. A woman happy in her carpentry job, and a man satisfied by his role as a nurse discussed their experiences and the rewards of their work.

Her survey of one audience following the film, showed that 10 girls chose "untraditional" jobs — court reporter, psychologist, engineer and pharmacist — and 16 intend to follow traditional paths.

Her question, "What do you want to be?" was met by giggles, peeking to see what others were writing down, and many expressions of indecision, before the slips were handed in. Only a few girls seemed sure that they felt unbiased about what sorts of jobs men and women should do.

"They don't start soon enough with this information," said one senior student. "We should have been free to make choices way back in public school. But it was always a rule that girls took home ec and boys took shop.

"It's kind of late to change our attitudes now."

Topic: Women and Law

Alpha Delta Kappa, Lambda Chapter, met at the Hastings County Board offices for their February meeting.

Speaker for the evening was Sidney Murray, Belleville lawyer, who talked to the sorority about how the law relates to women since Bill 117 last April.

Because women when they marry do not expect that marriage to end, they do little or nothing to protect themselves against this eventuality. Mrs. Murray stressed that marriage is not just a social and emotional relationship, but an economic partnership as well.

The separate property system which exists in Ontario states in effect that "it's mine if my money bought it" and at termination of the marriage, property is divided according to financial contribution.

In Ontario, said Mrs. Murray, a husband could leave with the house, bonds and other assets while the wife would leave with the used furniture and the groceries.

The law reform commission study is suggesting a matrimonial property system which would provide for joint ownership of the home. Each spouse is controller of his or her own assets and may do what he or she wants.

If the marriage is terminated, the assets would be listed, valued, and have subtracted debts, gifts and inheritances from them, and then be split, equally, between both man and woman.

Mrs. Murray told the audience that in the case of joint bank accounts, who owns it, in the event of divorce, is not clear. The current proposal is that the money belongs to both and the bonds belong to both.

First-hand Account of Old Age

I am 94 years old. Six years ago my family put me in a nursing home. I hear them say, "No one home — everyone works — unsafe to be alone," but I do not understand. Of course, I accepted their decision — I came here — but I cry inside every day. Each time they come to visit me, I beseech them to take me home.

All I want is to die in my own bed at home — not in a world of strangers. I want to hold my daughter's hand and be surrounded by those people and things I love. How can I trust these strangers? What if I should die with no one here? Will they wrap me in that mummy sheet and haul by body onto that steel cart?

My mind slips rapidly and I know this but I cannot prevent it. What I remember best are things that happened in the past. I look for my own mother. Or my babies are small and need care. "Confused, disoriented", the nurses say.

Actually, I am well aware of most situations but, with things flashing through my mind the way they do, I'm likely to speak of my school days in the same breath as I talk about the noise of traffic outside my window. I cry out in desperation, "What's happening to me?" I wish the nurses wouldn't write me off as "not in touch".

But there's one nurse who is such a joy! She gently touches me and smiles at me when I look questioningly at her. She tries to explain what is happening and, though I don't alway understand, I feel comforted and safe. Sometimes she pats my shoulder just to let me know that everything's all right. She never fails to hold my hand for a few second after she puts me to bed and says, "Goodnight, sleep tight."

Many times I can't eat my food. The nurse I like always sits with me for a few minutes and coaxes me. And if she hasn't time to sit very long, well, she comes back sometimes to talk to me, sometimes to show me what to eat next.

I've had a hard life — never much money or many clothes or possessions. I have known times of hunger. Is it any wonder that I like to have a small piece of cracker in my purse just in case there is no food tomorrow or in case I get hungry tonight? Sometimes an aide brings a cup of juice. But nothing to eat. "Oh well, you should have eaten your supper. Then you wouldn't be hungry."

Sometimes I look deep into the eyes of the nurse and ask, "How would you like to be me?" I can remember back to my youth when I never gave a thought to growing old, and I think these youngsters who are nurses are doing today what I did then; they are hiding — from thoughts of old age.

It's tough to get old. I know that sometimes I'm stubborn. But I have lived more days and seen and done more things than anyone around me — that makes my values a little different. Now I need security and understanding and hope. I need respect, too, but most of all I need LOVE.

What Size Home Shall It Be?

Norma Bland, F.R.I.

Life, to us all is give and take and the lesson inflation is teaching us is that we can have the cake but may have to forgo the icing!

Do you really need that extra bedroom? Or ground floor family room? A room only 10'x10' could add $2,800.00 to the original cost. But wait now, that is an extra $27.44 per month and a total of approximately $8,232 over the period of the mortgage.

Perhaps, everyone must have a room of their own, but at the cost they might study in the dining room! It is nice to have a guest room, but you could put your guest in a hotel room every month for 25 years.

Ann Landers

You Don't Want to Go? Say No!

Dear Ann Landers: What can be done about a mother-in-law who telephones on Sunday morning to invite you and the family for dinner that afternoon? Sometimes she'll call as late as noon and ask us to be at her house at 3:30 p.m.

I like to cook early Sunday morning. When I get her invitation at noon it means I have to keep my meal for the next day. It's never as good.

I've tried phoning my mother-in-law Saturday evening to see if she says anything about dinner, but she never does. She always waits until the next day. The problem is that she isn't the kind of person you can say anything to. Very touchy, you know. What can I do? This has been going on for years.—Totally Disgusted

Dear Total: You are as much to blame as she is. You've been accepting her last-minute invitations "for years" so she assumes you don't object to such short notice.

If you are really "Totally Disgusted," tell your mother-in-law the next time she calls that your dinner is already prepared—and from now on, if she wants you for a Sunday meal to please let you know on Saturday.

Dear Ann Landers: Have you ever printed anything in your column about children who are employed and living at home, paying room and board? I need an answer because my two kids made me feel like a miserly old woman when I mentioned that they should each give me a small part of their weekly cheques.

I have a son and daughter, one 19, the other 21. They both have good jobs, live at home, and I never get a dime from either one of them. They invite their friends to dinner and the only thing they buy is beer and liquor because my husband and I don't drink alcohol, so there's none in the house.

The kids never lift a finger around here because they "hold down jobs." The girl sometimes washes out a few pieces of underwear and irons her own blouses, but the bulk of the laundry is on me. Oh yes, I also double as an "Answering Service." They get phone calls galore and I have to take down the messages.

Our children both have their own cars and they buy their own clothes. But what about this business of free room and board? Is it fair?—Just Asking

Dear Mother: While you are just asking, I suggest that you just ask for 15 per cent of the paycheque from each of your two freeloaders. If th [illegible] they can get room, board, laundry and phone services elsewhere for less—invite them to try it.

CAS Needs More Money To Care for City Wards

By ISABEL HUGGAN
Staff Reporter

Mayor Robin Jeffrey anticipates trouble ahead when city council reviews the budget submitted by the Family and Children's Services for 1975.

The reason? An increase of 34.4 per cent in the CAS Belleville Budget. This means Belleville's expenditure will be $123,136 compared to last year's $94,305.

"We've seen an increase in all the agency budgets submitted so far," said Mayor Jeffrey on Friday. "Some are up 22 or 24 percent and if everybody's needs are up, I don't know what we'll do."

Asked to explain the budget increase CAS Director Bruce Kerr said that the number of Belleville children in the care of the Children's Aid far exceeded their expectations for 1974 and 1975.

"Although our budget is up in Belleville, it's down for the other two areas we serve," he said.

"In Trenton and in Hastings county we were left with a surplus at the end of the year. In fact, we underspent our estimated budget in every area except in Belleville child care.

"This is the result of a province-wide move by the courts to use the CAS as an alternative to institutional care."

Mr. Kerr said that the CAS is not opposing this plan, since keeping children within their familiar environments an approach the CAS favors.

"In 1974, we budgeted for 48.5 children in our care per month," he said, "and it turned out to be an average of 55 children per month.

Because of the increase above projected figures in 1974 for Belleville children, there is a deficit of $8,796 in the CAS budget. To eliminate this debt and provide for 1975's increase, the CAS is asking the city to pay $123,136, 34.4 per cent more than last year.

The total CAS budget is $765,619, of which the Ontario government will be asked to pay $529,705. Local councils — for Belleville, Trenton and Hastings County — make up the remaining contribution of $235,914.

"Each municipality pays according to the relationship of the number of children (for whom it is financially responsible, according to the findings of the court) to the total number of children in CAS care," [illegible] Kerr.

"We have no control over the number of children entering our care," he added.

"It's a phenomenon of the times that there are more teenagers in our care now," he added. "At the present time 50 percent of our children in care are teenagers."

Belleville city council won't deal with the CAS budget request until later in March when all local budgets are in. It must approve or reject the CAS request by April 25, at which time the provincial ministry of family and social services will consider the

Teaching Hospital Proposal Progresses

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The frequently-debated proposal for a university-linked medical teaching program in Belleville advanced Friday — toward more discussion.

Now involved are recommendations from Belleville General Hospital's medical staff, which were presented to the hospital board.

The concept — under discussion with BGH and Queen's University for more than a year — is aimed at moving family-medicine students out of a university environment and into the community — the setting for their future practices.

Local physicians — as teachers — and hospital facilities would be an integral part of the program.

In December, a joint BGH-Queen's committee produced a concept evolving the program through 1976-78 until it involved 15 resident students and four local teaching physicians with a co-ordinator.

Any decision was deferred at the request of BGH's medical staff which set up a committee to draft its own proposals.

The committee's report said the propcsal from Kingston envisaged "creation of 8,000 square feet of offices with staffing, furnishing, supply and maintaining."

By contrast to a "large clinic for regimentation of patients" the committee proposed using doctors' offices and BGH facilities "with no renovations or constructions needed."

The co-ordinator appointed for the program would be responsible to BGH's executive director in administration matters and, academically to Queen's.

The committee said its concept did not involve "large capital expenditures", new techniques "unfamiliar to our famly practitioners" and has the support of BGH's medical staff.

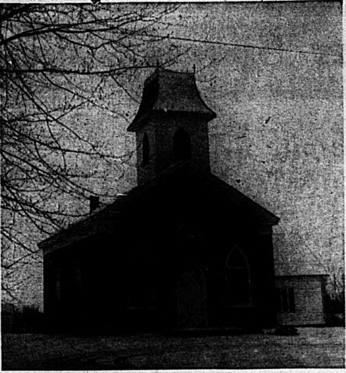
However, the stand is not a fixed position for the future and does not preclude creation of a single teaching unit later.

The committee said when Queen's establishes an "effective" family-practice teaching unit at Kingston, and need for a second project is proved, "negotiations can be reopened."

Ald. Ben Corke, the board's financial chairman and member of the joint hospital - university committee, said the group will meet again March 12.

He indicated no fixed positions had yet been arrived at and it involves "a very large subject."

"I think it's fair to say that the matter is in a state of flux — or whatever better word I can use," he told the board.



125 Years Old

Rednersville United Church became 125 years old February 17. The church, originally Wesleyan Methodist Church, held its dedication service February 17, 1850. Church members reduced the cost of the structure from 400 pounds to 300 pounds by providing the contractor with limestone from the area. It became Rednersville United Church with church union in 1925.

Toronto VON Budget Cut Not Belleville Concern

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff reporter

A January decision by the United Community Fund of Greater Toronto to cut almost $300,000 from this year's grant to the metropolitan Toronto branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses (VON) should not set a precedent across the province, says John Wiggett, president of VON Quinte branch.

Following the Quinte branch's annual meeting at Sun Luck Gardens Friday, Mr. Wiggett explained the small yearly allocation from United Community Services in Belleville to the VON branch here would not constitute a reason for a grant cut.

"We get $16,000 from a budget of about $360,000," he said. "We get less than five per cent . . ."

And if this source of funds was strangled, it would not cause a financial hardship, pointed out Mr. Wiggett. "Even if it did, it's only five per cent," he commented.

Mr. Wiggett said he understood the tenor of a recent message to the Belleville UCS annual meeting by Reuben Baetz, executive director of the Canadian Council on Social Development, and member of the Ontario Economic Council.

Mr. Baetz had suggested, "any agency providing an essential service should be entirely funded by the provincial government."

"I think there's an increasing trend to require the agency (UCS) to be more efficient in its operation . . . and not wasting money," noted Mr. Wiggdtt.

However he emphasized although the VON "isn't the only agency" involved in home care, that money is not wasted as it alleviates the problem of overcrowded hospitals by the chronically ill.

Grant Harrison, branch past president, said UCS here did not follow Toronto's lead in slashing the 1975 VON grant. "We got close to what we had asked for," he said.

Efficiency VON Objective for '75

Main objectives for the Quinte branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses (VON) in 1975 will be to make its operation more efficient now that its expansion is completed, says John Wiggett, branch president.

In his president's report to the branch annual meeting Friday at Sun Luck Gardens before almost 100 people, Mr. Wiggett noted, "I believe we have finally reached the end of our geographical expansion."

"Our main objectives in 1975 will be to consolidate and make our operation as efficient as we can," he said.

Mr. Wiggett said the branch should "strengthen the link between board members and our nurses so that each knows more about the other's function."

In addition, he pointed out the VON "must look seriously at our administrative arrangements including our organization structure and the location of our main office which is totally inadequate to cope with our expanded operation."

However, Mr. Wiggett said the VON is grateful to the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, "who have provided us with rent-free accommodation for the past 30 years".

Mailbox Fire Singes Letters

Police and fire officials are investigating an apparent deliberately-set fire in a mailbox on Bridge St. W. at Bill and Erma's Grocery.

Firefighters were called at 9:13 p.m. to the fire which, a post office spokesman said today only partially - burnt about six letters.

Wiggett Remains President of VON

John Wiggett, of RR1, Belleville, was re-elected president of the Quinte branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses at its annual meeting Friday at Sun Luck Gardens.

The remainder of the executive is composed of Rex Hunter, 13 Coulter Cresc., Trenton, first vice-president; Albert Piroth, 44 Main ST. W., Picton, second vice-president; Dorothy Flack, 10 Chelford Cresc., Belleville, secretary and Gerry Silverthorn, RR2, Consecon, treasurer.

Other Belleville representatives of the VON board of management which includes the executive, are Ruth Gaw, 238 Foster Ave., Grant Harrison (past-president; 11 Lesley Dr., John Miller, 214 John St., and Jean Woods, 118 Queen St.

Hastings County representatives are Jared Campbbell, RR2, Bancroft and Sylvia Perritt, 107 Edward St. Stirling.

Representing Northumberland County are Willamine Carroll of Campbellford, John Carter, Port Hope, J. D. Kinney, Carrying Place and Kathleen Marshall, Port Hope.

In Trenton, the other representatives are Carol Hamilton, 228 McGill St. and Val Pasula, 11 Westmount Court.

Medical advisers are Dr. George Pearce, 208 Dundas St. E., Belleville, Dr. Sally Sarles, 109 Main St., Picton and Dr. Dan Murphy 30 King St. Trenton.

Appointed as auditors for 1975 were George A. Welch and Co, 173 Church St., Belleville.

BGH Endowment Fund Helpful

Money can grow on you.

Two years ago Belleville General Hospital received a $3,000,000 bequest by a wealthy former Bellevillian — Charlotte Sills.

It since earned $452,928 in interest, Ben Corke, city councillor and hospital board finance chairman told fellow BGH governors Friday.

The total endowment set aside $1-million to be specifically spent on a convalescent home. The other $2-million was free for spending on general hospital needs.

To date this has helped fund nearly $600,000 in improvements — including property purchases for a new parking lot, reconstruction in the oldest hospital wing and new elevators.

Balance of the total estate to date: $2,851,700.

Doctors' Survey Short on Facts

There's still no answer to a problem that's been baffling Belleville General Hospital's administration for months:

Just how many — and what kind — of doctors are needed on the staff of an institution serving a community that has been drawing steady interest from new practitioners.

Dr. R. M. Anderson, BGH medical director — who has been asking guidelines from national and provincial medical authorities— told the hospital board Friday no one yet has produced suggestons.

Consultations in the past month ranged from the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada to the Ontario Medical Association, said Dr. Anderson.

"I came up dry. There's no information to be had," the medical director told the board.

However, he held out one possible future source: The Boone Committee of Ontario's Council of Faculties of Medicine.

The committee, said Dr. Anderson, has 22 sub - groups at work on medical issues and its total report may be ready by late June.

More physicians, particularly specialists, may heighten demand for medical services. This in turn puts pressure on hospital facilities.

BGH has 70 district doctors with active staff accreditation and 20 with associate status.

Thief Robs Milk Outlet

An unknown knife-wielding youth was forced to drop his loot Friday, during a chase after a holdup at Mac's Milk Ltd. 180 North Front St.

A city police spokesman said the youth entered the store at 7:40 p.m. and robbed Mrs. Carol Keller, wife of the manager of $147.

After leaving the store, the youth, whose description was not released, was chased by Greg Bowler of 251C Pine St., an employee of Vito's Pizzeria next door, who was joined by an unidentified youth.

Police said the two chased the thief into a wooded area west of North Front St. and north of College St. It was then the thief dropped a paper bag with the money.

All the money was recovered in the bag, said police.

The robbery follows a Thursday holdup in Trenton where a man brandishing a knife stole $80 from Becker's Milk Store.

New Posting For Soutter

A one-time Belleville man has received a new posting with Ontario's health ministry.

Donald Soutter, a former executive assistant to Health Minister Frank Miller has been named the ministry's area planning co-ordinator in Eastern Ontario Belleville General Hospital board was told Friday by Phillip Rickard, its executive director.

Mr. Soutter who was managing editor of The Intelligencer before joining the ministry, then under Dr. Richard Potter, MPP Quinte, succeeds Claude Halpin to the area post.

Animal Control Council Topic

City council Monday will again debate the issue of animal control.

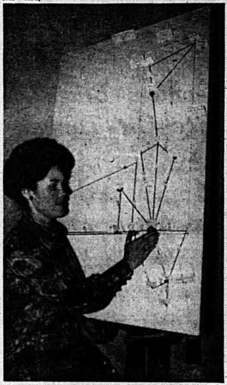
On council's agenda is a recommendation to construct an animal pound and contract out its operation and the job of animal warden.

The move follows debates between council and Ontario Humane Society officials in which a renewed animal-control contract has been an issue.

The OHS opened a large regional shelter on Avonlough Rd. some years ago and began operations with a number of surrounding municipalities However, these contracts have gradually been dropped.

Also on Monday's council schedule are bylaws formally authorizing new work contracts recently reached with firefighters and city hall staff.

There also is objection from the Quinte Home Builders Association requesting a meeting with council on the proposed property standards bylaw.



Service Expands

When Valerie Truax began her duties as district director for the Quinte branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses (VON) in 1970, the scope of VON service covered only Belleville and Trenton. But in five years, its coverage has expanded to include all of Hastings, Northumberland and Prince Edward counties. Miss Truax outlines the growth here with a map she devised prior to Friday's VON annual meeting.

Realtors to Ottawa

Officials of the Quinte and District Real Estate Association will join colleagues from across the province at a conference in Ottawa starting this weekend.

The group will be headed by board president Phil Bennett, and vice-president Gord Roblin to participate in the annual convention of the Ontario Real Estate Association.

Preliminary policy sessions starting Saturday will include voting for executive officers of the provincial association.

The conference goes into full session from next Monday to Wednesday.

CJNH Night in Bancroft

Official opening ceremonies for Radio Station CJHN will be held at North Hastings Secondary School.

The station, with its own transmitter here and microwave relay with Radio Station CJBQ in Belleville, will reach listeners in a region where local broadcast reception has always presented difficulties. The region's rich mineral deposits are among major reasons for interference with electronic signals.

There will be specific local programming in the morning and at night. Community participation in the organization is to be produced by the North Hastings Radio Committee.

Ford to Become ANAF Member

R. G. Burns, and J. C. Lundberg leave Belleville Sunday for Washington, DC, to attend the annual meeting of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans, U.S. Chapter.

Sixteen new members will be inducted into the association. Among them will be Gerald R. Ford, President of the United States.

Mr. Lundberg, program coordinator of the ANAF Youth program, will be inviting two boys from the state of Maryland to be their guests at their annual Youth Training Program to be held at RMC June 15 to 21, this year.

Mr. Burns and Lundberg will also be attending the midwinter conference of the American Legion as their guests.

ANAF Dominion President Gordon R. Thomson, Calgary, will also attend the conference.

Snowmobiles Race Sunday

STIRLING — Snowmobilers will be trying to prove they are all hares and not tortoises at the drag races in Stirling Sunday afternoon.

The event is to raise funds for a new Stirling district arena. Registrations will be accepted from 9 to noon at the fairgrounds. Races start at 1 p.m.

Entry fees for race drivers are $4 per class. Half the money goes for prizes and the other goes toward the new arena.

After the snowmobile drag races a car demolition will take place, anybody can have a hand at wrecking the auto using a sledge-hammer, for a small donation of course.

Homecoming Kickoff

A torchlight parade whooped its way through Stirling Friday evening led by many district fire engines with sirens screaming. These two clowns scared innocent bystanders with a hand-held cannon. Running snowball fights were waged between paraders and the crowd. Sunday afternoon snowmobile drag races will be held at the fairgrounds.

Canadian Teams In Good Shape

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If the World Hockey Association playoffs started next week, based on today's standings, they would have three Canadian teams, including Edmonton Oilers who improved their position with a 6-2 win over Baltimore Blades Friday night.

The Oilers, if they maintain their present position, would qualify for the playoffs as one of the so-called wild-card teams. They were helped in their cause Friday by Winnipeg Jets who defeated San Diego Mariners 4-3 in the only other WHA game scheduled.

Quebec Nordiques, New England Whalers and Houston Aeros, the three division leaders, would win playoff berths based on today's standings. So would Toronto Toros, Cleveland Crusaders and Phoenix Roadrunners, who all are second-place teams.

Of the remaining eight teamn, the two with the most points would win the wild-card berths and that's where Edmonton and Minnesota Fightings Saints would qualify. Minnesota, third in the Western Division with 64 points, and Edmonton, third in the Canadian section with 61, are the top two at the moment.

But most teams have about 18 games remaining and there are still at least three teams within easy striking distance of those wild-card berths should the Saints and Oilers falter.

San Diego, fourth in the West with 60 points; Vancouver Blazers, fourth in the Canadian Division with 58, and Winnipeg, fifth with 57, are still in the running.

Rookie Mike Rogers and former National Hockey League veteran Bruce MacGregor each scored two goals to lead Edmonton against Baltimore.

Goalie Ken Brown, replacing veteran Jacques Plante who is sidelined with a hand injury, made 29 saves in the Oilers nets, including 11 in each of the first two periods.

Rogers picked up his 27th and 28th goals of the season while MacGregor had his first two-goal game of the season and ran his season total to 16.

At Winnipeg, Bobby Hull and Howie Young each scored twice for the Jets. Hull's second goal of the night and 55th of the season broke a 3-3 tie with less than two minutes remaining in the game.

Wayne Rivers scored his 44th goal of the season for San Diego and Brian Morenz and Rick Sentes added the other scores.

Toronto defeated defending champions University of Waterloo Warriors, while York rallied from an early deficit to defeat University of Western Ontario Mustangs.

Western grabbed an early 2-0 lead on goals by Phil Howard and David Roy, but York struck back for five consecutive goals and led 5-3 after two periods. The Yeomen then clinched the game with four unanswered goals in the final 20 minutes.

Gary Coons scored the final goal for Western which had a 47-37 edge in shots.

In the other game, Toronto led 3-1 after the first period and clinched the game with four unanswered goals in the second.

Larry Hopkins and Gord Davies each scored twice for Toronto with Dave Rooke, Howie Hampton, Bill Fifield, Ron Harris and Al Milnes getting the others.

South Way Behind

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Directors of the American Hockey League might do well to reconsider this year's divisional alignment when they draw up plans for the 1975-76 schedule.

A look at the league standings after Friday's games showed all teams in the Southern Division with a losing record. Southern Division-leading Virginia Red Wings, who beat Richmond 8-2 Friday night, have 57 points on 23 wins 26 losses and 11 ties.

In comparision, the last-place team in the Northern Division, New Haven Nighthawks, also has 57 points. The Nighthawks outlasted last-place Syracuse Eagles of the Southern Division 7-5 in another AHL game Friday night.

In other games, Rochester Americans pulled ahead of Nova Scotia Voyageurs for second place in the Northern Division with a 5-1 win over division-leading Providence Reds, and Springfield Kings downed Hershey Bears 5-2.

At Norfolk, Va., Dennis Johnson scored four goals to lead Virginia past the Robins.

Dennis Polonich added two goals for the Red Wings and John Paddock scored both Richmond goals. The victory moved Virginia five points ahead of Richmond for the division lead.

Jimmy Nichols, acquired on loan from the National Hockey League's Buffalo Sabres, scored two goals, including the game winner, to pace Springfield to victory.

Phil Hoene and Jimmy Peters scored other goals for Springfield, while Tim 'Regan scored a first-period goal for Hershey.

Gordon's Hat Trick Gives Terriers Win

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Colin Gordon scored three goals to lead Orillia Terriers to a 7-4 victory over Brantford Foresters i nthe only Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game Friday.

Brantford, playing with a reduced roster, led 2-1 after the first period but five unanswered goals in the second period put Orillia ahead.

The Terriers outshot Foresters 38-36. Fighting majors to Cochrane and Orillia's Bob Clayton were among 42 minutes in penalties.

Orillia's playing coach Henry Monteith returned to the ice after a seven-week absence because of illness.

The Terriers need one point to clinch a playoff spot. Both their games remaining in the regular season are with first-place Barrie Flyers next Friday and Saturday.

Brantford arrived for the game with 10 players and one goaltender. Several players are out with injuries.

Marlboros Win 14-0

St. Kits Play Despite Threats

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Amid threats of suspension and forfeiture of a $5,000 bond, St. Catharines Black Hawks took to the ice Friday in Brantford with their sweaters on backwards and their first-string goaltender running the club.

Playing under protest, the Black Hawks appeared only to be going through the motions in dropping a 14-0 decision to Toronto Marlboros in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A play.

In other games, London Knights earned a come-from-behind 6-6 tie with Hamilton Fincups, Kitchener Rangers downed Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 5-2, Kingston Canadians defeated Oshawa Generals 4-2 and Sudbury Wolves whipped Ottawa '67s 6-2.

The start of the St. Catharines-Toronto game was delayed 37 minutes while series commissioner Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz talked to Hawk owner Leighton (Hap) Emms, who earlier had threatened not to ice his team if Mark Napier was in the Toronto lineup.

Napier recently signed a professional contract with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association, effective Sept. 1, and Emms contended he was ineligible for OHA play.

Schmalz threatened Emms with suspension and forfeiture of the $5,000 bond he put up at the start of the season with all other franchise owners.

Napier was cleared for play by Schmalz and Emms then lodged his protest.

Although the 18-year-old Marlboro right winger did not score, he collected three first-period assists. Bruce Boudreau scored four goals for the winners with John Tonelli getting three. Craig Crawford added two while Bernie Johnston, Lynn Jorgenson, Bill Wells, Mike Kitchen and Ron Wilson got the others.

Toronto outshot the Black Hawks 63-17, with goaltender Steve Bosco picking up his first shutout of the season. The Marlboros took period leads of 6-0 and 12-0.

Schmalz met with Napier, his lawyer and agent prior to the game and demanded written affidavits that said Napier has received no money from his professional contract.

Napier's signing breaches an agreement between the WHA and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Assocation over the signing of junior players under 20.

Paul Emms, son of the owner and coach of the Hawks, refused to go behind the bench. Netminder Bill Cheropita, out with a groin injury, ran the club.

When the Hawks finally appeared on the ice, their sweaters were on backwards, except for No. 14, Ken Martyn. Napier wears the same number for the Marlboros.

"I think he (Hap Emms) gave his team a black eye," Frank Bonello, general manager of the Marlboros, said following the game. "I don't think there's a place in hockey for a guy like that."

The Black Hawks frequently iced the puck in an apparent effort to delay the game. However, the officials refused to call the infraction on many occasions.

Schmalz said his main concern is whether Napier has received any money from the Toros. "I want to be absolutely sure that we are not breaking the Ontario sales tax regulations."

Amateur sport in Ontario is exempt from paying 10 per cent on its admissions.

The Black Hawks dramatized their protest by playing the game with their sweaters worn backwards except for No. 14, Ken Martyn. Napier wears No. 14 for the Marlboros.

Paul Emms, coach of the Hawks, refused to go behind the bench. Hawk goaltender Bill Cheropita, who was not dressed because of a groin injury, substituted as coach.

St. Catharines deliberately iced the puck nine times in the early minutes to delay the game. But the officials would not call the infractions.

Fincups 6 Knights 6

London erased a three-goal deficit to gain the tie which extended its unbeaten streak to four games. Hamilton now has gone 11 games without a loss.

Vern Stenlund, Bill Beauchamp and Ron Zanussi each scored twice for London with Dennis Maruk, the Knights' top scorer, collecting four assists.

Kitchener scored three unanswered goals in the final period for the victory. Dan Djakalovic scored twice for the Rangers with Joe Fortunato, Ken Campbell and Bob Schnurr getting the others—Schnurr's into an empty net.

Canadians 4 Generals 2

Larry Murphy, Brad Rhiness, Ken Linseman and Mark Suzor got goals for Kingston which led 3-0 after the first period and 3-1 entering the final 20 minutes.

Wolves 6 '67s 2

Bruce Baker got both goals for Ottawa, outshot 33-26 before 7,500 home fans.

Sudbury took 17 of 30 penalties assessed. A total of 19 minors, seven majors, two misconducts, a game misconduct and a match penalty were called.

Play resumes tonight with the Greyhounds in Brantford to play the Marlboros and Oshawa entertaining the Knights. Sunday games have Peterborough Petes in Kitchener, the Greyhounds at St. Catharines, Toronto playing host to the Knights, Ottawa in Kingston and Oshawa entertaining the Wolves.

Fitness Pays Off

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Lee Tobin decided a long time ago that staying young was more a matter of keeping fit than age.

The young Montreal grandmother put her preaching to work Friday in a performance that won Quebec its first -ever Canadian women's curling championship.

Her crisp play-calling and shotmaking shocked Western Canada supremacy in a sudden-death playoff with Saskatchewan, beating Marj Mitchell's Regina foursome 7-5 and ending the Prairie province's dominance of the title that began in 1969.

"I've got the girls to thank for this," said Mrs. Tobin after her last-rock takeout of the counting Saskatchewan rock in the 10th end nailed down the victory. "When I got discouraged during the season they were always there to pick me up."

The Quebec win was also the first by an Eastern Canada entry since a rink skipped by Moncton's Mabel Deware turned the trick in 1962.

The sudden-death playoff Friday morning developed when both rinks finished the nine-draw, round-robin championship in a first-place tie with 7-2 won-loss records

The Montreal rink rallied to take the lead in the sixth end when Miss Mitchell, a 26-year-old social worker, attempted a last-rock draw to a Quebec stone sitting on the outside of the 12-foot ring.

The delivery came up narrow and her stone nudged the Quebec rock farther into the house to steal the end.

Mrs. Tobin took command in the eighth, counting two for a 7-5 lead and hung on despite a token effort by the young Saskatchewan skip to win on tactics.

Miss Mitchell intentionally blanked the ninth end to retain last rock in the final end.

In her own efforts to keep the house clean and hold the Saskatchewan rink to a single, Mrs. Tobin found two of her own rocks facing the Western Canada rink with only skip rocks remaining.

She and Miss Mitchell exchanged take-out shots, then, with Saskatchewan holding shot rock, Miss Tobin's final shot punched it out of the house and ensured a Quebec win.

Miss Mitchell had been quietly confident throughout the week that her rink would come up with the big shots when they were needed. They did, but it wasn't good enough to offset the superb shooting of Mrs. Tobin and her third, Marilyn McNeil.

"They were really shooting good, real tough" admitted the Saskatchewan leader. "I bet Lee and Marilyn got 80 to 85 per cent of their shots out there today. I was closer to 75. That's usually good enough to win."

Kerr Sets Pair

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Local talent provided four of eight records established Friday at the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union (CIAU) swimming and diving championships

Andrea Kerr of Lakehead University set two records by winning the women's 100-yard butterfly and the 50-yard freestyle.

Her time for the butterfly was 1:00.5, three-tenth of a second faster than the old record and nearly a second ahead of second-place Sara MacFayden of the University of British Columbia.

Miss Kerr's freestyle time was 0:25.099, also about three-tenth of a second ahead of the previous record of 0:25.4. Paula Stewart of the University of Calgary was second with a time of 0:25.112.

Kerri Skilling, winner of the women's 200-yard freestyle with a record-setting time of 1:54.1, also has three gold medals. Her time was 4.8 seconds faster than the previous record, and 9.4 seconds faster than second-place Jeannie Jensen of UBC.

Diane King of the University of Alberta won the 100-yard breast stroke in 1:10.2, breaking the old record of 1:11.88. Pat Kitchen of the University of Alberta, who placed second, also beat the old record with her time of 1:11.5.

Winning the 200-yard breast stroke was Wanda DePape of Lakehead University with a record time of 2:12.9, 3.6 seconds faster than the old mark.

She also won the 400-yard individual medley with her time of 4:44.6, 8.9 seconds faster than University of Toronto's Jane Wright.

In men's action, Juri Daniel of the University of Toronto, Paul Hughes of UBC and Boo Kasting of McGill each established records.

Daniel swam the 100-yard breast stroke in 1:01.0, compared with the old mark of 1:01.69, and Roman Baumann of Laurentian University finished second in 1:01.9.

Hughes set a new mark in the 200-yard backstroke with his time of 1:58.2. He was 1.2 seconds faster than the old record.

Kasting finished the 100-yard butterfly event in 51.2 seconds, four-tenth of a second faster than the previous mark.

Chicago Edges Atlanta 4-3

ATLANTA (AP) — Chicago's Darcy Rota said he didn't care who got the credit for the winning goal Friday night that lifted the Black Hawks to a 4-3 comeback victory over Atlanta Flames. "Their defenceman actually put it in," he said.

Rota was initially credited with the goal at 14:23 of the third period, but the official scorer changed his mind after the National Hockey League game ended, giving it to Jim Pappin instead.

"Anyway, we won," Rota said of the triumph that moved the Hawks into first place in the Smythe Division, one point ahead of the idle Vancouver Canucks. He said the shot actually was made by Atlanta's Ed Kea with help from Pappin.

It was the only NHL game, an uphill struggle for the Hawks, who trailed 3-0 after the opening period.

"Shots don't mean a thing; it's chances that count," said Chicago coach Billy Reay. "I thought we had some excellent chances in the first period, but didn't take advantage of them and it got us in a hole."

The Hawks fell behind quickly when Eric Vail slapped a shot past goalie Tony Esposito after 31 seconds had elapsed, the quickest opening goal in Flames history. Vail added another goal, his 28th of the season, after Hilliard Graves accounted for the other Atlanta score.

Reay said his club got a big lift in the early stages of the second period when Dick Redmond scored a power-play goal.

"That goal really sparked us because if they had gotten a fourth goal then, we'd really be in trouble," Reay said.

After that it was all Chicago. Ivan Boldirev scored twice in the next seven minutes to tie the score.

The defeat dampened the Flames' playoff hopes, leaving them four points behind New York Islanders in the battle for third place in the Patrick Division.

Esposito, Orr Up To Same Old Tricks

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins are having their problems in the National Hockey League race, but super stars Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr are up to their same old tricks—battling for the scoring championship.

"It's a friendly rivalry between two fine, unselfish players," managing director Harry Sinden said as he sat back and watched his two stars match productions of one goal and two assists recently.

For the last three decades, some NHL team has come up with two great scorers at the same time. In the 1950s, Detroit Red Wings had the top punch with Gordie Howe and Ted Lindsay winning a total of six scoring championship. In the 1960s, it was Chicago Black Hawks with Stan Mikita capturing the scoring title four times and Bobby Hull three.

Now, in the 1970s, the Bruins have Esposito and Orr shattering records with their scoring.

"Sure, Howe and Lindsay were great, and so were Hull and Mikita," Sinden said. "However, no two players in any sport have been such a dominating force as Orr and Esposito. And, don't forget, Orr is a defenceman, the others are all forwards."

After playing in all of Boston's first 63 games, Esposito and Orr were separated by just one point. Esposito had 110 points on 54 goals and 56 points despite a recent slump which netted him just one goal and one assist in eight games. Orr had 109 points with 36 goals and 73 assists.

"It's my job to score goals, it's expected of me," Esposito said. "But goals don't mean a thing if you don't win. My kick is in winning, not scoring."

Orr is playing his ninth NHL season although he won't be 27 until March 20.

Esposito, acquired from Chicago in a trade after the 1967 season, became a 35-goal scorer in his first year in Boston. He has gone on to become one of the most prolific scorers in NHL history, although just turned 32.

He has won the scoring championship in five of the last six seasons. The only break was in 1970, when he was edged out by Orr.

"Without a doubt, Esposito is the greatest scorer who ever played hockey," Sinden said.

"Big and durable, he does a lot more than just score, too. He takes a regular turn, centres on the power play, kills penalties, everything. He's just an all - around great hockey player."

Orr has won more NHL awards—14—than any other player in history.

"It's hard to come up with new adjectives to describe him," Sinden said. "He's just fantastic. You think you've seen him do everything possible on skates and then he comes up with something even more spectacular.

"He's a tremendous leader and, like Esposito, not greedy or self-centred.

The only thing that forward Tony Mussio (20) of the Kingston St. Lawrence Blues can do is stand by and watch as Loyalalist Lancer Bill Kyle, after putting a move on the defence, goes up for two of his 10 points with Lancers' Jim Sutton (right) on the spot for a rebound. Loyalist lost the first game of the Eastern Ontario Colleges Athletic Association playoffs 99-67 to the Blues.

Lancers Bow Out, But Not Without Fight

By MARK BRETT

If the Kingston St. Lawrence Blues basketball suqad of the Ontario Colleges Athletic Association thought the Loyalist Lancers were going to be a push over in the opening game of the playoffs they were sorely mistaken.

Despite losing the contest 99-67 the short staffed Lancers came up with an all round good game, one the Lancers' coach, Rob Stinson felt "they had nothing to be ashamed of."

Loyalist had an uphill battle right from the opening jump and the closest they managed to come against the first place finishers was within two points.

The locals dressed eight players for the game as compared to the Blues 11. Just past the midway mark of the second and final half the losers had lost their two top scorers: Jim Sutton and Peter Scott who up until that point had scored 14 and 15 points, tops on the team.

As expected Loyalist received most of their trouble from the two big guys on the St. Lawrence club. Mick Dowling and Kim McKenzie, who throughout the season averaged 25.5 and 23 points a game respectively.

Dowling, in spite of pressure assigned to him by the Loyalist coach was able to net 22 points while teammate MacKenzie was able to elude the opposition to the tune of 26 points.

Another big scorer, and one the Lancers didn't count on was six-foot-two, 225 lb. forward by the name of Tino Mussio.

Mussio counted 20 points for the winners, half of those points were on foul shots of which he had 20 chances at the basket and was good for half of them.

The favorite play of the management of the Blues was to send Mussio charging in at the basket knocking down every thing in his path and much to the delight of the home town club was continuously awarded four shots.

The height problem the Loyalist club had was partly due to the fact that six-foot-three centre Dave Culmer was in North Bay racing snowmobiles leaving an obvious gap in the robounding department.

The winners jumped into an early 10-3 lead but when the Lancers settled down and were able to mount a sustained attack fought back to a 20-17 score narrowing the Blues offence and with six minutes remaining in the first half were down by only two points.

Things started to go down hill all the way for the Lancers as poor shooting and eratic passing coupled with the fact that "we just ran out of horses" left the Loyalist team at the bottom of a 50-32 score at half time.

In the remaining half the losers fought back to within 12 points just the time when Sutton and Scott were forced to leave the game as the result of fouls.

The Kingston team looked impressive with the number of running plays and tight defence they showed.

"Kingston had the depth on the bench, something that we didn't have," explained Stinson after the contest.

Kingston coach Scot Cooke felt "Belleville played a good game, we always seem to have trouble with them."

The winning coach had no preference as to which team (Algonquin or Durham) he wished to play noting that "both teams play the same style."

Other scorers in the Loyalist effort were Brian Calnan with 11, Bill Kyle and Larry Green each with 10 points each.

Rejects Have 'Em Rolling in Picton

By RICK NELSON

PICTON — Students at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute had a good laugh Thursday, when a professional comedy basketball team, the Hollywood Rejects, took on the combination of the Senior Boys' Basketball team along with some of the men staff.

The Hollywood Rejects have been together for three years, playing over 325 games, winning 99 per cent of them and consist of five guys that like to make people laugh. The team members are Terry Dudley and Sam Mathis from Hollywood, Leon Crokett from Atlanta, Georgia, Doug Herts of Los Angeles, and Doug Finney from Oshawa, Ont.

The group is nearing the end of a four month tour of the United States and Canada with a long vacation to look forward to.

The comedy team tried to play serious during the first part of the game against PECI asked the comedy group they went wild. One of the guys from the Rejects played dead on occasion, another got a little sexy, while another a bit ill-tempered. One of the PECI players, Kent Quinn, got a little drenched when he was the innocent victim of a water fight between the Rejects. Jim King, the referee, almost lost his pants when the Rejects ganged up on him.

The Rejects head for Brantford today and for Oxbridge Friday night.

Joe Scott, Physcial Education Department Head at PECI asked the comedy gr oup if they would return next year. The group happily accepted.

Help us Celebrate the 1976 Olympics

Artists-Athletes Olympic Poster Project

In both the ancient and modern Olympic movement, the arts have played an important role. The Artists-Athletes Coalition for the Cultural Celebration of the 1976 Olympics wants to ensure that Canada continues this important tradition.

We intend to produce a set of 12 posters featuring the work of Canadian artists. These posters will be distributed to schools, art galleries, Olympic participants and retail outlets across Canada.

As part of the project, we are conducting a national competition, open to Canadian artists working in any visual medium. Twelve semi-finalists will be selected from the competition and given awards of $500. Their works will be entered into the final selection process, along with the works by 24 artists commissioned by the jury. From these 36 works, the 12 posters to be printed will be selected. Finalists will be awarded an additional $1000.

The commission portion of this project is funded by the Canada Council and the Ontario Arts Council.

Competition Deadline: Entry forms April 4, 1975, Entries April 18, 1975.

Sue Morton and Shirley Gulliver discuss game plans while suiting up for one of their teams Quinte Women's Hockey League games. Both Morton and Gulliver are members of the Belleville Mel Barriage club. The women enjoy the rough-and-ready brand of hockey that has developed in their league this season. The sport of hockey is a popular one among women of the area and next year the league hopes to add another team.

Women Muscle In On Male Sports Scene

By MIKE BRADSHAW

Sports Staff

Move over men!

1975 is officially the year of the woman and in the world of sports the woman is making leaps and bounds.

Billy Jean King has established female equality on the tennis courts and is now working on giving the female equal status in other major professional sports.

Jo-Anne Carner proved the woman is capable of playing golf on a level that once belonged to only the male of the Professional Golf Association.

Professional sports isn't the only place the females are forging ahead. Recently girls were granted the right to play Little League Baseball with boys in the United States if they were good enough to make a team.

To find cases of women's progressing stand in the once male world of sports one needn't go too far from home.

Locally the female is taking on everything from softball to hockey. Sports in the Belleville area are becoming more and more bi-sexual with every passing season.

For instance, the Belleville and District Ladies Softball League expanded to six teams last season and is going to eight this season. The Quinte Women's Hockey League went from three to four teams this season and next season they're expecting another team to join.

Then there's the Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association. Supposedly a boys league, there were approximately 20 girls registered in the association last season and this season the league is going out of its way to let girls know they're welcome to join the sport.

Boys minor softball had 390 registered to play the sport in 1974. Next on the list of numbers registered was the Belleville Minor Baseball Association and third on the minor sports list was the Girls Belleville Minor Softball Association. They had about 215 girls ranging to 16 years of age and the league has only been in operation six years. Boys softball and baseball have been around longer than some can remember. Girls softball had more registered players than five other summer sports — all of which are suggested boys pastimes.

"People don't give women's sports a fair chance," said Donna Lucas, secretary of the Belleville and District Ladies Softball League, "they hear the word women and they just shrug it off."

"We play a pretty competitive brand of ball in our league," she said, "we go out there and work our butts off, but people don't think we're serious."

Six years ago the women of the province broke away from the Ontario Amateur Softball Association and formed their own organization — known as the Provincial Women's Softball Union. Two years ago Belleville entered a team in the provincial playoffs and took a championship. Last year a local team went all the way to the final series before bowing out.

"I enjoy playing competitive ball," said Lucas, "the tougher the better."

"On a comparative basis I'd say our games are just as competitive as some of the ones in the Quinte Fastball League," she added.

But what of skills and abilities?

Lucas in convinced that there are women in the Belleville and District Ladies League that can easily compare with men in the Quinte Fastball League.

"In fact," she said, "we've got women in this league that could make some of the men's teams (in the Quinte Fastball League)."

Women aren't just able to handle certain types of sports. They're out to make their mark in the physical sports. — The tough body contact sports like hockey and lacrosse.

Joyce McFarlane, president of the Quinte Women's Hockey League, says, "We have some pretty darn good hockey games throughout the schedule."

"The girls don't go out with the idea of having a skate and a few laughs," she said, "they go out to play hockey."

"When we (Belleville) play Stirling the game is fast, the girls play positional hockey and there are quite a few good, hard checks handed out," she added.

Both Lucas and McFarlane contend that the females of their respective sports are just as knowledgeable of the game they play as most men in the same sport.

The Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association, headed by Don Runciman, is currently involved in a pre-registration program to entice more youngsters into trying the sport.

The organization is placing posters in elementary schools to let youngsters know about the sport. The posters are aimed at the interests of girls as well as boys.

"We had about 20 girls spread throughout the league last year," said Runciman, "there weren't any unforeseen problems either."

"The boys were a little apprehensive about hitting them at first," he said, "but when they found out they were being belted harder by the girls than they were by most of the boys they soon started hitting back."

Runciman says the girls fit right in. "They may not be quite as skilled at lacrosse as the boys, but they sure know exactly what they're doing when they get on the floor."

Last fall when the Belleville Squash Club opened the men were to have a change room, a sauna bath a whirlpool bath and a small workout room for weightlifting and exercise. Yes, it was to be an all-male establishment.

The men's wives kicked up such a stink though, that the workout room was converted into a women's change room and the club was opened to the fairer sex. The women pay a reduced rate though, because they don't have the use of the sauna or the whirlpool (both are part of the men's change room and the club feels equality can only go so far).

This basketball season saw the return of the Quinte Women's Basketball League. After an absence of a couple of years, the league made a comeback this year and has about 50 women spread over four teams.

But things aren't just happening to females in sport when they reach womanhood. The Girls Belleville Minor Softball League, as was mentioned, has climbed to new heights of popularity.

And Doreen Lucas, the president of the league says, "the girls are gaining in ability and skill every year they play."

Doreen not only goes to most girls games, but also attends her sons softball games. She says the girls games are usually just as competitive as the boys games and that "most girls know more about the rules of the game than the boys do."

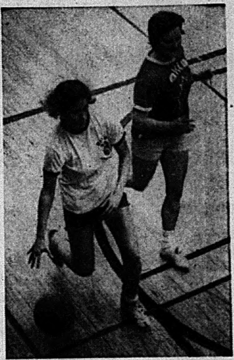
Cliff Belch, director of the city's Recreation and Arena Department, says, "about 70-per-cent of our summer physical programs is female, 8-12 years of age." (Those programs include such sports as tennis, gymnastics and archery).

Doreen Lucas considers the girls in minor softball just as capable as the boys. "We were going to have some exhibition games against some boys teams last season," she said, "but we were afraid if the boys got behind they might start playing dirty."

So what's the reason for the sudden demand for competition by females.

None of those interviewed had an answer. Perhaps it's because the women are now so caught up in this fast-paced, dog-eat-dog world that they need the competition that sports brings. They need to prove that they're the best. Or perhaps since they are so active in this run-around, can't-stop-now world of business, that they need a vent for their everyday anxieties. This is a standing reason for male participation.

Whatever the reasons, you've come a long way baby — or have you?



Ginny Irwin breaks past Joan Watson in a Quinte Women's Basketball League game at Belleville Collegiate. The league once defunct made a comeback this season after an absence of a couple of years on the local sports scene. As in many other areas women are taking a liking to the competition offered by sports like basketball. Ginny is one of the better players in the league. She averages between 15 and 20 points a game

Mets Purchase Kingman

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York Mets needed home-run punch and San Francisco Giants needed money.

Both teams got what they needed Friday when the Mets purchased slugger Dave Kingman from the Giants for an estimated $100,000.

The Giants, who once demanded a Met pitcher for their inconsistent slugger, settled for cash this time because of their problems at the gate. The Giants have been one of the poorest drawing teams in baseball of late.

Kingman had publicly asked to be traded, since he wasn't playing regularly with the Giants. The rangy infielder-outfielder hit .223 in 121 games last season, but connected for 18 home runs and had 55 runs batted in.

His best seasons came in 1972 and 1973, when he hit 29 and 24 home runs, respectively, while playing part-time. Those years included some tape-measure shots indicative of his ferocious power. But he also struck out a lot, indicative of his inconsistency.

It was at this time that the Giants requested southpaw Jon Matlack from the Mets in return for Kingman's services. The Mets offered them pitcher Jerry Koosman, but the Giants turned down the proposed deal.

Elsewhere, Baltimore Orioles signed pitchers Ross Grimsley, Wayne Garland and Doyle Alexander and infielders Doug DeCinces and Taylor Duncan.

Montreal Expos said that left-handed pitcher Dave McNally and outfielder Rich Coggins remain unsigned. Expos general manager Jim Fanning said he has had daily talks with both players who were obtained in a winter trade from Baltimore.

Williams is Difference

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Nate Williams can either shoot you into a game or shoot you out of it."

That description by Kansas City-Omaha coach Phil Johnson referred to the streak-shooting forward who was dealt by the Kings to New Orleans Jazz at the trading deadline Feb. 1.

Friday night, Williams shot down his former team-mates, scoring 11 points in overtime to lead the expansion Jazz to a 114-107 upset of the Kings.

Since acquiring Williams from the Kings in exchange for Ollie Johnson and Rick Adelman, the Jazz have won 10 of 15 games.

Williams wound up with 26 points, while Pete Maravich led the Jazz with 34 before being ejected with his second technical foul in the final minute of regulation play.

Elsewhere in the NBA Friday night, Boston Celtics beat Milwaukee Bucks 107-106, New York Knicks beat Buffalo Braves 114-106, Philadelphia 76ers edged Seattle SuperSonics 112-111, Houston Rockets defeated Chicago Bulls 102-87, Washington Bullets beat Detroit Pistons 106-95, Phoenix Suns defeated Golden State Warriors 102-96 and Los Angeles Lakers beat Cleveland Cavaliers 109-105.

In the American Basketball Association, New York defeated St. Louis 117-110, Memphis edged Denver 109-105, San Antonio defeated Utah 110-100 and San Diego beat Indiana 115-102.

Pearce in Lead

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — "I've always idolized Arnold Palmer," says young Eddie Pearce, leader going into today's third round of the Jackie Gleason golf tournament. "I've tried to pattern my golf game and my life after him."

Pearce and the rejuvenated Palmer, three strokes back, were in a threesome with Hale Irwin today in the third round of the $260,000 tournament.

Pearce, at 22 one of the youngest men on the pro tour, took the second-round lead with an eight-under-par 64 that produced a two-round total of 131, 13 under par.

But the 45-year-old Palmer, playing with all the flair that made him the idol of Pearce and millions of others, produced the most excitement on the 7,128-yard Inverrary Country Club course.

"Arnie's got it going."

The word spread like wildfire through the gallery. And the crowd flocked to his side, happily joining the army of followers that has helped make the muscular man a legend.

He scored a six-under-par 66—his best round in two years—and moved to within three shots of the lead at 134.

"I'm rolling the ball good again now, rolling it real good," said the man whose putting problems have kept him from victory since 1973.

Palmer was third, followed by Irwin and Tom Kite at 135. Irwin had a 66 and Kite shot 67. Jack Nicklaus had a 69 for 136 and was tied with Gene Littler who shot 66.

Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg and Ben Kern of Toronto both missed the cutoff of 144 for the final two rounds. Homenuik shot a 74 for 147 and Kern had a 75 for 149.

Pearce had a brilliant putting effort in recording the best round of his career. He needed only 26 strokes on the greens. He dropped four birdie putts of about 15 feet. He once saved par from 20 feet. He made an eagle three from about 35 feet. He chipped in to save par. And he dominated the par-five holes, playing them five under.

Pyatt Traded

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League announced Friday that they have traded centre Nelson Pyatt to Washington Capitals.

In exchange for Pyatt, previously with the Wings' Virginia farm club in the American Hockey League, Detroit will get Washington's third-round selection in this year's amateur draft.

That's Got to Be You

Wilf Lewis and Bud Gill scrutinize 1941 RAF recruiting film for scenes in which Bud appeared as a RCAF navigator. Program director for Belleville 418 Wing RCAF Association, Wilf Lewis borrowed the wartime film Target for Tonight, from CFB Trenton, film library to show at the 418 Wing general meeting this week. Even Mr. Gill had difficulty recognizing himself; however, as he remarked, that was over 30 years ago.

Urbanization of Agriculture May Produce Needed Food

NORWICH, Vt. (AP) — The "urbanization of agriculture" through the use of domed, solar-heated greenhouses may be one answer to the problem of feeding the world's growing population says a Dartmouth College geographer.

Robert E. Huke has a shed-sized dome, 7½ feet in diameter, at his home in this Vermont village, where he has raised catfish, eggplants and tomatoes. A larger dome, however, would serve more than 100 city families, he said.

"I have in mind the rapid expansion of controlled-environment enclosures — green houses if you like—at the urban fringes, in the suburbs and in the rural non-farm areas."

The need for more intensive food production will become critical as the world population balloons and the acreage devoted to agriculture diminishes, he said.

Huke predicted a decrease in productive farm acreage because of the press of new building, erosion and salinization of cultivated lands and climate changes.

He foresaw a doubling of the world population to 6.4 billion people by 2000, and said today's agricultural techniques could not feed that population even if there were no adverse change in climate.

But Huke predicted there will be such a change in climate. He cited an "alarming rate" of decline in average temperatures in the Northern Hemisphere.

Since 1955 there has been a decrease of about one degree fahrenheit in the average daily temperature and Hukes predicted the average temperature might drop two more degrees in the next 20 years. This would seriously shorten the growing season of some key world grain-producing areas, such as the Canadian prairies and Siberia.

A 12-day decrease in the frost-free growing season in Canada might reduce the wheat-producing acreage by one-third. A study he made in Vermont indicated a decrease of 1.8 degrees fahrenheit in average temperatures would decrease the growing season by 12 or 13 days.

"Wheat production losses in Canada and Siberia alone would be 15 per cent of the present world total," he said.

Faced with a shrinking grain crop, Huke advised conservation in the use of grains in the production of animal protein. That meant raising more fish, because fish were more efficient protein producers than beef and pork.

Fish are also adaptable to small and intensive production facilities such as his solar-heated dome, he said.

He has a pool with seven channel catfish in it now, but said it can hold more than 150 tropical food-producing fish called tilapia.

Huke had eggplant, tomatoes and grapefruit growing in the greenhouse part of his dome until Nov. 15, well after the first Vermont frost at the end of September.

He said he hopes to start his spring growing season as early as March 1, planting soy beans, lettuce and radishes. The soy beans would be used to feed the catfish.

Huke saw other benefits. "The individual contact with living systems brought about in the microworld of the dome farm will help to overcome the psychological rigors of a crowded world and help in a small way to provide improved diets."

Only Police or Women Send Man to Patagonia

LA ESPERANZA, Argentina (AP) — The wind-lashed wastes of Patagonia remain unconquered and the settlers who have squeezed water from stone for generations are more disheartened than ever.

"Without sheep, Patagonia is a desert," said a pioneer's son who loves the bleak, beautiful and barren lands. "And it is getting impossible to raise sheep."

Every new government talks of developing the four provinces of Patagonia, Argentina's far south. But the rural population of Santa Cruz Province is 13,000. In 1947, it was 20,000.

English investors own some of the biggest sheep ranches, among the world's largest. Chileans do the manual labor. Sons of Scots and Basques, in rattling pickups or on horseback, watch the flocks.

As costs rise while wool prices and grass levels drop, sheep ranchers fear the future. It is hardly an attraction for newcomers.

"There are only two reasons for an Argentine to come here from the north," said one rancher watching a lamb roast on an open fire. "Either the police are after him or he has woman trouble."

Patagonia has been settled for nearly a century since Gatling guns and sabres cleaned out the Indians whose footprints in the sand allegedly caused Magellan's sailors to name them "Patagones"—big feet.

Technically, the region is everything south of Argentina's Colorado River, 295,000 square miles, with only 700,000 inhabitants. It is the triangle at the end of South America.

Andean peaks form the border with Chile over breathtaking lakes with glaciers, monstrous trout and rich grazing land. The Atlantic coast, flecked with penguin rookeries and oil smears, is flat.

But the real Patagonia, oldtimers say, is like this little gas stop 2,000 miles from Buenos Aires.

Sand-laden winds, gusting at times to 150 miles an hour, would keep the streets clean if there were any. Young trees must be roped to fences like pet dogs. Cars bear metal mesh across the windshilds to guard against rocks from the dirt highways.

The tiny bar at the Argentine Automobile Club station sees a steady trickle of rumpled shepherds who ride for hours for a beer. In winter, snows sometimes halt the supply of gas—and beer.

Perhaps half of Patagonia's populatios is Chilean.

"I've been here since 1914," said Chilean Juan Aravena, now 72 and still herding stock. "It was a lot different then, but I don't know which is better. Now wages are high but life is dear."

Aravena is lucky to be alive. His father and brother were among hundreds shot dead in 1972 by the army, putting down a peasants' revolt that was agitated by European anarchists.

Control over Patagonia has been a concern ever since a Frenchman named Orlie-Antoine made himself king of "Araucania" in the mid-1800s. Argentina keeps well-manned garrisons in the south and patrols a "zone of security" along the Chilean border.

In essence, life has changed little since the uprising.

Crews of shearers roam from ranch to ranch at clipping time, carrying only a few smelly shirts, a knife for eating roast mutton and a gourd for their tea.

The weather can switch from snow to sun to rain to hail in a single afternoon.

Schools, police stations and soccer games are still far apart and country-style.

U. S. Consul Slain By Peronist Left

CORDOBA, Argentina (AP) — Leftist Peronists who killed honorary U.S. Consul John Patrick Egan said he was their target because he represented "Yankee interests."

In a communique issued after Egan was murdered Friday night, the Montoneros said they wanted to strike a blow against the government which they said was handing Argentina over to the United States.

During the 51 hours Egan was held, Argentine officials made no response to guerrilla demands, but they conducted the biggest dragnet in the country's history.

The guerrillas set a 7 p.m. deadline for the government to prove that four missing companions were alive.

At 10 p.m., Egan's bloodied body was thrown out of a car on a dirt road two miles from this industrial city 450 miles west of Buenos Aires. An anonymous caller told reporters where to find his body.

The body was draped in a Montonero banner and was in the clothes he wore when he was abducted Wednesday. A note on the body said: "Montoneros. Peron or death. Until the victory, my general."

Egan, 62, a native of Perma, Mont., was a Kaiser Industries executive here from 1955 until his retirement in 1968. He was named a consular agent in September, 1973. He did not have diplomatic status.

The last American killed in Argentina was Ford manager John Swint, shot by on Thanksgiving Day, 1973.

Neither the U.S. nor Argentina has agreed to ransom demands in kidnapings.

In Egan's case, authorities did not have the four missing guerrillas in custody.

Four other persons died from apparent politically connected violence Friday. Three policemen were shot to death in a Buenos Aires ambush by unidentified terrorists. A soldier in Tucuman was blown up by a terrorist bomb.

Cordoba, Argentina's second largest city, is a center of guerrillia violence and labor activism.

Last April, Alfred Laun, a U.S. Information Service official, was shot and kidnaped by guerrillas in Cordoba. After 15 hours, he was released.

Grass Roots Back Reader's Digest

OTTAWA (CP) — Voter pressure is building up on members of Parliament to preserve special tax treatment for advertisers in Reader's Digest magazine, MPs say.

The government is expected to stick by its plan to withdraw the special treatment for both Reader's Digest and Time magazine, but stiff opposition is expected from the Conservatives and there may be resistance from the Liberal backbenchers, too.

A write-in campaign by Reader's Digest appears to be having a great deal of effect as letters pour into the offices of MPs on behalf of the magazine.

"It's unquestionably the most effective write-in campaign I have seen here," says Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East).

"I have never received so many letters on a single subject," says Howard Johnson (PC—Okanagan-Kootenay). "I received over 100 letters in the first few days."

A letter from Reader's Digest President Paul Zimmerman urged subscribers to write their MPs asking that the status of the Canadian edition be protected.

Under the proposed legislations, the two magazines would be treated as foreign publications, for tax purposes, unless they achieve a certain degree of Canadian ownership and carry a much higher, but still undefined, Canadian content. The tax change would actually affect the advertisers, who could no longer deduct the cost from taxable income.

Time has said it cannot meet the proposed requirements for Canadian content and would cease publishing its special edition in this country. Reader's Digest has not made any firm declaration as it awaits the governments legislation.

Meanwhile, the letters pouring into the offices of MPs are obviously having an influence. The Conservatives have devoted much of two caucuses to the question and members have reported a clear concensus to treat Reader's Digest differently than Time.

"There is no doubt that Reader's Digest is more Canadianized than Time," says Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough).

He cited the fact the magazine employs more Canadian writers, and it has a much bigger plant operation with its record and book operation. There is also a higher degree of Canadian ownership involved.

All the MPs interviewed say virtually all the letters involve Reader's Digest, and few mention Time.

But the write-in campaign has aroused some annoyance in the secretary of state's department. One official said Mr. Zimmerman should be "slapped down" for implying in his letter to subscribers that passage of the proposed legislation would deprive Canadian readers of the magazine.

"You can still subscribe to Newsweek in this country and there never has been a Canadian edition," says the official. "Its misleading for Mr. Zimmerman to suggest that Canadians could no longer enjoy Reader's Digest if the tax exemptions were removed."

Mr. Faulkner has said he is preparing an information kit so Liberal MPs can reply to the letters on behalf of Reader's Digest.

He said both magazines have mounted "a massive lobby." But prior to this latest write-in campaign, he said almost all of the letters were in support of the government's proposed legislation

"Most of the letters I receive suggest that they think they would no longer have access to the Digest," says David MacDonald (PC—Egmont).

Former cabinet minister Herb Gray (L—Windsor West) says "there's a flow of letters beginning and just about all of them refer to Reader's Digest." He said a few mentioned Time.

"Most are individual letters, not form letters."

But other MPs say they are receiving some written on the back of the letter Mr. Zimmerman wrote to subscribers.

Barrett Budget Record

VICTORIA (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett tabled a record $3.2 billion budget Friday and said the 1975-76 budget ends the tradition of overestimating expenditures and underestimating revenues.

He said the previous Social Credit administration of W. A. C. Bennett and the first two NDP budgets in British Columbia used that method to create large surpluses.

The premier, who is also finance minister, said that trying to avoid overestimating expenditures and underestimating revenues, is risky "but there's less room for political manoeuvering in taking his approach."

The $3.2 billion is a 48.3-per-cent increase over the current fiscal year's estimated expenditures. The fiscal year ends March 31.

Reaction to Friday's budget, however, was negative.

Opposition leaders were not enthusiastic and Social Credit leader Bill Bennett complained that there was no margin for error.

Mr. Bennett said the budget does not deal with inflation and called it a "waste and welfare budget."

Liberal Leader David Anderson said the budget fails to deal with the 102,000 unemployed British Columbia workers.

But Mr. Barrett argued that the budget will provide "job security."

He said the new budget includes special employment programs, a new revenue-sharing agreement for municipalities and financial help for homeowners and renters.

The premier and Conservative Leader Scott Wallace agreed on one point—the budget is not the kickoff to an election campaign.

There will be no increase in personal income taxes but the gasoline tax will be increased to 17 cents a gallon from 15 cents and, retroactive to Jan. 1, the provincial corporation income tax rate will jump to 13 per cent from 12 per cent for large businesses.

Premier Barrett said the administration of corporation income tax will be changed so that small businesses will have their taxes reduced to 10 per cent.

Retroactive to Jan. 1, the tax of one-tenth of one per cent on utilized capital of corporations will be doubled to one-fifth of one per cent.

The premier said increased personal and corporate income tax revenues, higher retail sales tax revenue and mineral and petroleum royalties increased the 1974-75 estimated revenues to $2.59 billion from $2.18 billion.

He said that created a $70 million budgetary surplus which will be used for creating new jobs.

Mr. Barrett also announced a change in the $30-a-year renters' grant introduced in last year's budget. The grants will be scaled to income to give greater benefits to those on low and moderate incomes.

Federal Take Above Outlays

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal govenment collected $675 million more than it spent in the first 10 months of the current fiscal year, the finance department reported Friday.

Through the end of January, the government took in $20.4 billion, almost $5 billion more than it collected in the same period of 1973-74.

Revenue for January was more than December collections, despite tax cuts for 1975. However, the revenue department was late in mailing out tax tables and many employers were late in revising deductions at source to reflect lower income-tax rates.

Total January revenue was $2.38 billion compared with $2.2 billion in December. Spending in January totalled $2.24 billion.

The surplus for the 10 months is well ahead of what Finance Minister John Turner has predicted for the full year.

To Your Good Health

Cyclic Edema Common Problem

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 50 and am having a problem with water retention. Every week I have to take two water pills and then I am fine for five or six days. I weigh 138 pounds. My blood pressure is 126 over 72.

My ankles get puffy, and they ache, especially in warm weather. Also, my eyes get puffy, and I look like I've been crying for a week. Being otherwise healthy, I wonder why I have this miserable problem.

I took estrogen for menopause, but I stopped and now I have the hot flashes. Is taking two water pills every week too much? Would this be harmful to my general health?—B.H.

Liquid retention has several causes, and one of them is a particular variety of edema—cyclic edema, which occurs frequently in middle-aged women. One factor in this is emotional. It may also be related to a pituitary gland hormone which has to do with release of water from the system. This might be worth investigating.

You should reduce your salt intake if you haven't already done so, and you should avoid foods like sausage, pickles, or others where salt is used as preservative.

Discontinuing the estrogen ought to have brought some relief, but perhaps you are being a bit impatient. Eliminating the estrogen and continuing with the water pills (two a week is not excessive) should produce some results for you.

If this doesn't work then it might be time to begin a search for other causes—kidney malfunction, liver disorder, or an allergy. As for the flashes, since you apparently cannot take the estrogen without aggravating your edema problem your doctor might want to prescribe a mild tranquilizer to ease this distress.

Dear Doctor: I'm a middle-aged woman who has been enduring for many years the problem of falling-out hair. I'm far from bald, but the amount I lose every day is rather frightening.

I am in excellent health, keep my hair relatively short, shampoo once a week and use hair coloring. Do you think I need vitamins, and if so, which ones?—Mrs. F.Y.

We are all blessed with approximately 100,000 lovely producing hair follicles at birth. As adults, we begin losing about 100 hairs daily, but luckily for most the follicles regenerate replacements most of our lives. Unfortunately, as we grow old fewer and fewer of these follicles are up to their replacement duty. The result, baldness. The main cause is heredity. Look at some of the old pictures in your family scrapbook and see if you can't detect a thinning on the head of grandma or great-grandma.

Alopecia (hair loss) can be a result, too, of certain disease processes, but this is usually only temporary unless there has been irreparable damage done to the follicles and their underlying cells.

The cosmetic chemistry revolution may have contributed its bit in some cases of premature hair loss. You might prudently discontinue using the coloring for a few months to see if there is any change. The vitamin to try would be of the B-complex variety, but there is only a minimal chance that this will improve things.

Your best bet is to take care of the hair you have. Brush very gently, and massage your scalp gently to keep the scalp skin tone healthy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a slight burning sensation at times when I urinate, also the urge to urinate when I don't have to. The pressure comes and goes. What could the problem be?—H.D.

Could be a urinary tract infection or a sagging of your bladder, called a cystocele. This is a protrusion of part of the bladder through the vaginer wall, which could be the cause of the pressure you feel. A urinalysis will detect an infection, and a pelvic examination any bladder abnormality.

Mrs. Bone, The Witch

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT
Copyright 1975, Toronto Sun Syndicate

Most self-styled witches, I've found, are bores who couldn't be duller if they tried.

Practising "witchcraft" is the way some middle-aged suburbanites get their kicks. This kind of witchcraft is about as authentic, or exciting, as the ghosts and goblins of Hallowe'en.

But there are witches and witches. Not long ago I met one who claims to be for real. Her name is Elizabeth Bone and she lives in the London suburb of Tooting Bec.

Mrs. Bone invited me to attend, as an observer, a ceremony of the London coven, of which she is chief witch. The ritual was held in a secluded glen in Surrey.

The ceremony, which was filmed for television, was carried out with the utmost seriousness by the participants — a dozen men and women, most in their 40s and 50s, and all nude. (With knobby knees and varicose veins very much in evidence, the spectacle was hardly erotic.)

Eleanor Bone, high priestess of the coven, whose witchly name is Artemis, shed her clothes, tied a simple cord around her waist, and under the full moon invoked the ancient pagan deities of her cult.

Sprinkling incense, she walked slowly around the witches' circle marked off by her nude followers, chantings:

"We summon you, O ye gods of the north and of the south and of the east and of the west."

Then, seizing a long dagger, she plunged it ceremonially into a goblet of wine held by her high priest, a bearded man wearing only a helment with stag's horns.

"Thus," she intoned, "does the female conjoin with the male to produce fertility and life."

The ritual concluded with the witches joining hands and dancing wildly in a circle, chanting in a strange tonque said to be ancient Celtic. The purpose of this dancing they said later, was to generate the power needed to work their spells.

To wind things up, each witch, men and women, leapt over a blazing fire. This, they said, symbolized their willingness to go through any ordeal for their faith.

Yes, Faith. Make no mistake. For the sincere practitioner of witchcrafts, such as Eleanor Bone, it is nothing less than a religious faith.

"I am a pagan," Mrs. Bone said proundly. "I was baptized a Christian but I left the church when I was still a child.

"My religion now is the old religion — the one that goes back into the mists of time much further than Christianity does. I believe in and practise witchcrafts the way other religionists practise their faith."

A highly intelligent, articulate woman, Mrs. Bone took great pains to clarify what she called the "confusion in the public mind" between white and black witchcrafts.

"We practise white witchcraft," she said. "We have no truck with the black variety, any more than most Christians would want to be associated with the members of their faith who in the past, and even the present, have persecuted and killed what they called heretics."

But of what does the practice of witchcraft, black or white, consist?

"The concentrated belief of the witches' coven can generate a power that produces apparent miracles," Elizabeth Bone explained.

"We only use this power, this magic, if you like, to bless. Black witchcrafts uses it to destroy, just as fire may be used to heat a house or to burn it down.

"We bless the person for whom we cast a spell. But a black witch, using an image of the person, can curse him. And it works."

Mrs Bone confided that a certain witch in London freely offered to cast evil spells for a fee, and her nose crinkled with distaste as she assured me that no self-respecting white witch would ever associate with him.

As evidence that her coven's magic is effective, Mrs. Bone mentioned the case of a seriously ill baby who improved dramatically with in hours of having a spell coast for him.

The power of suggestion? Or something more?

"More," said Elizabeth Bone. "Much more."

Showbiz Briefs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Singer Chad Mitchell was sentenced Wednesday to five years in prison and five years probation for possessing 480 pounds of marijuana.

Mitchell once was the leader of the popular Chad Mitchell Trio. Judge Adrian Spears said that because of Mitchell's background he held him even more responsible "for his action in the possession of marijuana."

Mitchell, who remained free on bond pending an appeal, was arrested in October, 1973, in a San Antonio motel after he had entered a pickup truck containing the marijuana.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Television personality Mike Douglas is recuperating at his suburban home and says he hopes to be back on the job next week.

Douglas, 49, had his appendix removed Jan. 22. It was his first illness during the 14 years of his syndicated talk show.

In a telephone interview, Douglas said he was happy he didn't say anything rash while under anesthesia.

"The last thing I remember was hoping I wouldn't do my old night club routine, or interview the nurse."

Actor Alan Alda and comedian David Steinberg have been substituting for Douglas as host of the talk show.

CBC Drama Head Is Frustrated

TORONTO (CP) — John Hirsch, after one year as head of CBC-TV drama, says he is so frustrated with lack of planning and foresight in the corporation and the government he seriously thinks of quitting.

Winner of national and international prizes for his work in the theatre, Hirsch, who will be 45 in May, dreams of building the drama department into a vital instrument of Canadian culture. But he says the CBC, which is financed by annual grants from Parliament and spends no money on development of talent is both frustrating and wasteful.

Asked in an interview whether he would quit, he said he was still prepared to stay and fight for his objectives but that if he can't get the money to plan and develop qualified people, "I can depart in good conscience without any rancor."

Hirsch said the terms under which he joined the CBC for four years to revitalize its drama department "have changed fundamentally" from his view of the job a year ago.

"One's ability to create things properly is practically nil. All the great hopes I had at the beginning are somewhat shattered. . . ."

Hirsch, who founded the Manitoba Theatre Centre with Tom Hendry in 1956 and directed The Cherry Orchard at the Stratford Festival in 1965, says CBC-TV should be presenting Canada in an imaginative, popular vein "so the people could develop their own image."

Hirsch said his department is expected to produce 70 hours of programs a year, but the money allocated him wouldn't produce six decent Movie of the Week shows.

"We are dealing in most cases with antiquated equipment, studios that leak, and money that is not enough to do a good series of Mickey Mouse cartoons. Out of this we are supposed to create a national drama? It's ridiculous."

Drama department shows occupy 50 to 60 per cent of CBC-TV English network program time. The CBC's grant from Parliament this year was $300 million, of which $235 million was for broadcasting and the balance for capital works. The CBC doesn't disclose how much of this was for English network drama.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Yesterday your hunches could be depended upon, but not today. If making important moves, deal only in cold, hard facts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll get a little miffed with a friend over something material. It's trivial, but the way it's handled will annoy you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You won't achieve as much as you're capable of today. You'll have too many irons in the fire. Settle on priorities.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be tempted to talk about your plans to those who aren't in a position to help. Their suggestions could confuse you.

Aries (March 21-April 19) An unexpected break will be coming your way. It will clear an obstacle and permit you to take positive measures to capitalize on your luck.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) An influential friend will help you attain something you couldn't achieve without this person behind you. Don't think you did it alone.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) If you have a better method of doing something where your work is concerned, now's the time to bring it to the attention of your superiors.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) One with whom you pal around socially will put you on the track of something profitable by sharing some inside information.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) You've been hesitant to act on something where you know the deck is stacked for you. You wrongly feel you'd be taking unfair advantage.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Something you and your mate agree should be done about a family matter will be realized only if you assume charge yourself.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't take things for granted today where finances are concerned. What is easy to get now may prove difficult later.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A friend will offer you something. You must take advantage of it promptly, while she's in a giving mood.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) For the past few days you've been semidependent upon others. Today the control of important situations is back in your hands.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll be getting some good news that will be of material benefit to you. It could be partial repayment of an old debt.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't rely upon others to make things happen for you today. Be assertive, especially where you can improve your position materially.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be generally lucky early today, but an important achievement will be gained through personal effort rather than through chance.

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Some old timers will remember Frank Stockton's story, "Lady, or the Tiger?" The reader is left with an impossible problem to solve.

Today's hand was presented as an example of an impossible bridge problem. South wins the first heart and cashes his ace and king of diamonds. His next play is the deuce of spades. West follows low. Which spade should he play from dummy? If either opponent holds both the ace and queen it makes no difference. If the honors are split, the correct guess allows South to make five notrump. The wrong guess finds South in the ashcan.

We have taken advantage of you readers by carefully showing question marks in place of the East-West spades, but we can assure you that there is a correct play here.

The correct play is to play the jack or 10. The reason for this is that some West players would put up the ace if they held it, on the theory that South held just two diamonds and one spade. Not much percentage since most defenders would figure out South's exact distribution, by assuming that with 6-4-2-1 South would have bid three clubs, not two notrump at his third turn. While with five hearts and five clubs his third call would have been three hearts.

However any slight percentage is worthwhile. South knows that West would not play the queen of spades unless he held it as a singleton.

Murder Charged

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Dale Cameron Shell, 13, and Kathleen Winnifred Paquette, 20, of Batchawana, 42 miles north of here, have been charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment in the death Wednesday of Diane Paquette, 3.

The two were arrested Thursday night. Details of the child's death are yet to be released by provincial police at Batchawana. The child died in hospital here.

Player Acquitted

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Noah Jackson, 23-year-old offensive tackle with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, was acquitted in provincial court Friday on a charge of assaulting police with intent to resist arrest.

The charge was laid after a scuffle involving six policemen Jan. 25 at Toronto International Airport. The police confronted the 260-pound player after receiving a report that he went through customs without clearance, claiming that he was an agent of the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Judge Gerry Young said Jackson had been grabbed from behind and he expressed some doubt whether the policemen actually were assaulted.

Court Will Rule

OTTAWA (CP) — The Toronto controversy over whether police cruisers at night should be staffed by one or two officers comes before the Supreme Court of Canada March 17.

The Metro Toronto Police Association, the police union, established in bargaining about a year ago that the cruisers should be staffed by two fully-armed officers.

Quick Vote Seen

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government may call an early spring election to prevent changes recommended by the Electoral Boundaries Commission in January, says James Breithaupt, Liberal member of the legislature for Kitchener. Breithaupt says that if the commission's recommendations are adopted, they will favor Liberals and New Democrats since eight new ridings would be located in urban districts.

Plan Protection

OTTAWA (CP) — A meeting will be held in April to establish a national system of consumer protection for new home buyers, Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said Friday.

Mr. Danson said in a news release that the system would include registration of builders, inspection of houses during construction and insurance for the home-purchaser against failure of the builder to meet his obligations

Cut Impractical

OTTAWA (CP) — A domestic shortage of natural gas could be put off until about 1990 if all exports to the United States are cut, Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. told the National Energy Board Friday.

But the company repeated its belief that such a cut is impracticable and any shortages developing in the next five years should be shared by both domestic and export customers.

Get New MP

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons, gave quick passage Friday to legislation that will give the Northwest Territories a second MP.

"From the bottom of my heart, on behalf of the people of the Northwest Territories, I'd like to thank the members for speedy passage of this very important bill," said Wally Firth, New Democratic Party member for the territory.

Luck Runs Out

COLUMBUS (AP) — Just one week after he won $300,000 in the Ohio Lottery, Joe Brown's luck made an about face.

Brown, 37, was sentenced to three to 15 years in prison Thursday on charges of burglary and vandalism.

He had earlier pleaded guilty to the charges which resulted from the theft of a stereo, television set and clock from an apartment in March.

The total value of the stolen property—$150.

Sooey Is OK

JACKSON (AP) — A Tennessee court has ruled that it is no crime to shout "Sooey" at a policeman if it is unlikely to cause violence.

The court dismissed charges of disturbing the peace against Thomas Garvey on Thursday. Garvey had been given a 30-day suspended jail sentence and fined $25 for yelling the word at a policeman.

Death Toll Rises

LONDON (AP) — Rescue teams today cut through the crumpled wreckage of London's worst subway disaster and found more bodies, pushing the death toll up to 31, police said.

Police said 16 bodies had been recovered from the twisted metal and that at least 15 still were buried in the subway 50 feet under Moorgate Station in London's financial district.

Rural Complaint

OTTAWA (CP) — Mortgage lending policies of Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) discriminate against rural residents, a Progressive Conservative MP says.

Paul Dick (PC—Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton) in a letter to his constituents, said that "people living in the metropolitan and other built-up areas always appear to receive a bigger share of the funds than is warranted."

Lands Downtown

POUGHKEEPSIE (AP) — A light plane, escorting another plane whose pilot was unfamiliar with the area, apparently ran out of fuel and made a successful street landing in downtown Poughkeepsie Friday, police said.

There were no injuries, although the plane was slightly damaged as it struck a lighting pole and flipped over.

Women's Pay Low

OTTAWA (CP) — Results of a special survey by Statistics Canada showed earnings of women in financial institutions and insurance and real estate companies were just over half those of men on average, the agency said Friday.

Women accounted for 55 per cent of the employees but only six per cent of the executives were women and only 23 per cent of lower - level managers and supervisors were women.

Richardson in Mess

Maclean's Writer Sticks by Story

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister James Richardson remained snarled Friday in a controversy over derogatory remarks which Maclean's magazine says he made about the native people.

While Mr. Richardson was arguing that he did not utter the words, the author of the article was standing by every word.

The incident, which could haunt the minister for months, even reached the point Friday where a Liberal MP asked whether it would influence the governmnt's plan to stop tax breaks for Time and Reader's Digest—Maclean's' competitors.

The Friday flare-up indicated that not all MPs accepted the minister's original denial, made Thursday.

The controversial quotations were in an article on Mr. Richardson, written by the magazine's associate editor, Marci McDonald.

In the March issue, she wrote: " . . . Discussing the fate of the Indians and Eskimos, he (Mr. Richardson) will suddenly puzzle, "I mean, what did they ever do for Canada? Did they discover gas? Did they discover oil? They didn't even invent the wheel. Why, when we came here, they were still dragging things around on two sticks."

Miss McDonald said in an interview that the remarks were made on a trans-Atlantic flight after Mr. Richardson had "several ryes and gingerales."

Mr Richardson said that he was talking about the Mackenzie Valley pipeline with Miss McDonald at the time.

"I was not talking about the native people . . . I did not use those words specifically. I just do not think in those terms."

Miss McDonald said there were two witnesses, "but unfortunately one was an army colonel and the other was the wife of an assistant—and I remember she rolled her eyes when he said it."

Charge Reduced

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A charge of murder punishable by life imprisonment against Harold James Kusmich, 16, of Brownsville, 25 miles southeast of here, was reduced to manslaughter today by Provincial Judge G. G. Marshman.

Kusmich was arrested Nov. 22 in connection with the death of Debbie Fead, 16, of London, whose body was found in a school yard He remains in custody following a Supreme Court of Ontario denial of bail.

Marchand Opposes All-contract Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Jean Marchand resisted opposition demands Friday for nationwide investigation of federal dredging contracts and confirmed that he directed the RCMP to investigate possible contract price fixing in Ontario and Quebec.

In the Commons, he questioned whether James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) was serious in calling for an inquiry into all federal dredging contracts.

He told Mr. McGrath that he ordered an inquiry into Hamilton dredging operations in January 1973, following an RCMP report on activities of the Hamilton Harbor Commission.

Official Resigns

MONTREAL — The Gazette says Yves Menard resigned Friday night as Air-Canada's vice-president of marketing "for personal reasons" following an investigation by the newspaper into several transactions he made with a Barbados holiday resort.

Pickering Folk Told To Vacate

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government served formal notice Friday that it will take possession May 30 of land expropriated in 1973 for the new Toronto International Airport at Pickering.

Letters to all occupants were mailed Friday by the public works department.

Many former owners, who now will have to move May 30, have remained in their homes rent free since the expropriation settlement Jan. 30, 1973.

Farmers Can Borrow Billions from Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons granted approval in principle Friday to a bill that would allow farmers to borrow up to $2.5 billion from the government.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan called the proposal a whopping vote of confidence in young farmers.

But Alvin Hamilton, a former Conservative Agriculture minister, said farmers will be strangled by red tape and will find it difficult to get loans approved.

The bill, given second reading and sent to the Commons agriculture committee for detailed study, would raise to $100 million from $66 million the amount of mortgage money the government allots to the Crown-owned Farm Credit Corp.

But the total mortgage pool could rise to $2.5 billion. The corporation can borrow up to 25 times its authorized capital.

The maximum loan for farmers under 35 years old would rise to $150,000 from $100,000. Older farmers, farm co-operatives or farm corporations would be restricted to $100,000.

"Farmers need more long-term capital today than ever before," Mr. Whelan said as the bill was debated in a nearly-deserted Commons.

Bonn Makes Deal

Lorenz Still Captive As Anarchists Freed

BERLIN (AP) — A West German jet took off from Frankfurt airport today with five freed anarchists, but the fate of kidnapped politician Peter Lorenz, who police said was being held in a West Berlin hideout, was not yet known.

Police said at last report the plane, named Afrika, was heading in the direction of Ethiopia. They said one of the anarchists at first demanded that the plane land in Tripoli, but that Libyan anthorities refused. This contrasted with a West German government spokesman's statement that landing permission in Tripoli had been granted.

West Berlin police said the Syria government in Damascus also refused the jet landing permission and that the plane then flew toward Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital.

The anarchists were freed from prisons in West Germany and West Berlin and given $52,000 ransom and passage out of the country in response to demands of terrorists who kidnaped Lorenz on Thursday.

Pastor Heinrich Albertz, 60, a former mayor of West Berlin, accompanied the anarchists as a guarantee of their safety.

The taneoff was transmitted to a West Berlin television channel so the kidnappers could see the Lufthansa Boeing 707 depart. The government said the 9 a.m. deadline set by the kidnapeprs for the departure of the freed anarchists was delayed an hour. The plane left three minutes before that second deadline.

In Bonn, West German government spokesman Klaus Boelling said the government acceded to the demands of the terrorists "in this case" to save Lorenz's life.

Boelling said politicians of all four parties represented in the Bonn parliament "basically" sanctioned the decision to give in. This made it appear that there was some difference of opinion at least on how to proceed.

Meanwhile, West Berlin police broadcast an appeal to the kidnapers to confirm that Lorenz was alive, but there was no response.

One of the released anarchists, Ingrid Siepmann, accused the authorities of using delaying tactics that were endangering the captive's life.

Lorenz, head of the Christian Democratic party in West Berlin, was seized Thursday by a group calling itself the Movement of the Second of June. But the kidnapers had not been heard from since Saturday.

Meanwhile, Lorenz's conservative party topped the Social Democrats in the elections for a new West Berlin city legislature Sunday for the first time. But they might not be able to take over the government.

Complete unofficial returns gave the Christian Democrats 43.9 per cent of the vote, compared to 38.2 per cent in 1971, while the Socialists dropped to 42.7 from 50.4.

The Christian Democrats were expected to get 68 seats to the Free Democrats. But since the conservatives did not win a majority, the Socialists and the Free Democrats may form a coalition government.

It was the first time in 20 years the Socialists had failed to win a majority, and political leaders of the major parties agreed that the abduction of Lorenz was a significant factor in his party's showing.

Trudeau Finds Security Tight

BONN (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau began a two-day visit today with most West Germans and government officials preoccupied with a political kidnapping that was unfolding as the Canadian leader arrived.

Security was tight, with armored military vehicles, rifle-equipped soldiers and muzzled police dogs on hand as Trudeau arrived from Munich.

His corner of the airport was monitored by a police television van. Public observation decks at the adjacent terminal building had been cleared and soldiers stood guard on every level.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, also vice-chancellor, met Trudeau in the place of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt who was battling pneumonia and pleurisy while attempting to deal with the West Berlin kidnapping.

The kidnapping diverted what public attention Trudeau might have received here as well as causing stepped up security and embroiling the German cabinet in emergency meetings that lasted much of the night.

As Trudeau arrived, many Germans were glued to their televisions or radios, listening to the departure from Frankfurt of anarchist prisoners released in accordance with the demands of the kidnappers of Peter Lorenz, West Berlin opposition leader.

The Bonn section of Trudeau's 16-day European trip to five EEC capitals followed a weekend of skiing and working in the Bavarian Alps by the prime minister. He travelled to Munich from the ski slopes late Sunday for a briefing by his aides prior to the Bonn Visit.

Included on Trudeau's schedule are meetings with President Walter Scheel and a group of German industrialists in nearby Cologne.

Canadian officials expected that possible German investment in Canada might be discussed.

Oil Czars Assemble

ALGIERS (AP) — Heads of states begin arriving today for the first summit meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) amid signs of continuing dissension.

King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and at least four other chiefs of state were expected to stay away from the 13-country meeting, which opens Tuesday.

The 15-year-old oil cartel is gathering at Algeria's request to preoare for preliminary negotiations with the oil-consuming countries due to open in Paris April 7.

Algerian spokesmen, at a preparatory meeting Sunday of the OPEC oil, finance and foreign ministers, renewed their government's demand for enlargement of the Paris meeting to include producers of other key raw materials.

They also renewed previous Algerian proposals for an OPEC-wide reduction in production to keep the price of oil up, and abandonment of the dollar as the medium of payment because of the recent decline in its value.

Answer Arrested, Sept-Iles Bound

GASPE, Que. (CP) — The zig-zag course of the fugitive ship Answer appeared firmly set today for the Quebec port of Sept-Iles on the north shore of the St. Lawrence River.

Officials in Sept-Iles, taking account of foot-thick ice in the ice-choked mouth of the St. Lawrence, said they expect the vessel in port tonight.

Captain Brian Erb, 37, her colorful master, appeared to have lost an argument with a boarding party of four RCMP officers as the Answer, which had been headed out of the gulf to the open Atlantic, turned about Sunday and headed north.

She is retracing part of a stop-and-go voyage that began when she slipped her lines in secret at Quebec City more than a week ago, leaving behind a confusing array of ownership claims.

Reporters were unable to reach the captain by ship-to-shore telephone Sunday night after he reported in an interview that the Mounties had come aboard during the day and told him to take the vessel to a Quebec port. He had said days ago he was headed for Boston, where he said her rightful owners are located.

Captain Erb said earlier Sunday he was determined to make for a Nova Scotia port and the vessel was going nowhere while he argued with the police officers.

Later, the transport department in Ottawa reported the Answer was headed for Sept-Iles, in company with the icebreaker John A. Macdonald.

The RCMP held two warrants when they boarded the Answer, one for the arrest of the captain and one for the seizure of the ship, issued under authority of an order from the Federal Court of Canada.

RCMP had set out last week to board the vessel and arrest her when, as four Mounties reached the icebreaker John A. Macdonald 1½ miles astern of the Answer, they were told she was in international waters beyond the 12-mile territorial limit.

An external affairs department official in Ottawa Friday described as "quite correct" the apparent position of the RCMP that Canadian criminal jurisdiction, unlike fisheries and other laws, did not cover the entire gulf.

However, justice department officials said from the start that they believed the ship could and should be seized and they announced Friday night that the RCMP was being ordered to do so.

B.C. Dock Workers Walk Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shipping traffic out of 11 British Columbia ports came to a standstill during the weekend after 4,000 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union walked off the job.

Negotiations between the union and the British Columbia Maritime Employers' Association broke down Saturday over wages and jurisdiction of container cargo.

Ford Believed Likely to Defer Oil Tariff Levy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford conferred with Republican congressional leaders today, and one party spokesman said afterward Ford may defer the second and third dollars of his oil import tariff.

Ford scheduled a 3 p.m. EST announcement on his response to a Democratic proposal that he defer the higher tariffs while compromise talks are under way to shape an energy program.

Dream Realized

Heidi Biggs, 14, Dies After Hawaii Visit

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — "She got to see her dream didn't she?" asked Heidi Biggs' mother. "She got to see Hawaii.

Fourteen-year-old Heidi died of cancer Sunday, less than an hour after she was carried on a stretcher from a plane returning her home from Honolulu.

The trip had been her secret wish—the dream of a dying girl from a welfare family.

Her mother, Mrs. Lucille Biggs, said that at the end Heidi asked one thing more: She wanted to say goodbye to her younger brother and sister. But she died as the ambulance rushed her to them.

"We wanted to take her straight to the hospital," Mrs. Biggs said in an interview. "But she insisted on going home. She knew it was her time."

Heidi learned last summer she was dying and doctors said she had less than a year to live. Deeply religious and a member of the Apostolic Church of God, a fundamentalist church, she put her trust in God.

Her mother said that the girl's faith sustained her through the chemical therapy that disfigured her and through the pain that never left.

An Associated Press story about her final Christmas touched Russell Penny, a Canadian businessman in Sudbury, Ont. He flew to Belleville to meet Heidi.

She told him what she had told no one else: She had seen a television travelogue about Hawaii and it was a place she secretly dreamed of seeing.

Penny helped organize a trust fund for the trip and people from all over the United States contributed.

On Feb. 15, with $2,400 collected, Heidi and her mother left for Hawaii. They planned to stay a week, but growing contributions allowed them to stay longer.

Mrs. Biggs said Heidi had 2½ days in the sun before she suffered a collapsed lung, was confined to bed and fell into delirium.

Courts Will Decide

EDMONTON (CP) — The courts, and not Justime Minister Otto Lang, will determine what Canada's abortion laws permit, the president of the Canadian Bar Association, William Somerville, said Sunday. He was commenting on Mr. Lang's 1974 memo to hospital therapeutic abortion committees in which he said social and economic factors must not be considered in the granting of a legal abortion. "It is not up to the minister to interpret the law," said Mr. Somerville. "His interpretation may be correct or incorrect, but it is not going to affect anybody."

CLC Man Advocates Open Union Meetings

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The Ontario director of education for the Canadian Labor Congress says the time will come when local unions will have to open their meetings to the public to enhance the public image of the labor movement.

James Brechin, in an interview following Saturday's labor studies institute banquet at Loyalist College, said this will be improtant "especially when you have a large dominant local which affects the community."

He explained these open sessions would take a form similar to meeting of municipal councils or boards of education and for strictly internal matters there would be in-committee or causas portions.

Mr. Brechin suggested in addition "each local should set up someone responsible for public relations who can get to know the local news media and keep them up to date on what is happening.

He added, "you will get some people who criticize the various media but we should criticize ourselves more."

In his address to the institute banquet Mr. Brechin exclaimed, "for God's sake, if you've got any information — don't keep it to yourself."

"Our public image at the present time is at its lowest," he said.

He explained later, "I think personal contact is the most effective. That gives you the opportunity to discuss the problems with your neighbour who doesn't belong to a union and doesn't know anything about them."

Mr. Brechin said the labor congress has taken a lead in the open meeting concept by opening all conventions to the public. "Last year in Vancouver, our convention was covered by 40 nations," he noted.

The congress held two recent workshops on public relations as well "to learn the principles of communication with all media and the public at large."

Festival Finale Divided

The 1975 Rotary Music Festival doubled its finale this year.

The Festival of Stars production — a stage show with performers selected from the festival's winning participants — this year had separate presentations at both Belleville and Trenton Sunday.

The reason was the Belleville club — which originated the music festival — now has Trenton Rotary as a partner.

But the festival itself has always been area wide.

And this year it drew more entries than ever — 450 compared to 300 in 1974, said George Thompson, master of ceremonies at the festival's Belleville stage show at Centennial Secondary School.

"There was a real increase in numbers. We figure about 4,000 people have participated — both in groups and as individuals."

Driver Injured In Mishap

A 63-year-old Napanee man was treated and released from Belleville General Hospital Sunday for cuts and bruises he suffered in a one-car accident on Highway 401 about three miles east of the city.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said Silas Murray was eastbound in his 1971 Torino when it went out of control after hitting the shoulder of the road, swerved into the median and rolled across the westbound lane.

Constale Mike Publow estimated damage to the car at $2,5000 in the 4.10 p.m. mishap.

At Royal, we feel insurance should work like a bridge. Inflation or not.

Your insurance must get you over a loss and span the gap inflation is creating between your policy's face value and today's inflated replacement costs.

That's why at Royal we feel your insurance programme needs a review. An immediate review. The insurance protection you now have may not provide you with enough money to replace important possessions in the event of loss.

We recommend that you have an independent agent — an insurance professional — examine your programme and advise you of the adjustments you may need to keep you fully protected in today's inflationary economy.

In the past 125 years independent agents and brokers have helped to make Royal the largest general insurance organization across Canada. Because they know from experience that Royal represents value for your money.

Talk to an independent agent about your insurance programme, about Royal and a bridge for your future.

Canadian Shield No Barrier For Bancroft Radio Station

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

BANCROFT — A spanking new electronic twin has arrived here with a double promise for Hastings County.

Because of CJNH radio service

(1) The mineral-rich northern reaches of the county now are radiating the sound of their own local lifestyles.

(2) Communications in a county with a traditionally split community-personality complex now are more closely-knit.

It all started Saturday night when CJNH began Quinte district-wide broadcasting.

Suddenly, an area where an ore-laden landscape has been a natural phenomenon bedevilling radio reception, was booming loud and clear — and with the sounds of talent beamed from a hometown setting to all of Quinte country.

That's part of the concept's over-all orginality: CJNH's evolution has been as much a result of local effort as professional planning and investment.

An affiliate of long-established radio station CJBQ, the realization of CJNH is closely tied to its own broadcast community. There's a standing citizen group organizing local talent for airing.

For the present, much of its programming will be microwave from Belleville's CJBQ — with a daily mix of local production.

But the affiliation Saturday also is hopefully seen as heightening day-to-day awareness in a county where geographic and social contrasts have caused historic problems to a common county community identity.

The CJBQ-CJNH twinning is aimed at boosting contact between the rugged Canadian Shield country hereabouts and the highly-developed Bay of Quinte region centred on Belleville.

One of the creative thrusts behind CJNH, says Frank Murray, CJBQ general manager who initiated the concept as "a dream of long-standing" is "to unite the north and south of the county."

"The problem is," explained Hastings County warden William McCrea, "this is a long-drawn county (reaching 100 miles, Hastings is Ontario's second-longest county)." So community is the name of the game. "Improved transportation has helped, but ..." "this (CJNH) will be another link that binds us together, he said.

Added Clarke Rollins, Hastings MPP: "It'll have the most favorable affect for better understanding throughout the entire county."

The core significance was summed up simply by a distinguished man of eloquence — author and broadcast personality Harry Boyle.

Mr. Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio and Television Commission, told the standing-room-only crowd at the official switch-on: Despite sophisticated technology "communication is simply the art of people talking to each other. Remember as long as people can talk to people there is hope."

Then he threw the switch at the Centre Hastings Secondary School auditorium that symbolically sent the CJNH broadcast style on its air way.

Much of that source rests with the community — the source where Mr. Murray first went 18 months ago with his new broadcast blueprint for Hastings. His reception was "immediately very favorable."

Because of the local mineral phenomenon the Bancroft area had not been receiving "reliably good' signals from any Canadian radio station, aside from a tiny (40-watt) local repeater facility installed by the CBC.

The local Chamber of Commerce formed a starter committee — that included motel operator Ken Wilcox, area news correspondent Nan Whitlaw and local resident George Robinson.

From that has sprung the group that today organizes CJNH's local talent broadcasts.

Under Gary Stevenson, educational assistant with the county's school board, it combs the northern townships so talent "that's unique to north Hastings" has CJNH as an outlet.

"The outlet was never there until now, but the talent always was," he said at the opening program that ranged from original drama to original music — all local.

Official response was apparently just as satisfactory, indicated Mr. Murray. Seeking a new radio licence can be a long-drawn, maybe disappointing, process, he said But the proposal wasn't even contested before federal licensing authorities.

"In fact it didn't even come to as far as a public hearing — one of the few times in Canadian broadcasting," he said.

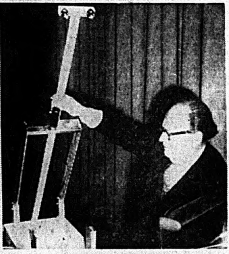
Technicalities: Twinning technique involved a 300-foot micro-wave relay tower at Keller Bridge — midway between Belleville and Bancroft. CJNH's own transmitter — just east of the community on Highway 500 — has a 30-mile range.

Production: Broadcast hours are similar for both stations. But specific local programming sees: A daily 9 a.m.-10 a.m exchange show between Mrs. Whitlaw, now CJNH's news and community affairs director, and Dick Lovering, CJBQ personality in Belleville. Monday to Friday nights the North Hastings Radio Committee will produce a half-hour show at 6.30 p.m.-7 p.m. — Sunday from 7 p.m.-9 p.m.

The future: As area expansion — and economy — is reflected in CJNH's operations so will the station grow, said Mr. Murray.

He promised the premiere broadcast audience: "The sooner it becomes economically viable, the sooner it's on its own. And we hope that can happen in the next few years."



On the Air

Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio and Television Commission, throws the switch to symbolically signify that CJNH — Bancroft-based radio operation serving north Hastings County — is officially on the air. It was a key point in opening show before packed audience at North Hastings Secondary School.

The First Step

They turned the sod for new Knights of Columbus Hall at Trenton this weekend. Lodge's Grand Knight Jim Clement (with shovel) is accompanied by Jack Bonn, Ray Cirotto, Dennis Hersey, Lloyd Wells, Ernie Bowler, Rex Hunter and Eldon Weise. The new hall will be located on Stella Cres. near St. Mary's School and will cost $500,000 when completed.

Pork Farmers Plan Election

Directors of the Hastings-Prince Edward Pork Producer Association will be meeting Tuesday at 8:00 p.m. at Ben Bleecker Auditorium to elect their 1975 executive. The agenda will also include Quinte Exhibition, Pork Princess and budget discussions.

Roads Rough

DEMORESTVILLE — Prince Edward County residents may have looked with optimism at last week's spring-like weather, but the extremely mild conditions created havoc with many of the county's township roads.

Sophiasburg Township road superintendent, Donald Potter, says that he cannot recall the roads being in a worse shape and adds the condition exists throughout the county. He attributes the condition to "the frost leaving the ground to quickly."

The situation, says Mr. Potter, is aggrevated by the oil, a dust inhibiter, which was placed on the gravel roads during the summer months last year.

Kente Addition Almost Ready

AMELIASBURG — The $400,000 plus addition to Kente public school will be officially opened Friday, April 25 during education week, George Cunningham, Prince Edward County board member for the township reports.

Although not fully completed students are using the major part of the new accommodations including the gym, shower rooms, industrial arts and home economic facilities.

Woman Foils Young Thief

An unidentified determined woman discouraged a would-be thief in an aborted purse-snatching incident Friday.

A city police spookesman said today the woman, who suffered a back injury in the attack, was approached by an unknown youth about 4:10 p.m. and managed to hang on to her purse.

"All we can say at this point is it appears to be a juvenile in his early teens wearing a blue nylon parka," said the spokesman.

Stirling Rings to Sound of Fiddles

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — The first Ontario open fiddlers' contest held in Stirling saw competitors from across the province Saturday vying for $500 in prizes. It was held in conjunction with Homecoming Weekend to raise money for a new Stirling district arena.

In the local and regional non-professional contest, Bruce Elliott of Ajax fiddled to first place, followed by Cathy Whalen of Marlbank.

Stanley Kleinsteuber of Stirling was the only local native to place, coming second in the 45 and over event. Lorne Wilson of Carlton Place was first.

A Pickering youth, Ricky Carmier was first in the 18 and under category, while Dwight Lubiniecki of Scarborough came second.

Ottawa's Jim Connors could not get out of the second place habit in two trys. He was acknowleded for his egffoorts in the novelty and open classes.

Raymond Pentland, of St. Catharines, was firse in the novelty class, while Lloyd Wilson, Kingston, took the honors in the open event.

The ladies had their chance to entertain the crowd and Alice Urecko of Toronto received first prize. From further afield was Kathy Ferguson, of Kitchener, and the judges gave her second spot.

The youngest fiddler appearing on stage was Donnell Leahy, 6, of Lakefield. The oldest country music maker was Ken Majury, 76, of Kitchener.

The event was the work of Jack and Dorothy McCaughen, Front St., Stirling, who have been involved with country music since the 1940s. They rounded up the out-of-town talent.

Nesting Program Showing Results

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

NAPANEE — Establishment of a resident free-flying Canada goose population at the Camden Lake Wildlife Management Area, northeast of Napanee, is showing signs of success, says Hans Von Rosen, fish and wildlife management supervisor with the provincial ministry of natural resources.

The Napanee district office of the ministry has been working the project for a number of years and this spring should tell the tale.

We're quite optimistic," said fish and wildlife officer Terry Humberstone.

"Last year we had two-year-olds nesting, and that's a good sign. The normal nesting age is three years. If we get a good turnout this spring we'll know we're in business."

Another species, sharptailed grouse, is being encouraged to settle in on the former artillery range at Point Petre in Prince Edward County.

The sharptails were first brought to this part of the province from Fort Frances, where they were hatched near the Minnesota border. They were brought to the Camden Lake area but, on their own, moved down to Point Petre on land jointly owned by the federal and provincial governments and managed by the provincial resources ministry.

Wildlife officers have high hopes for the establishment of a solid grouse population in the Point Petre area, which, already has a built-in waterfowl population.

Mr. Von Rosen emphasized that the Point Petre program is experimental at this stage, but indicated that its potential as a wildlife management recreation and hunting area is encouraging.

Sharptails Mr. Von Rosen said, are "fire followers" liking the new growth that spring up on burned over land. A controlled burning program will be carried out at Point Petre this year in a further effort to attract grouse to the area.

Softball Teams Push for Funds

MILFORD — It was push-ups for money at Milford Town Hall Saturday night. In an effort to raise funds for the South Marysburg Township Men's Softball league 21 contestants tested their stamina at a "Push-up-athon."

The event was termed "very successful" by team coach and co-ordinator of the event, Leo McAlpine.

Over $1,200 was raised by the event, which included the sale of home cooking Picton merchants.

Tying for first place with 60 push-ups in 60 seconds were Kedin Clapp and Danny Collan, both of Milford. Prince Edward County Warden, Clifford Walker, was on hand for the event as counter.

Practice Makes Perfect

There was no place to practise for the Ontario open fiddlers' contest held in Stirling Saturday afternoon so Bruce Elliott, Ajax, fiddling, and Ken Majury, Kitchener, playing the piano, went upstairs to the Beckoning Arms Tavern to get warmed up. Bruce went on to win the local and regional non-professional competition. The event was one of many on the weekend to raise money for a new Stirling district arena.

A native to Toronto, Mr. Hynes is survived by his wife, Jessie, and four children.

Mr. Hynes, a chemical engineer, received his education at the University of Toronto. He joined CIL in 1933 and held several sales and management positions until 1962 whe he was elected company president.

He was awarded the Gold Medal of the Society of Chemical Industry in 1967 and the Canada Medal of the Chemical Institute of Canada in 1974.

Mr. Hynes, an enthusiastic yachtsman, was past commodore of, the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, Dorval, Quebec, and a member of Toronto's Royal Canadian Yacht Club and the Kingston Yacht Club.

New Rink Studied

AMELIASBURG — The township recreation committee is examing ways and means of increasing activities this year.

Under the leadership of Doris Goheen of Carrying Place, the committee hopes to stimulate greater interest in public tennis facilities at Roblin's Lake park.

The committee also expects to devote considerable time in further developing a softball program for youth between the ages of five and 17.

This week the committee is looking forward to hearing a report on the investigation of an outdoor artificial ice skating surface proposed for the township park in the future.

An open air rink to provide recreation for township residents during the winter months regardless of indifferent weather conditions has been under study by the Ameliasburg recreation commission for some time.

Auto Finances

It is cheaper to run a car into the ground than to trade every year or so. Columnist Vincent Egan, if memory serves, made this observation not too long ago. Certainly a lot more people are getting into practice where keeping their autos on the road is concerned.

And deferring necessary body work as well, for if the rust has eaten through or you get bumped by some other fellow the repairs can be costly. It is what The Globe and Mail was talking about recently, under a heading: Body Shops: An Auto Trap for Unwary.

Reporter Arnold Bruner investigated the body shop business pretty thoroughly and it would not be unfair to sum up his conclusions in one word that has become pretty familiar these days.

Rip-off.

For example, one motorist took his car to a dozen auto body shops in Metro to find the cost of removing dents and rust and of painting the car. The estimates ranged from $250 to $720.

There is another aspect of this situation where a fellow can end up with the short end of the stick, offering proof moreover that little remains these days of the philosophy of a Gentlemen's Agreement.

Just after Christmas, a Belleville driver informs us, a car stopped abruptly just ahead of him on Front Street, then backed up as if to park and there was a collision. Damage amounting to more than $150 resulted and the driver of the first car said he would pay. A sum of $100 was finally agreed upon, with payment promised for the following day. It was never made. A solicitor's letter was sent, and duly ignored, which leaves only one alternative — going to court — a course of action which is time-consuming and, where relatively small amounts are involved, unproductive.

Even the rust-proofing that is offered can fall short of expectation — as one fellow knows as he contemplates the rust that has eaten right through the top of a fender on his 1970 model. Not being the original owner he has no recourse.

That's the way it can go, with variations, for the average car owner these days.

Cultural Bargins

Are there any dollar bargains left these days?

Surprisingly there are — and in a cultural medium which in turn offers riches far exceeding the monetary cost.

The world of books — and the paperback boom that has come in its train — is such a category.

On the stands today there is everything from . . . yes erotica and violence; but besides that there is a wealth of reading including the works of such acclaimed authors as Nobel prizewinner Patrick White from Australia, Soviet political exile Alexander Solzhenitsyn, and science fiction writer and Sri Lanka resident Arthur C. Clarke.

All these and a host of others, in most instances for under $2.

If music is your preference, and invariably this is a pleasure shared with literature, there is available today — here in Belleville — an astonishing array of classical records, again costing less than $2.

Among these it can be said with truth are some of the great bargains of our time.

Setting an Example

There is so much lying down on the job these days, and it extends right through the whole world of work, that anything resembling the old concept of seeing the job through (let alone ahead of time) deserves mention.

The demolition job adjacent to this office is an example. The job was done a week ahead of schedule and this in turn spurred bossman Ray Finkle to give his seven-man demolition crew a week off and round-trips to Miami, to be taken at their convenience.

This is the kind of incentive gesture that is worth its weight in gold so to speak, and worth more than all the other fancy incentive packages that today are not so much given, but demanded by all and sundry — more often than not in return for as little effort as possible on the job.

'Too Late in Any Event' Critics Say

Impact of PM's European Tour Expected to be Minimal

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

The prime minister may well ponder, during his current trade-seeking mission to Europe, if he has waited too long to make it. The European Common Market now is plagued with the same inflation and economic slump which affects North America. And the British who Prime Minister Trudeau will visit are planning a national referendum this summer on continued British membership in the Market.

Mr. Trudeau's critics since the earliest years of his first government, have criticized him for his greater interest in regions like the U.S.S.R., Communist China and the Third World while our major trade continues to be with Europe and the United States.

Last year's French and Belgian visit was less than a success for him where any kind of deal for Canada inside the European Common Market was concerned. The possibility of say, our associate membership in the ECM looked even more remote after Mr. Trudeau had been to Paris and learned the French were opposed to such an arrangement.

The prime minister also will explore the on-and-off again element in our European trade, the British-Canadian market. He will probably be able to do little to persuade potential Canadian customers to switch to British-made goods and services when their economy is in such a mess and the British continue to be cavalier about delivery dates and equipment servicing.

In fact Canada largely does better than Britain in this relationship with the imabalance of trade usually being on the British side.

Prime Minister Trudeau is visiting Holland, Italy, West Germany, England and Ireland on his 18-day European junket. Some aspects of it have to be formalities, such as the Dutch portion.

It was a two-day renewal of a friendship cemented during the war with the Ottawa residence of the present Dutch queen and the major Canadian military effort to liberate Holland in 1944-45.

One wonders again about the timing in approaching the Italians on trade possibilities when Italy's economy is closer to collapse than any other in Europe.

Even the French visit last year was made more for fence-mending than to stimulate trade, although some interesting announcements were made about Canadian uses for French technology.

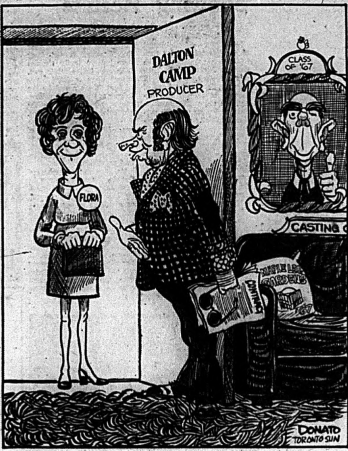
The prime minister has been just as lax in keeping in touch personally with American presidents. His two visits to former president Nixon in 1969 and President Ford last year were "quicky" meetings, scarcely enough to cover all the problem areas which have developed between Canada and the U.S. during the 70s.

Mr. Trudeau like the prime minister before him has been committed to the widest possible trade diversification for Canada, though talking more about our trade options in other parts of the world, China, Russia, the Third World than any of his predecessors.

But the harsh fact of our trading life remain. We are and will probably remain the best customer of the United States and they with us.

Or as one of the newsmen who has gone to Europe with the prime minister's mission said in Ottawa on departure, "the visit isn't exactly going to be stop-the-press news in Europe."

Nor should we expect it to be.



'COME IN, MY DEAR!'

Bernadette Devlin Re-Emerges With a New Party Allegiance Dedicated to Socialist Ireland

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — In the long chronicle of atrocities which have plagued Northern Ireland since 1969, few events are more chilling than the latest bizarre twist in the bloody saga.

The new conflict pits a handful of Roman Catholics against Catholics, republicans against republicans and in the space of little more than a week it has left two men murdered and more than 20 wounded, beaten or with holes drilled into their kneecaps as punishment.

The brutal campaign started last Dec. 8 with a little-publicized split in the Official wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

The Officials form the Marxist and more moderate wing of the IRA and they have been observing a truce with the British army for nearly three years, a move now being emulated in half-hearted fashion by the Provisional, or extreme, wing of the movement.

And the most prominent figure to emerge in the present conflict is Bernadette Devlin, the fiery young former member of the British Parliament who was one of the best-known leaders of the anti-British movement at the height of the Northern Ireland troubles two years ago.

She later retired into obscurity to have a baby and become Mrs. Michael McAlisky: housewife and mother.

But Bernadette now is back in the public eye, with all her fierce eloquence, as a founder of the Irish Republican Socialist Party (IRSP).

The breakaway IRSP is steeped in Marxist philosophy with a strong streak of what amounts to a kind of romantic nationalism common to all left-wing republican movements.

When it was formed from a split with the Officials in December, the IRSP said its aim was to reunify Northern Ireland and the Irish republic in a democratic Socialist republic, with workers controlling the means of production, distribution and exchange.

In itself this was little different from the line taken by the Officials but the key to the worsening dispute in the ranks was the IRSP's further statement that the main IRA body had become old, tired and revisionist instead of revolutionary.

In most countries, debates such as this would either go unnoticed or have academic interest only. Not so in Northern Ireland, where arguments are more often settled permanently with an outburst of death and violence.

The IRSP launched a campaign at the beginning of the year to encourage defections to their organization from the Officials. The Officials, in turn, responded by publicly describing the IRSP as a band of sectarian fanatics whose aim was to join the Provisionals in a campaign of violence against the British troops.

The new organization denied this and its recruitment drive gained momentum under Mrs. McAliskey and others.

Finally, last week, the inevitable happened. Hugh Ferguson, an IRSP branch chairman in Belfast was murdered on the street outside his home. The Officials, predictably, denied responsibility. Security forces were unconvinced.

IRSP leaders said the Officials had indisputably killed Ferguson. But they added there would be no reprisals against the IRA.

Within days, however, another IRSP member, Sean Fox, was murdered with a bullet through the back of his head and reports proliferated of the Officials' brutal intimidation and torture of people they suspected were sympathetic with the aims of the breakaway group.

The reaction of a spokesman for the Official IRA in Belfast? "Feeling is running high," he said. "I am afraid that more people have yet to die."

Return of John Wintermeyer Is An Ontario Election Possibility

By DON O'HEARN

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — There has been a rumor around that former Liberal leader John Wintermeyer will run again, or at least would like to run again, in the next election.

The rumor from all I can find out is true, at least to the extent that he would like to be back in politics.

Not as leader. One strong characteristic of Mr. Wintermeyer was that he had no strong personal ambition for power.

It was more or less a circumstance of the particular times that he became leader when he did and it is safe to say that he isn't looking for leadership openings.

But he is one of those men who are born for politics. And in his case it is for the best of reasons in that to him it is the way in which he can best give public service.

In the next election apparently there is a riding that he could win.

It is a new seat that is being established in the Kitchener area through redistribution.

It is partly rural and above all it is beyond the influence of the insurance industry and the bigot section of Kitchener which was responsible for the defeat of Wintermeyer in 1963.

From what one hears, however, the problem is in the nomination.

The president of the local riding association according to the word may be after the nomination himself. And in his position, and he already stepped aside once from a federal nomination, he probably could win it.

No matter how good a man he could be, I would hope that he doesn't get it and that the former leader does.

For John Wintermeyer definitely would be an ornament to the house and to the Liberal benches.

Actually I don't like that word ornament.

What I want to say really is that he has a great contribution to make not only to his party but to the house itself.

The contribution that he made to our provincial affairs has never really been known, less appreciated.

Actually he and Bob Macaulay were probably the two most far-sighted men the legislature has seen in the last years.

As just one example Wintermeyer personally probably gets at least 95 per cent credit for the GO transit system now established and spreading through the province.

He personally went to see Donald Gordon, then president of the CNR twice and persuaded him he had to go along with his commuter concept.

Also he was one of the best debaters we have known.

There is one factor that could swing some influence in getting him the riding.

This is that if he were elected and the Liberals won he definitely would be in the cabinet.

But a newcomer wouldn't.

Bob Nixon would have to appoint both Jim Breithaupt and Edward Good the other two Kitchener areas to ministries.

And he couldn't put in a third man from the same area except in an exceptional case such as Mr. Wintermeyer would be.

Ramifications of Lower Interest

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Interest rates, as you may have read, are coming down.

Here's what that means to consumers:

—If you are a saver, you will receive a lower return. On non-chequing savings accounts, for example, the typical chartered bank will pay you 6.5 per cent, vs. the 7.25 per cent rate it had been paying up until now.

—But if you are a borrower, you will probably continue to pay the same high rate as before. With luck, you might be in for a slight cut—but don't count on it.

Even though several banks have cut their prime lending rate — the interest charged to their most credit-worthy business borrowers—to nine per cent from 10.5 per cent as recently as January, the interest charged on consumers' term loans has remained at 13.5 per cent in most banks, unchanged since last May.

It's possible that there may soon be a reduction—but not to the extent that the prime rate has been cut.

On mortgage loans, the prospect for relief is slightly brighter.

Mortgage lending is a more competitive activity, and the demand for mortgages has been weakened by the slowdown in residential construction.

If you are going to be seeking a mortgage loan soon, you will probably find it profitable to take advantage of that weakness by shopping around among the various competitors.

While a fraction of a percentage point may not seem like much, even a quarter-point difference in the interest rate on a long-term loan can be a substantial sum over the life of the contract.

A good starting point is to compare the rates being quoted by the chartered banks, by the trust-and-loan firms, and (if you are eligible) by the credit unions.

The real-estate agent with whom you deal may have another suggestion. But before acting on it, compare it with the costs that other lenders are charging.

Some home-buyers airily ignore the interest rate they are paying, and concentrate instead on what they consider to be the only figure that matters—the monthly payment on the mortgage.

While that may be a bit too cavalier, it is true that the interest rate is not the only factor to consider when you are buying the long-term use of somebody else's money.

Study the mortgage contract. Look, for instance, for the right to pre-pay part of the principal from time to time, without financial penalty.

With that privilege, you have an incentive to whittle down the size of your loan and make worthwhile savings on your interest cost.

With mortgage rates in the two-figure range and almost sure to stay there, most home-buyers would agree that it makes sense to borrow as little as possible.

In some circumstances, financial assistance from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. or from provincial agencies is available to help reduce the size of the needed mortgage.

Human Side of Parliamentary Life

By JIM POLING

OTTAWA (CP) — Random jottings from Parliament Hill on a dreary late-winter day:

A prominent victim of the federal blue-collar workers' strike is Mitchell Sharp, the cabinet minister who co-ordinates government business in the Commons.

Mr. Sharp, 63, regularly dons the blades to skate off frustrations on the Rideau Canal. But the canal is plowed and flooded by the blue-collar workers and the ice has been unskatable since the strike started.

However, the strike is not totally to blame for ruining the fun of Mr. Sharp and thousands of other skaters. Recent rainfalls rotted the ice, making skating before next winter doubtful.

Being dropped from the cabinet does have compensations, such as having more time to spend with the family.

Herb Gray, fired as consumer and corporate affairs minister last summer, apparently has discovered this benefit.

Last week, Mr. Gray was observed lunching far from the high-powered political luncheon parlors of Parliament Hill. His guest at a south Ottawa family restaurant was his young son, whom he had just picked up at nursery school.

The conversation was not as stimulating as on Parliament Hill, nor was the food as cheap, but Mr. Gray appeared to enjoy himself immensely.

The cabinet, now free of the shackles of minority government, has contracted a travel bug of epidemic proportion.

No sooner had Justice Minister Otto Lang returned from Nigeria Wednesday when Prime Minister Trudeau left for a two-week visit to Europe. External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen is off to Africa in April, Finance Minister John Turner plans a trip to the Middle East, Trade Minister Alastair Gillespie will visit Cuba and Venezuela while Environment Minister Jeanne Sauve has scheduled a trip to Europe.

Back at work in the Commons are Conservatives Jim Gillies (Toronto Don Valley), recovering from a recent illness, and Gerald Baldwin, the 68-year-old Opposition House leader who took a month off to rest. Also back in full swing and appearing no worse for wear is Revenue Minister on Basford, who spent several weeks in hospital late last year for pain in his hands.

There was what Solicitor-General Warren Allmand termed "a settling of accounts" between MPs and the Parliamentary Press Gallery this week.

The reporters and the MPs fought it out on a Hull hockey rink Wednesday night and the parliamentarians emerged with a 63 win. Mr. Allmand, 42, and an excellent hockey player, was the chief architect of the win.

The drone of debate in the Commons finally has been broken by the sweet sound of music. Wednesday night, while members were being called in for a vote, Gus MacFarlane (L—Hamilton Mountain) opened his deep voice and sang opera. The jovial MP, who has Caruso's frame plus a little extra, attracted an appreciative crowd.

At the end of the First World War, the capital city of Constantinople was controlled by the Allies and the Greek army marauded the Black Sea coast. Mustafa Kemal Pasha organized a rival government in Ankara and repudiated the Sultan, who showed no signs of defending the nation. First Quinte-area Labor Course Offered at Loyalist College

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

A certificate course in labor studies, the first of its kind in this area, will be introduced at Loyalist College this autumn.

The announcement was made Saturday morning by Herb Young, college president, during his opening remarks to the two-day labor studies institute sponsored by the Quinte District Labor Council.

Mr. Young related the course resulted from action by the labor studies action committee, a college advisory group composed of representatives of the labor movement in the area served by the college.

Citing it as an "ambitious and worthwhile program," he emphasized the course "will be of a no-nonsense nature."

"Course participants will be required to work hard and we are sure that corresponding benefits will accrue to them," commented Mr. Young.

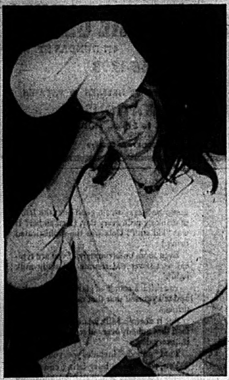
Jim Brechin, director of the weekend institute and also Ontario director of education for the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC), said in an interview following Saturday evening's banquet the 12-week course will be operated through the college's extension division.

Such courses are rare in Canada, he noted. One was recently completed at Sir Sandford Fleming College in Peterborough, another has been running in Niagara Falls for four years and one is slated for later this year in Windsor, he said.

"What we hope to do is have courses at all community colleges doing the same thing.", said Mr. Brechin. "Someday I hope the credits will be recognized by the universities."

He said the CLC at present is negotiating with McMaster University in Hamilton for a master degree in a union course. "The senate has agreed in principle and they are setting up a committee to negotiate with the labor congress to set up such a program," he stated.

Mr. Brechin remarked he hopes eventually there will be full-time students "who will take their doctorate in union administration, labor history, economy and public relations."



Whew! It's Over

Chef Don Derochie, a second-year Loyalist student in the hotel-motel management course, breathes a sigh of relief as he puts his feet up for a rest Saturday night after cooking for almost 150 people at the labor studies institute banquet in the college cafeteria. It was the first major undertaking of the year for the course students.

Labor Seminars Offer Aid to Local Unions

By holding labor studies institutes, such as the weekend event sponsored by the Quinte District Labor Council in conjunction with Loyalist College, the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) gets close to its members, says Jim Brechin, Ontario director of education for the CLC.

"Through our congress education program, we reach a higher percentage of the labor movement than any other ...," pointed out Mr. Brechin in an interview following Saturday evening's banquet.

Ian Reilly, institute chairman, said 120 are unionists registered Saturday from as far away as Bancroft. They took courses in union administration and public speaking, shop stewards training and unemployment insurance.

He explained the institute was run at Loyalist for the first time, with co-operation from the college's extension division. Partcipants were enrolled as students for the two-day seminars which ended at 1 p.m. Sunday.

"In recent years, the trend has been to hold them through the extension divisions of the community colleges," noted Mr. Reilly.

Mr. Brechin said Loyalist "has given us 100 per cent co-operation. I think they're a credit to the community college system."

He related the CLC has developed a working relationship with many of the province's colleges but there are still a couple "who want no part of us."

Mr. Reilly explained the expertise gained by the students will augment the education of those in union positions.

"They take it back to their local unions and put it to use," he said. "It makes the member that much more aware of what's going on."

"We felt we would have had 150-200 people except for the number of recent layoffs in this area," Mr. Reilly added.

Citizens Aid Officer

Two alert area residents assisted a city policeman, who had collapsed by the side of his patrol car early today.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said Norris Easton of RR 7, Belleville and Clifford LaRue of Shannonville discovered Constable Paul Smith unconcious on Dundas St. W. near Advanced Cleaners at 5.53 a.m.

"We got a call over the police radio by a strange voice which stated a policeman had collapsed," he said. Police responded and found Constable Smith holding his head.

He was taken to Belleville General Hospital and admitted for 24-hour observation. Chief Crosbie said Constable Smith has been taking medication for a back problem but it is not known if this is the cause of his collapse.

As for the two "good Samaritans", Chief Crosbie remarked, "I think it was very fine of them to assist."

Cooking for 150 Guests Keeps Students Hopping

The hotel-motel management course students were pressed into service for their first major assignment of the 1974-75 Loyalist College year Saturday.

They acted as caterers to the labor studies institute at the college and had to serve almost 150 people at an evening banquet in the cafeteria.

Aside from inexperience, the task might have been easier if the kitchen was closer to the cafeteria.

However, the kitchen, which serves Club 213, the students' classroom and college dining lounge, is separated from the cafeteria by a long distance of winding corridors

Student Ray Rush, cataring manager, commented, "we had to keep the food hot. The student were running."

Mr. Rush's staff included three second and third-year course students plus four student helpers from other college programs.

In addition, it was a long day for them as three arrived at 9 a.m. to serve coffee and the rest were in by 2 p.m. to assist in banquet preparations, he said.

Following the banquet, there was a dance with a bar manned by the students so they did not leave until after 1 a.m. Sunday, pointed out Mr. Rush.

However, he described the day as "very good" experience.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance in a three-day period ending at 8 a.m. today:

Friday, Feb. 28, 1.48 p.m. — Belleville Collegiate and Vocational Institute automatic alarm accidentally set off.

Friday, Feb. 28, 2.51 p.m. — Green's Auto Wreckers, fire in old automobile, little damage.

Friday, Feb. 28, 9.13 p.m. — near Bill and Erma's Grocery on Bridge St. W., mail box fire, little damage.

Saturday, March 1, 8.46 p.m. — Alexander St., trash fire beside hydro pole, no damage.

Sunday, March 2, 8.03 p.m. — Quinte Drive-In Restaurant on Cannifton Rd., garbage disposal container fire, 50 gallons of water used to extinguish it, little damage.

Police Seek Link In Weekend Thefts

BANCROFT A series of incidents involving vandalism, break and enter and theft which occurred during the early morning hours Sunday, are believed by the Bancroft Provincial Police to be related.

Corporal Joe Beaubien of the local detachment of the OPP said an arrest has been made following the reports of the incidents on Sunday morning, however no names have been released.

The investigating officers, G. Phillips and Ken Withers, reported that at approximately 4.30 a.m. on March 2, a car parked on the Bay Lake Rd. was entered and a flute, a tire and jack were taken.

Also Sunday, a car parked on the Detlor Rd. near Jamieson Lake was entered and eyeglasses, an eight-track tape player, tapes and a quantity of clothing were taken.

A half-ton truck parked nearby also received the attention of the thieves and a wooden box containing snowmobile helmets, clothing and chains were taken.

The White United Church on the Detlor Rd. had two windows broken during the same period of incidents.

It was also reported that the residence on MacGillivary Lake on Highway 500 East was entered and three guns were taken.

Following that incident, a half-ton truck owned by Arthur Cooney had the front windshield shot out by a high-calibre gun.

The new studio of CJNH also received the attention of the vandals when the light outside the door was broken.

The Bancroft OPP report that a portion of the stolen property was recovered and the investigation is still continuing.

Labor Speakers Hard to Get

Securing a guest speaker for Saturday evenings banquet of the labor studies institute at Loyalist College proved a difficult chore for the sponsoring Quinte District Labor Council.

Ian Reilly, education committee chairman, said Jim Brechin, Ontario director of education for the Canadain Labor Congress (CLC) and one of the institute instructors, volunteered earlier in the day after two other invited speakers were forced to bow out.

Mr. Reilly related the Quinte council first asked Shirley Carr, CLC executive vice-president, but she was then invited to France by that country's president to address an International Womens Year conference.

In her place, she selected John Simons, CLC executive secretary, but he had to handle funeral ararngements for Claude Jordan, former CLC president, who died early Saturday.

Service Station Entered

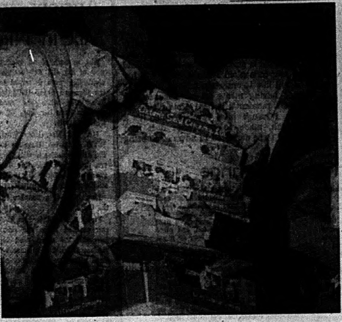
City police are investigating two break and enter incidents which occurred in the city during the weekend.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said today unknown thieves broke into A and D Esso on Dundas St. E. sometime between 6 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m. Sunday and stole $17 in cash plus a carton of cigarettes.

Entry was gained by forcing a pane of glass on the east side of the building, he said.

And at 12.40 a.m. today, Constable Bob Thompson discovered a broken door at the Belleville fairgrounds in the lower section of the grandstand on the west end.

He found the canteen had been entered but it is not known yet if anything was stolen, said Chief Crosbie.



Seed Seekers

Ephraim and Bertha Ray, Wallbridge Rd. couple seek seeds for garden they've grown for years. This year, though, they'll have plenty of company. Local suppliers say demand for vegetable seeds is already above the sudden 1974 boom as more people grown their own food.

Higher Food Costs Up Demand for Garden Seeds

Vegetable garden seeds are already sprouting a bumper crop of consumers.

Demand from householders intent on growing their own supplies already is running way ahead of last season — the year when high food prices spurred a scurry back to the backyard vegetable plot.

Now, they're coming back for more — more seeds, more varieties — and bringing more people with them.

"Last year we practically doubled our vegetable seed business," sayd Bruce Bishop, of Bishop's Seeds. To date, demand from the same time in 1974 has tripled, he estimates.

"I don't know whether we're getting all our business now and less later. People are concerned about supply so that generates earlier buying."

Don Thrasher, owner of Thrasher Feeds, another major supply centre, said demand this year started "a good three weeks" ahead of last year.

Such is the enthusiasm that home-growers are placing advance orders without even knowing the prices.

For instance: Seeds for onions don't arrive until April, says Mr. Thrasher. And prices can't be quoted because costs have not yet been firmly defined.

Yet 25 per cent of the firm's onion seed supply is "already booked," he says.

He estimates new business is running 25 per cent for all vegetable varieties over last year.

Mr. Bishop, partner with his brother Bill, in the 85-year-old family business says he believes supplies will meet demand — despite bad-weather setbacks in some United States' garden-seed producing areas.

The one problem may be with choice. Growers will be able to get the vegetables they want although they may have to settle for a different variety of the same species, says Mr. Bishop.

Prices are up — although not as much to the buyer as the business, he indicates.

"Our own basic (wholesale) costs are up more than triple from two years ago," says Mr. Bishop.

Take 3

Both suppliers agree on reasons for the continued — and growing — popularity.

But the continued — and still growing — popularity of produce gardening this year may not have as much to do with inflation, which gave such initial impetus to the projects, both suppliers agree.

People last year may have set out to beat high food prices — and found themselves a new interest. Now, many likely are extending their plots. They're also travelling less, have more spare time, and it's going to gardening.

Mr. Bishop estimates the number of garden plots could well have tripled by this year.

He compares it to the Second World War when people were encouraged to grow their own food — and help win the war.

"You remember the victory gardens? This is the same type of thing," he says.

Three Held After High-Speed Chase

Three Montreal youths have been charged with theft following a high-speed chase on Highway 2 in a stolen car.

Charged are Stephen Lachance, 17, Barry McGill, 18 and Randy Pio, 16.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said the action began about 3 a.m. Sunday morning with the theft of a quantity of gasoline from Wayfare Restaurant at the junction of Highways 401 and 37.

While searching for the vehicle involved westbound on Highway 401, Constable Brian Skinner spotted the car and gave chase.

He pursued the car off Highway 401, down Wooler Rd. and west on Highway 2 where the car turned off its ligrts but still maintained speeds as high as 80 miles per hour.

Constable Skinner lost the car in the darkness but it was finally stopped just east of Cobourg by the OPP detachment there. The suspects were returned to Belleville by about 7 a.m.

The provincial police spokesman said the car had been stolen sometime Saturday in Montreal. Name of the owner was not immediately known.

Yoga Expert To Visit

A leading yoga expert is due in Belleville soon for a workshop expected to draw participants from a wide area.

The workshop — including yoga classes and a seminar — is set for March 8 at Centennial Secondary School.

Scheduled to take part is Marie Paulyn, director of a Toronto school in hatha yoga — the physical process of yoga — and an internationally-recognized expert on the exercise.

Don Birnie another leading expert will also attend the event, sponsored by Trenton and Belleville recreation departments.

More than 100 registrations have already been received for the program, expected to draw participants from Toronto to Arnprior.

Blast Claims Second Victim

The Feb. 21 explosion at the Constellation Carpet plant in the city's east end has claimed a second victim.

Hotel Dieu Hospital officials in Kingston confirmed today Lorenzo Harrington, 50, of RR 5, Madoc, plant engineer, died Sunday at 1:30 a.m.

He had been in critical condition with burns to 75 per cent of his body.

Still in flar condition in the hospital's burn unit with burns to 50 per cent of his body is Archie Champman 54, of RR 5, Madoc while Alan Merpaw, 25, of Cornwall remains in satisfactory condition with burns to 15 per cent of his body.

Jean Guy Massia, 25 of Cornwall died about four hours after the explosion in the plant's electrical room from burns to 95 per cent of his body. Two other employees were treated and released from Belleville General Hospital the same day.

Kingston Coroner Dr. Clifford R. Meyer said today no decision has been made on an inquest, but hinted one would probably be called.

"It is likely we will go to an inquest but the decision has not been made," commented Dr. Meyer.

Patient Stay Reduced

New surveillance polices — aimed at improving availability of beds at Belleville General Hospital — could be proving effective.

But administration officials are still watching for further results.

In January, patients needing active treatment spent less time — on average — more than a day — in the hospital than the same month last year, BGH board of gvernors learned Friday.

Improving utilization of beds has been a long-drawn pre-occupation of the hospital's administration.

In January, there was a "satisfactory drop" in length of stay of active treatment patients to 8.75 days, reported Dr. R.M. Anderson, medical director.

This compared with 10.33 days — the average for January 1974 and the whole of last year.

But other statistics showed the pressure for beds remained the same in both months, said Dr. Anderson.

Therefore the decline could be the result of "new measures of bed surveillance" started when the year began, he said.

But he cautioned, "obviously it's too early to draw any conclusions.

Quinte Cuisine

A social worker who was one of the early organizers of Belleville's Big Brothers' Association, Joan Becks is also mother of three-year-old Lisa and four-month-old Michael. She and her husband Bill like to entertain friends, and have found that having meals on hand makes that possible at a moment's notice. This recipe for Chicken a l'Orange is a favorite, since it's a double-batch, made-to-be-frozen dish that doesn't need to be defrosted in advance of being heated.

two 3-lb. broiler fryer chickens cut in quarters ½ cup flour
salt and pepper
paprika
one large onion, thinly sliced
½ cup chopped green pepper
one cup mushroom pieces
two cups orange juice
¼ cup dry sherry
one tbsp. brown sugar
three-quarters tsp. salt
one large orange, thinly sliced one tbsp. water
one tbsp. cornstarch

Heat oven to 375 degrees.

Cut chicken into quarters, wash and dry. Coat with the flour, and sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika.

Divide the chicken in two equal lots. Put each half in an oblong pan (12 by nine by 2½ inches).

Spread one half of the onions, green pepper and mushrooms over each, on top of the chicken.

Mix together orange juice, sherry, brown sugar and salt in a small saucepan. Place over moderate heat until the mixture comes to a boil. Pour half this mixture over each of the pans of chicken.

Arrange orange slices over the chicken. Cover both pans with aluminum foil, and place in oven for one hour or more, until fork-tender.

(If you are serving dinner for four, use one pan of chicken and freeze the other. To freeze, cool completely and wrap for the freezer. To heat after freezing, place the covered pan in a 350 degree oven for 45 minutes and then increase the heat to 400 degrees, remove the cover and heat for 40 additional minutes, basting occasionally.)

Remove chicken from the pan and place on a heat-resistant platter in the oven. Skim off the excess fat from the sauce in the pan. Mix together the water and cornstarch and add gradually into the sauce. Cook over moderately low heat until it thickens to a gravy. Pour the gravy over the chicken on the platter, and serve with rice.

Ancient and Modern Mix in Nigerian Town

The mixture of an ancient way of life and 20th century civilization were described to the Women's Study Guild by Eva Wien when she read excerpts from her dairy of a trip to Nigeria.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Wien, RR 1, Belleville, travelled to the African nation to visit their son Cris who is spending five years at the International Institute of Tropical Agriculture.

Mrs. Wien is a member of the Guild.

Flying from Amsterdam, the pair reached Lagos and then took the 100 miles road to Ibadan. Enroute they encountered unbelieavalbe number of overloaded cars, trucks, buses, motorcycles and colorfullly garbed persons carrying heavy loads on their heads and dragging goats. Mud huts with corrugated iron roofs were passed along with billboards advertising Coca-Cola and Bata Shoes.

Inside the gates of the International Institute, Mrs. Wien told the women it was different world.

With the aid of the world Bank, several foundations and the United Nations Development Program, along with 13 governments, eight international research centres have been founded through out the world This center, created in 1968, focuses on farming systems for the humids tropics The 2,200 acres institute are farmed with techniques to improve yields and increase nutritional quality of basic food crops.

Mrs. Wien said her son is working on grain legumes, particularly cowpeas. Experiments have already achieved yields six times as high as the current average.

Mrs. Wien said she saw many interesting birds and curious non-water birds walking on water-lily pads at a nearby reservoir.

There were white egrets on the lawn and from the forest on the opposite shore there could be heard the chirping of thousands of bats sleeping in the palm tree.

For shopping, they traveled to Ibadan where open markets boast everything from motorbikes to fruits. There is no electricity, no running water, no sewers and sewage floats along the road in ditches.

"I wanted very much to have no nose nor sense of smell," she said.

Mrs. Tien added that children shouted "white man white man" at the sight of them, using the word for "peeled person".

In another direction, they visited small villages where tiny fields are cultivated by hoe.

At the meeting hostesses were Catherine Roulet and Nancy Millar. Jill Cox presided at the meeting.

World Day of Prayer Observed in Canada And 170 Other Lands

World Day of Prayer will be observed Friday March 7 at Bridge Street United Church beginning at 2 p.m.

There will be a nursery provided.

Theme of this year's World Day of Prayer is "Become Perfectly One", a service prepared in the United Arab Republic.

More than 3,000 communities in Canada and 170 countries around the world will observe this interdemoninational day of prayer and fellowship.

It is sponsored in Canada by the Women's Inter-church Council, and it supports ecumenical programs both in Canada and abroad with offerings collected.

The Inter-church Council is a group of Christians with equal representation from denominations who wish to belong.

It gives "expression to the commitments and concerns of ecumentical endeavors," and encourages co-operative programs among church-oriented groups.

The World Day of Prayer, which it sponsors in Canada, is the result of the 1918 vision of a group of Christian women who saw the entire world united in prayer and fellowship for one day. It is traditionally the first Friday in March.

Each year services are prepared by a different national committee and then adapted for Canadians.

Back a Fighter!

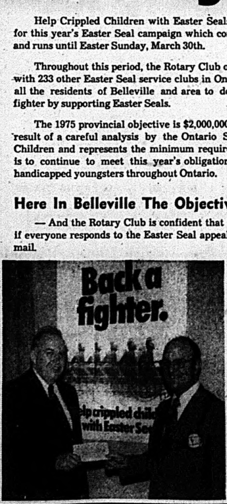
Help Crippled Children with Easter Seals. That is the theme for this year's Easter Seal campaign which commences March 3rd and runs until Easter Sunday, March 30th.

Throughout this period, the Rotary Club of Belleville together with 233 other Easter Seal service clubs in Ontario, will be urging all the residents of Belleville and area to do just that: Back a fighter by supporting Easter Seals.

The 1975 provincial objective is $2,000,000. This amount is the result of a careful analysis by the Ontario Society of Crippled Children and represents the minimum requirement if the society is to continue to meet this year's obligations to almost 12,000 handicapped youngsters throughout Ontario.

Here In Belleville The Objective Is $12,000

— And the Rotary Club is confident that this can be achieved if everyone responds to the Easter Seal appeal they receive in the mail.



Back a fighter.
with Easter Se...

The people of this area have never let the youngsters of Belleville and area down in the past. So back a fighter and help crippled children with Easter Seals by sending in that donation today.

If anyone fails to receive their Easter Seals over these next few weeks, a call to the Club's Easter Seat Chairman Mr. Lloyd Hicks at 968-7234 will correct the oversight.

Lloyd Hicks (right) Chairman of the Rotary Club Easter Seal Committee starts off the campaign by presenting the first set of Easter Seals to Bob Graham, President of the Rotary Club of Belleville.

The 6 good reasons are the six important nutrients contained in milk. You need them all for health. No other food provides them all...in such perfect proportion. Here they are:

1. Protein. It isn't overstatement to say that protein is what we're made of: the body's basic "building block" at all ages. You probably didn't know that milk is an excellent source of protein. The best type of protein for your needs!

2. Calcium. You don't need calcium just during the years your bones and teeth are forming. You need it to keep those bones and teeth healthy throughout adult life. And milk is the best, and most widely available, source of calcium.

3. Phosphorus and calcium work together in the lifelong task of maintaining good bone and tooth condition. So it's nice to know that milk is also an excellent source of phosphorus.

4. Riboflavin, one of the B Vitamins, is a factor in the general health of adults as well as of children. An excellent source of it is found in milk.

5. Vitamin A is also required for your good health. Whole milk is an excellent source of it; but skim milk drinkers will need to get their Vitamin A from other foods.

6. Thiamine is another health factor which your body needs each day...just as it did when you were a child. Milk is classed as a "good" dietary source of thiamine.

There they are: six nutrients you, as an adult, must have to keep your health. And one easy place to find them all: in any, and every, glass of whole milk you drink.

Do you drink at least one every day? Probably not. And here's probably why not.

The perils of growing up.

What happened when you entered your teens? Just what happened to most other Canadian teen-agers: you stopped taking your cues in dress and behaviour from your parents, and began to take them from members of your own age group.

As they did, you did. As they dressed, you dressed (and when you think back on some of those outfits, you probably cringe!)

But it all had its meaning: you were putting away the habits of childhood, getting ready to grow up.

Unfortunately, one of the habits your group put away was a good one: the habit of drinking milk every day. (Remember? It was "kid stuff". Cola was the sophisticated drink.)

Even more unfortunately, if you are typical, you never did resume the daily milk habit.

You drink a couple of glasses every week—and tell yourself that that makes you a milk drinker.

But it doesn't. Milk is such an important food that nobody ever outgrows the need for it...every day.

That "nobody" includes you, you know.

You, who are so busy being concerned about your family's nutrition that you haven't stopped to think about your own.

Get back to basics.

No doubt about it, milk is one of the most fundamental foods. Nutritionally speaking, it is absolutely in a class by itself.

Milk provides more of the nutrients you need for health...and provides them in a more balanced way...than any other everyday food.

Adding a glass or two of milk to each day's food intake, therefore, is probably the biggest single nutritional favour you can do yourself.

And one of the easiest—you don't cook or mix, you just pour and drink.

And, still, one of the most economical. In spite of recent price increases, you get more all-round nutritional value per penny from milk than from any other basic food you buy.

One more tidbit: for all its high food value, milk has a surprisingly moderate calorie count.

In terms of the nutrition it delivers per calorie, in fact, milk simply can't be beaten!

Does that sound like a food that you can afford to go on ignoring?

You bet it doesn't.

"Today's the first day of the rest of your life."

So start today, maybe even right this minute, to make milk a regular part of your life. At least once a day. Every day.

Remember, there are six very good reasons for doing so.

Protein, calcium, phosphorus, riboflavin, Vitamin A, thiamine.

Ann Landers

Cancer 'Scare' Also Saved Lives

Dear Ann Landers: The emotional damage to my nerves has been far greater than the risk of undetected breast cancer—thanks to all the publicity since Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Rockefeller have had mastectomies.

The media have had such a field day with those two women that I examine my breasts twice a day for lumps although I've been to three physicians in the past two months and they've all told me my breasts are normal.

How many other women in this country have been scared out of their wits by this spate of publicity? I'll bet millions. It's impossible to pick up a newspaper or magazine without reading something about breast cancer that makes every woman think, "I'm next."

Will you please comment and give me peace of mind? I have another appointment with a cancer clinic next week—Terrified in Tarrytown

Dear T: Cancel that cancer clinic appointment and make one with a psychiatrist. You are obsessed with the fear of breast cancer and it's going to take a few sessions with a good therapist to get you squared away.

For every woman who was scared out of her wits, thousands were moved to get their breasts examined. Out of those thousands, several hundred lives were saved because the cancer was discovered early—and yours might have been one of them. So don't knock it, Lady.

Dear Ann Landers: I couldn't believe your dumb answer to the mother whose husband could never remember to put the toilet lid down. Their five-year-old daughter frequently got up during the night and fell in. The kid got her pyjamas wet and woke her mother up at two and three o'clock in the morning to be "changed."

Your advice was, "A five-year-old girl is old enough to learn how to check a toilet seat before she sits down and falls in."

A five-year-old who gets up at two o'clock in the morning is doing pretty well to find the bathroom, much less remember to check the seat. Why didn't you tell the mother to check the seat before she turned in for the night? Apparently her husband is an inconsiderate slob and she has to do the thinking for the whole family.—Dizzapointed.

Dear Diz: You are right. I should have advised the mother to do a final night-check before turning in. Sometimes the solution is so simple it escapes my notice. Thanks for putting me straight.

Dear Ann Landers: I owe you something. I'm going to pay off today. Right now. It's a great big thank-you for changing my life.

A year ago, I was in a marriage that was becoming intolerable, but the thought of divorce was too frightening and painful.

One phrase kept cropping up in your column and it made sense: "Ask yourself, would my life be better or worse without him?" I couldn't get those words out of my mind. Finally I mustered the courage to file for divorce.

I am now supporting our sons by working two jobs, but my life is 10 times better without him. I feel healthier and calmer inside than I have in years. Thank you, Ann Landers, for that wonderful counsel. It was intended for others, but it worked for me. Life without depression and anxiety is beautiful.—Sunny

Dear Sunny: I'm glad I helped. Letters such as yours give me reassurance that I am getting through and performing a useful service.

Empty Hospital Beds in Fort Smith Reflect Suspicion, Not Good Health

FORT SMITH, N.W.T. (CP) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde is pleased that the 35-bed hospital in this community just north of the Alberta border is not often filled.

"It is an indication that the people are healthy," he said during a winter visit to the northern territories.

But Chief Henry Beaver of the Fort Smith Indian band sees it differently.

The people are afraid," said the chief.

Suspicion, he said, often keeps older Indians away from government doctors.

"Maybe they had a bad experience with the government in the past and want nothing to do with the government doctor," he said.

"Or if they know that a doctor is not too good and they don't trust him, they are going to say: 'To hell with the doctor, I'd rather die at home.'"

Chief Beaver said there now are three federally-employed doctors in Fort Smith "and when they are off duty, they are off duty."

"If you get sick and call up after five, they ask why you didn't go to the clinic when it was open.

"Our body systems are not built like clocks. We can't set them so that nothing goes wrong before eight in the morning or after five at night.

"At night when they have the nurses working in the hospital, they lock the doors. They are afraid of people coming in and beating them up or something."

The young, soft-spoken Indian leader, who was elected chief last summer, was concerned that Mr. Lalonde was seeing only one aspect of life here during his first tour of northern health facilities.

"If the minister had more time, I would like to show him some housing, the stuff that the people are living in."

Mr. Lalonde's tour did not include inspection of any housing, although native leaders in most of the settlements he visited said poor accommodation is a major contributing factor to native ill health.

Jim Antoine, 25-year-old chief of the Fort Simpson band, expressed similar sentiments.

"Life in Simpson isn't very pleasant for the native people," he said. "The whites live one way in their fancy, subsidized housing and the native people live another way."

Chief Antoine said the band council wants native representation on the staff of the 12-bed hospital in his community.

"We are the majority and yet there are no native people on the staff of the hospital. The feeling is really uneasy.

"We want them (the whites) to recognize the difference between native and white society and respect that difference."

Chief Antoine chuckled after Mr. Lalonde's meeting in Fort Simpson with band members and the hospital staff.

"It looked like we were all old friends, sitting there socializing and all. I had never met the head nurse until today."

Dr. F. J. Covill, director of federal health services in the Northwest Territories, shrugged off suggestions that some native people are suspicious of government doctors.

"I'm sure that is not widely believed," he said. "Some of the youngsters may, shall we say, be less than happy with the government because they are part of a movement."

On the question of hiring more native staff, Dr. Covill was blunt: "There just are not enough native people coming forward. You can't make people come and be trained."

However, Mr. Lalonde was told in Inuvik, on the Mackenzie River delta, that while native community health workers are available, "medical personnel have little understanding of how to use their present abilities and potential."

The Committee for Original Peoples Entitlement (COPE) said in a brief to the health minister that there is a fundamental lack of understanding and communication between the federal health service and native residents of Inuvik and outlying settlements.

"Native organizations and individuals have offered to aid the hospital with these communications problems but their offers are rarely accepted," the brief said.

"Interpreters are used haphazardly both in the hospital and the settlements when understanding and accurate interpretation is essential. . . .

"Instead of developing a full-time core of trained interpreters, the hospital relies on whoever happens to be available for this important job."

Dr. M. T. Connolly, director of the federal health department's Inuvik zone, said he does not consider communication a problem.

"I don't know why they are making such a big deal about this language thing," he said. "There are very few people in the North who don't speak English."

Dr. Connolly said he moved to Inuvik eight months ago from London, Ont. "and since my arrival here I have never had to get an interpreter."

However, Mr. Lalonde said he would look into the situation "to see whether there shouldn't always be somebody available."

"As far as COPE is concerned, I think they made several points that have to be looked into."

Change in Routine Will Ease Tension

The body is not built to take too much stress always on the same part.

In stress research, we have found that when completion of one particular task becomes impossible, diversion, a voluntary change of activity, is frequently as good as — if not better than — a rest. For example, when either fatigue or enforced interruption prevents us from finishing a mathematical problem, it is better to go for a swim than to just sit around.

The noted American psychologist William James illustrates the utility of diversion by an example which all of us must have experienced at one time or another:

"You know how it is when you try to recollect a forgotten name. Usually you help the recall by working for it, but sometimes the effort fails .. and then the opposite expedient succeeds.

"Give up the effort entirely: think of something different, and in half an hour the lost name comes sauntering into your mind, as Emerson says, as carelessly as if it had never been invited."

"Stress Without Distress"
by Hans Selye.

Dear Doris: In my early 70's, but looking more like 60, I am so depressed I feel desperate. Until two years ago I worked at my son-in-law's business, when he sold it.

I went to sew at Red Cross etc., but never liked bridge or teas, always feeling it a waste of time. I go on trips, have a few friends, but always being in business I really am a "loner".

I always loved to work. I knit and do everything to try to keep busy but still have that terrible feeling of loneliness.

Being Irish, friends always thought I had a good sense of humor, and would never believe that horrible feeling I have each morning when I awaken. I often wish I didn't wake up. I'v eprayed — read "The Power of Positive Thinking", other books. Drive around in the car, take long walks and come home to the same feelings I left with.

Distraught.

Dear Distraught: According to all reports, loneliness and boredom are the two worst plagues of growing old. It takes a lot of re-thinking, and a new look at what age 70 means, to regain contentment. We have been given more years to live; but society downgrades the person who gets older. At 70, Canadians even tend to downgrade themselves.

You have the drive for it, and all your life you have learned to get creative satisfaction out of work. That is why relaxed, social teas seem like a lot of emptiness to you.

Your energy is needed badly somewhere. Whether or not you get paid for a job is beside the point. There are volunteer bureaus, social planning councils, seniors' centres, in most of our communities. Size yourself up, recognize your own skills and offer them where they are needed most. Then keep a schedule just like a work week, only with shorter hours, so that you will not overtire.

The first push will be the hardest — but life can still be sweet for you if you keep believing in yourself and offering the best you have to give.

(Human relations can hurt — or bring happiness. Get Doris, a trained counsellor, to help you handle yours, sending your letter in care of this newspaper.)

LEARN NATURALLY

Looking for a university? A different university?

A young university — modern but not faceless. Large enough to have what you're looking for: small enough so you keep your identity — no big, impersonal classes, no nameless numbers.

A university where you can learn, naturally — without crowds, without hassles — in a part of Ontario that still has room to breathe, space to move around in.

Lakehead University rests at the heart of Canada, in the rugged and glorious Superior Country — set on a strikingly beautiful campus overlooking the city of Thunder Bay, Ontario — a place where Canada's past and future meet in vigorous harmony.

The Thunder Bay area has all the advantages of urban living in the heart of a forest wilderness.

The Canadian shield country around Lakehead is an outdoorsman's paradise. There is canoeing, hiking and backpacking to rival the best anywhere. And, in the winter, the hills are full of skiing — both downhill and cross-country.

Here is a clear, natural alternative to the confining concrete cocoons, the strobing, confusing images of the mega-city landscape.

Sure, at Lakehead University the buildings are well-planned, the classrooms, laboratories and library facilities plentiful and well-stocked. Yes, Lakehead University is young, modern and progressive.

But it's not sterile. It is a dynamic, natural place for learning, growing and being. LU is a place where you can feel you belong.

So, while you're deciding what your future will be, think about Lakehead University — it could be the place for you.

Chapel Built as Memorial

The German archduke, Adolfe of Luxembourg, built this golden-domed chapel in Wiesbaden, West Germany as a memorial to his Duchess Elizabeth of Russia who died at the age of 19. The archduke commissioned the chapel in 1345 and it took 10 years to build. The chapel is set in the woods of the Neroberg in the Taunus Hills above Wiesbaden. (CP Photo)

Church Honoring Princess Is Taj Mahal of Germany

WIESBADEN, West Germany (CP) — Most people never hear of it till they come to Wiesbaden—the Taj Mahal of Germany on the Neroberg in the Taunus Hills above the city.

A German archduke, Adolf of Luxembourg, built it in memory of his beloved Duchess Elizabeth, niece of Czar Nicholas I of Russia. She married the duke in 1844 and died the following year, aged 19.

The archduke commissioned the chapel right after her death and it took 10 years to build. It is known locally as both the Russian Church and the Greek Chapel. A Wiesbaden - architect carried out the plans of a Russian colleague to create the chapel in ancient Greek and Byzantine styles in the shape of a Greek cross.

The sarcophagus of white Italian marble is the work of a Munich sculptor and the figure of the beautiful princess reclines as if in sleep. Her marble draperies are so realistic they look like fine linen. Above her head marble angels keep watch.

The interior is decorated in blue and yellow Egyptian marble; the door pillars are Greek marble and local marble is used in other pillars. German artists did the elaborate screen and ceiling paintings and Russians painted the ikons on silver. Portrait medallions on one wall depict the artists and sculptors who worked on the chapel.

The chapel's golden domes gleam in the sun and through a door of red glass and iron filigree can be seen the Castle of Biedrch down by the Rhine where the duchess spent her brief married life and where she died. Today the castle houses movie production companies and is surrounded by an English park where equestrian tournaments are held every Whitsuntide.

The chapel is set in a woods and a curous way to reach it is by a cable car operated by water, in Rube Goldberg style.

"It costs 30 pfennings a ride and the city loses money on it, but the people around here won't hear of it being replaced," said a local man. "It's the oldest cable car in Germany and I guess it will be going for a long time yet."

The Neroberg surroundings of the chapel are a popular recreational part of the city, laced with hiking and riding paths and equipped with a large swimming pool and tennis courts.

A number of years ago a colony of Russians settled around Wiesbaden and about 200 of them remain. The memorial chapel is their place of worship.

Cancer Cases Are Increasing

HAMILTON (CP) — There are signs that the frequency of cancer is increasing, says a delegate to a recent international congress on the disease.

Dr. C. M. Harlow told a meeting of the Nova Scotia division of the Canadian Cancer Society that advances made in cancer research during this century have made treatment of many kinds of cancer possible, prolonging life and greatly reducing suffering.

But a cure for cancer still is far from discovery. The more than 7,000 delegates attending the congress stressed the need for improved international co-operation.

Although the disease has peaked in some industrialized countries, it is already a public health problem in developing countries which are virtually defenceless against it.

Dr. Harlow said: "It is extremely important to give the developing countries every possible help to arm them against the future threat of cancer.

"With the present status of bio-medical science, it is possible to assert, at least in theory, that solution of the cancer problem can be found within the next decade."

That would require a world-wide, united approach.

There is also an international pattern of types of cancer. Cancer of the esophagus has an extremely high incidence, especially among males, in certain areas: France, China, the West Indies and parts of Africa.

A study in New York showed males with cancer of the esophagus were heavier smokers and drinkers and consumed less milk, eggs and green vegetables than other cancer patients.

Stomach cancer occurs more frequently in Japan, Chile, Austria, Finland and Iceland, mainly among males. The rate there is four or five times that of North America.

"The increased use of laxatives or mineral oil in affected individuals has been noted."

The high rate of stomach cancer in Iceland may be related to the large consumption of smoked food. The Japanese prefer talc-dusted rice and talc may contain asbestos, which is implicated in the development of gastric cancer.

Florida Island Is Paradise Lost

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (CP) — This island, three bridges and about seven miles from downtown Miami, was lush enough in the 1940s to be used as the location for the movie They Were Expendable, about the exploits of PT boats in the Philippines. The biggest business on the island was a coconut plantation.

Later came the bridges, a growing number of well-to-do Miamians, the Richard M. Nixons in the 1950s, the Bebe Rebozos in the 1960s, and development.

The last black man left a year after 566 Bay Lane became the Winter White House in 1968 and the last of the coconut plantation was sold to developers.

The developers included Rebozo and Robert Abplanalp, inventor of the aerosol can.

It was with some relief that residents of the gorgeous island saw Nixon resign as president last year. The first stoplight went up on the island during his period as president. The price of drinks went up. Buildings went up.

The residents were slow to realize that Rebozo and Nixon weren't likely to support a zoning petition to control development. Rebozo became part of the development group a year before Nixon's property purchases and it was Rebozo and Abplanalp who bought the last of the coconut plantation.

Bay Lane, a palm-lined American dream of gorgeous sunsets over Biscayne Bay and sunrises filled with the music of birds, became an armed camp.

Every resident, maid, chauffeur and deliveryman was stopped at a barrier by secret service men, who even forbade a 12-year-old neighbor to fish behind the Nixon home. The bushes were bugged.

"There are times when I wished I'd blown up the bridge years ago," a resident said. "We used to have such a lovely little island."

How far have things gone?

Well, residents were happy recently when, although they couldn't block construction of a Holiday Inn, they did manage to prevent the inn from erecting its usual neon sign.

Tall coconut palms still line the boulevards and, by normal North American standards, Key Biscayne is paradise. Development has been slowed somewhat by recession.

Flipper does stunts, along with overweight whales, at the Seaquarium on Virginia Key between the bridges.

There's a zoo on Key Biscayne itself, with transplanted giraffes looking like tourists on land bombed clean of natural denizens: alligators, opossums, snakes, birds.

They were expendable.

School for Seamen Urged by Mariner

HALIFAX (CP) — There should be a nautical school in Atlantic Canada to train seamen in the basics of ship operation, says Capt. George Burdock, master of the coast guard icebreaker John A. Macdonald.

Capt. Burdock said there is no substitute for apprenticeship when it comes to learning about a ship. "You learn the fundamentals of a ship by doing practical work, by getting your hands dirty and coming up the hard way."

A veteran of 43 years at sea, he said it is no good to learn a lot of theory and expect to start as an officer without any practical knowledge. "You only know too much to go back and not enough to go on and do the job that is required when you are on the ocean."

There were enough federal ships to warrant a nautical school including those of the coast guard, the RCMP, fisheries department and research agencies.

"We've never been marine-mindd. If we were, we would have our own merchant marine fleet."

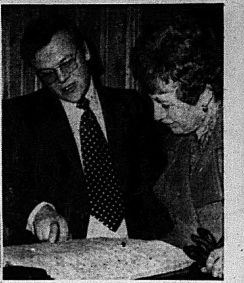
This was difficult to understand in light of Canada's export trade and also having the longest coastline in the world.

A nautical school should be built in a large warehouse with the floor designed like a ship's deck. The students should learn about every working part of a vessel and all the terminology so when they come on board, they will know where they are told to go and what to look for.

"No one knows how cold the water is until they get in it, so theory alone won't make a seaman."

BRUTE STRENGTH WINS

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than a dozen men strained to straighten the collapsed steering wheel of Hans Strohhacker's car after he was trapped behind the wheel in a highway accident. Strohhacker, 35, was released from hospital after treatment for forehead cuts.



Looking Back

Last week the Esquire Men's Wear Shop moved to new headquarters downtown across the street. Taking part in the ceremonies were one of the managers of the place, Jim Dufficy and Mayor Robin Jeffrey. The two are shown looking at a ledger from the 1930s and 1940s of the Quick and Robertson Men's Store which for many years held a prominent place downtown at the present site of the Esquire.

Setbacks Reduced

VICTORIA (CP) — Building setbacks for property adjoining provincial highway in British Columba have been reduced to 15 feet from 25 feet. [illegible] minister Graham Lea said the new regulations permit a setback of only 10 feet for properties having access by a lane or alley.

Read your Tax Guide.
It pays.

Your Income Tax Guide not only helps you understand your tax form better, it helps you to fill it out accurately as well.

And that's important.

Important to you and important to us. Important to us because it allows us to process your return quickly. And important to you because it not only lets you in on every tax advantage you're entitled to, but if you have a refund coming you'll get it sooner.

Here's what happens. Every year during the filing season we get more than eleven million income tax returns. Each one goes into our computer to be checked for accuracy. If the computer discovers even the smallest arithmetic error or discrepancy, your form is automatically rejected to be checked and corrected by hand.

That means getting your tax form processed properly takes extra time, and your refund could be delayed.

Again, here's where your Tax Guide can help. Refer to it while you work on your tax return. (It's a good idea to read it before you fill out your form. That way you familiarize yourself with both the Guide and your return.) Follow it carefully. It's been rewritten to make it easier for you to understand. Make sure your calculations are correct, the right information on the right line, then check and double check using your Tax Guide for reference.

And make sure you take advantage of all the tax provisions, old and new, that can save you money. The Federal Government likes to see you get back every dollar you're entitled to.

We can't guarantee your return will be processed within a certain period of time, but we can guarantee it will be given highest priority if it is done properly and accurately.

If you run into trouble and need more help, Federal District Taxation Office addresses and phone numbers are listed on the back page of your Guide.

Kingston Wins EOCAA

KINGSTON (Special) — After St. Lawrence Kingston had beaten Loyalist in the opening game, Friday, Algonquin, Ottawa, easily handled Durham, from Oshawa 87-59.

Algonquin and St. Lawrence were then set to meet in the Eastern Ontario College Athletics Association championship game on Saturday. Durham and Loyslist were to square off in the consolation championship.

Algonquin held a 35-24 lead at the half but St. Lawrence played cool, calm basketball. The Kingston college squad ate away at the Ottawa lead until finally the score was tied.

That's when Algonquin panicked and Kingston went on to win the EOCAA title 71-59.

Kim MacKenzie led the Kingston attack with 27 points and Mick Dowling added 22. Ottawa got 29 points from Brent Martin.

Peter Scott dropped in 28 points for Loyalist in the consolation game, but it wasn't enough to give them the win as Durham won 81-78.

Loyalist was six up with two minutes left to go, but turnovers proved costly as the Oshawa entry pulled in front.

Kingston now advances to the Ontario College Athletics Association championships in Windsor.

Four Double Winners

PETERBOROUGH (Special) — Four regular drivers at Kawartha Downs here scored two wins each Sunday.

Jerry Robinson reined Argyle Royal to the win in the first race and came back in the third with Mary Minty. It was the mare's first lifetime start and victory.

Guy LaRush was up behind Jimmy Bing in the second race and they made it to the winner's circle for their second appearance in a row. LaRush repeated in the fourth win Bye's Garry.

Reg Gassien made a great stretch drive in the fifth to bring Scottie's Battles home in front by a nose over Captain Patterson. Gassien got Win No. 2 in the 10th race, piloting Pinedale Jane to the mare's second win here.

Prima Blossom, a regular at Frontenac Downs in Kingston, changed tracks but not her winning ways as she paced to victory in the ninth with Junior West in the bike.

BCI Sweeps Bay of Quinte Titles

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

It hadn't been done before and it will probably be a long time before it ever happens again. Belleville Collegiate (BCI), displayed their basketball superiority, Saturday, as they took all three Bay of Quinte championships before over 500 basketball enthusiasts at Centennial Secondary School.

The midgets edged East Northumberland, from Brighton, 41-39, to earn their title, the BCI juniors rolled over Quinte 50-41 and the Collegiad seniors nipped the Saints 35-34 in the toughest defensive game of the year.

Quinte jumped into an early 6-2 lead in the first quarter of the senior game, but BCI bounced back to tie things up at 12-12 at the end of the opening eight minutes. The Saints played tremendous defence in the second period and outscored the Collegians 13-8 to take a 25-20 half-time lead.

"I think our defence is our biggest asset," said Quinte coach, Jim Murray, "a lot of people consider us an offensive team, but we depend more on our defence."

The tight 2-1-2 zone that the Saints played on defence was more than enough to hold the Collegians outside throughout the contest. Quinte also cut off BCI forward Larry Wilson. The stalky star of the Collegian's front three was held to just six points in the game.

Outside shooting was the key to the senior win. BCI's Larry Savage hit from outside for 10 points, and Brian Bell came off the Collegian's bench to score eight in the second half — all from outside — to lead them to victory.

The BCI defence was the deciding factor in the second half. Quinte was limited to a trivial nine points in the final 16 minutes of the game. The Saints only got three points in the final quarter.

"When you hold a team like Quinte to nine points in a half its got to say something for your defence," said BCI coach, Brian McKenzie.

BCI only managed 15 in the entire second half, but it was enough.

"They weren't getting the shots," said McKenzie, "and we weren't making ours."

While Wilson only made six points, he was the leading factor under the boards. Offensively he hauled down 11 rebounds and defensively he grabbed off 12.

The two clubs exchanged the lead several times in the second half, but with six minutes left in the final quarter BCI took a two point lead at 35-33. The lead stood up for the remainder of the game.

With less than a minute to go, Quinte's Steve McCracken went to the line, but only made one of his two shots.

The Saints and the Collegians gave up ball control on turnovers five times in the dying seconds of the game. Chris Lachman, BCI starting guard, stole the ball twice, but his team handed it right back. Finally with two seconds remaining in the game, Lachman stole the ball again and the Collegians retained possession.

McCracken was top scorer for the Saints with nine points. Steve Hale was held to seven and Sterling Wilson got eight.

The Saints had edged Nicholson 48-44 in the semi-final, to earn a spot in the championship game. BCI won their semi-final game 67-43 over Trenton.

As anticipated, the BCI juniors took their championship. They dumped Quinte in their final by nine points. The Collegians held only a one point lead at half-time, but outscored the Saints 18-7 in the third quarter to put the game on ice.

Mitch Hannah dropped in 18 to lead the BCI attack and Mike Kirby, despite being boxed out, scored 13. John Guthrie was next on the list with nine.

Brian Hamilton had 12 for Quinte and Brian McQuaid got 10.

The BCI midgets were the first of the school's three teams to win the Bay of Quinte title. They downed Brighton in the final 41-39. It was the first time this season the Collegians had beaten Brighton. The two clubs had met twice before in an exhibition and a tournament game.

Randy Donovan was the gunner for BCI as he popped 16 points. Mike Wright and Jeff Cass had seven each. Chris Niblett was held to just six points and Dwight Begley got five.

Mike Boer's 14 points weren't quite enough to give Brighton the win. Larry Platt was the next highest scorer with 11 and Tome Bush checked in with eight.

BCI edged Quinte in the semi-final 37-33 and Brighton had trounced Napanee 57-4.

All three BCI teams are undefeated in Bay of Quinte action this season. The senior had 10 wins in regular season action and two enroute to the Bay of Quinte title. However, to advance to the Central Ontario Secondary School Athletics AA Championships in Cobourg this Saturday, the Collegians must beat Napanee in a sudden-death game. The contest is scheduled for Wednesday night at Loyalist College.

BCI juniors, with their wins on Saturday, now have 12 victories in Bay of Quinte action. For them to advance to the Central Ontario AAA Championships, however, the must beat out Moira in a sudden-death game; also scheduled for this Wednesday at Loyalist College.

In midget, the Collegians also have a dozen wins in Bay of Quinte action this season. Like the other two BCI teams they too must play a sudden-death contest before advancing to the AA COSSA championships. This will be a tough one for BCI since they have to play Brighton. ENSS has beaten them twice this year.

Quinte automatically advances to the Central Ontario AAA championships in Oshawa this Saturday. The junior and senior Saints lost only one game in Bay of Quinte action this season. Those losses came in the Bay of Quinte championships on Saturday at the hands of BCI teams. The midget Saints have a 6-3 Bay of Quinte won-lost record. The juniors boast a 13-1 record and the seniors have 11-1.

COSSA championships for A schools is also this Saturday. It is being held at Nicholson Catholic College. Midget, junior and senior teams from Nicholson and a junior and senior entry from Albert College will represent the Bay of Quinte area.

QHL Series Even

Stinson Construction and Belvedere Hotel evened their series up in the second game of the Quinte Hockey League playoffs Thursday night.

Stinson's scored a 4-1 victory to avenge a 2-0 loss to Reid's Dairy and Belvedere edged Cornerstone 2-1 after suffering a 4-1 defeat a week ago.

With a little better than six minutes remaining in regulation time Ted Waite's goal gave Belvedere the edge they needed to even their playoff series at one game each.

The winners had taken an early 1-0 lead before Cornerstone tied the game up midway through the second period.

Belvedere were assessed four of the games six penalties.

Terry Pope scored the only goal for the losers.

Stinsons scored four unanswered goals in the final period to give them the victory over Reids. Three goals were two minutes apart and the final came with a minute and 41 seconds remaining.

Joe Clark and Andy Prudden each scored a pair of goals to give Stinson's the win nullifying Carl Boomhower's goal in the second period for the losers.

The Dairymen took six of the games eight penalties, all minors.

Lose Pair on Weekend

Yardmen in Corner

Belleville's last remaining hope for an Ontario Minor Hockey Association champion has fallen into the hands of the AAA Minor Belleville Yardmen Midgets. The team however, suffered a serious setback over the weekend after taking a 1-0 lead in games over the Oshawa Kiwanis earlier in the week.

The Belleville entry in back-to-back games Saturday and Sunday dropped the first one by a 3-0 score at the Memorial and Sunday, despite a third period rally, were unable to do better than a 4-3 loss, in Oshawa.

In Saturday's game a sharp performance turned in by Belleville goalie, Bruce Hamilton and Oshawa netminder John Parish high-lighted a game that saw Belleville look rather sloppy on the defensive end of things at times.

Parish at the other end of the ice, although not tested quite as much as Hamilton, looked sharp when called upon to record the shutout.

Rob Zamejc's first goal, which proved to be the winner, came with little more than three minutes gone in the opening period. Hamilton kept the home team in the game for the better part of the middle frame and the first half of the third.

Curtis Langstaff had one of the closer calls for the Belleville squad as his low hard shot found it's way through the pads of the Oshawa goalie, but not quite to the goal line before a Kiwanis defender cleared it to the corner.

The locals picked up 11 of the 18 penalties that the referee handed out—all minors.

Zamejc's second goal and Chris Brandt's single sowed up the victory for the visitors, the last one coming with less than two minutes left in the final period.

In Sunday's game, in Oshawa, the contest was tied 0-0 at the end of the first period of play, but a three goal flurry in the second and early stage of the last period broke the game wide open for the home squad.

Not to be counted out without a fight Belleville roared back with two goals from Howie Coons within 31 seconds of each other.

Zamejc came to the rescue of the Kiwanis team, again scoring the winner with less than four minutes remaining. Randy Hutchinson put the visitors within one goal with 23 seconds remaining in the game, but the clock ran out on Belleville's hopes.

Oshawa now hold a 2-1 edge in games in the best-of-five series and could possibly wind things up on Tuesday at the Memorial Arena at 6.45 p.m.

A & J's Trounces Milers

A and J's Drive-In Restaurant, Trenton, handed Golden Mile their worst setback of the season Sunday, in Belleville Broomball League action at the Memorial Arena. The Milers went down 8-1. In the other game Northern edged Art's Esso 2-1.

Larry Wannamaker, Kevin Allen and Ron Cannons fired two goals each for A and Js and Don Lane and Gilles Paradis added singles.

Kevin Kirby was the only scorer for Golden Mile.

Paul McLeland and an unidentified scorer did the tallying for Northern. Alex Bech replied for Arts.

Danna Gets Four For John's

In the 5-5 tie in the Indoor Soccer League game played on the weekend two players scored a total of eight goals. Dario Danna picked up four goals to lead John's Variety Store to a tie with the front running Olympics.

John O'Neill of the Olympics scored the last two of his four goals in the latter stages of the second half enabling the league leaders to gain the tie.

The Olympics early in the first half jumped into a 3-1 lead and appeared headed for a romp over the Variety Store team.

At half time the score was 3-2 in favor of the Olympics, but three quick goals by Danna in the opening minutes of the last half put the Variety team in front 5-3 setting the stage for O'Neill's tying goals.

Barriage Takes Series Lead on Penalty Shots

The Belleville Mel Barriage Ladies hockey team and especially Bonnie Hannah in net took a 3-2 victory over Trenton to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series in Quinte Women's Hockey League semi-final action on Sunday.

At the end of regulation time the score was tied up at 2-2 sending the game into a three minute stop-time, over-time period. The score forcing the game to be decided by penalty shots.

Judy Rappell, of Belleville, and Marsha McAdams of Trenton, took the first shots for both clubs with both Hannah and Karen Nokes, the Trenton goalie making saves.

On the second try Hannah again came up with a good save on Trenton's Geraldine Westerweld and Belleville's Sue Morton scored on her shots but the referee ruled that the puck had hit the visitors goalie.

The goalies again came up with saves on the third shot and on the fourth shot Shirley Gulliver, from directly in front of the Trenton net, made no mistake, while at the other end of the ice, Hannah rounded off an all-round great performance with a good save.

Defenceman Rappell had twice before in the game tied things up for the home squad as Judy Tox and Linda Anderson had given Trenton early leads on two occasions.

The fourth and possibly final game will be played in Trenton on Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Growden Gets Hat Trick for Juveniles

Rick Growden's three goals led Belleville Shell Juveniles to an 8-5 Sunday exhibition win over Kingston at the Memorial Arena.

Scoring for Lions were Paul Svoboda, Dave McBride, Clint Riendeau, Tom Belch and Pat McGinn.

Clarence Broekema shot four goals in the wide open match with Kingston. Mark Crawford helped himself to three counters, and Tim Soule had a pair. Singles went to Bill Rowe, Steve Casey and Shawn Mulroney.

Steve Murphy shot the only goal McInroy needed to get by Stirling as Hedge and the losers' Ron Clarke hooked up in a goalies' duel.

The Bearcats got replies from Rod Salter, Terry Casselman and Larry Lupenette.

The Rebels can eliminate the Cats in the next game in the best-of-three series on Sunday at 10 a.m.

Former Mate Sinks Rangers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It seemed only natural that Vic Hadfield would be wearing a sly smile after scoring the winning goal against his former New York Rangers team-mates Sunday night.

Hadfield's second goal of the game and 24th of the season with 9:11 remaining snapped a 6-6 tie and led Pittsburgh Penguins to an 8-6 National Hockey League triumph over the Rangers at New York.

Hadfield, former Rangers captain, was unhappy when Rangers general manager Emile (The Cat) Francis dumped him in an off-season deal last year.

"The Cat said I couldn't make his team," Hadfield said. "Maybe that showed him I still had something left."

In other NHL games Sunday, Boston Bruins beat Chicago Black Hawks 6-2, Vancouver Canucks defeated Washington Capitals 7-3, Toronto Maple Leafs edged Detroit Red Wings 5-4, Atlanta Flames blanked Kansas City Scouts 4-0, Philadelphia Flyers beat St. Louis Blues 4-2 and New York Islander tied Buffalo Sabres 3-3.

VIC HADFIELD

Saturday, St. Louis upset Montreal Canadiens 4-3, Detroit upset Buffalo 3-2, Toronto beat Washington 5-4, Los Angeles Kings whipped Minnesota North Stars 7-4, Pittsburgh beat Vancouver 7-3, Philadelphia defeated Kansas City 3-0 and the Islanders beat California Seals 6-1.

In addition to his two goals, Hadfield picked up an assist on Pittsburgh's first goal at 3:17 of the opening period when Pete Laframboise tipped his slap shot from the left point past goalie Ed Giacomin.

Hadfield permitted himself his little taste of revenge, but he didn't rub it in.

"The goal was satisfying," he said, "but I'll take two points against anybody."

Besides losing the game, the Rangers also lost defenceman Dale Rolfe for the rest of the season when he crashed into the boards early in the second period and suffered a compound fracture of the left ankle. He underwent surgery late Sunday night.

Rolfe missed 22 games earlier in the season with a broken foot and was sidelined for 30 games last year with a dislocated kneecap.

Vancouver's win over Washington, led by two goals each from Paulin Bordeleau and Dennis Ververgaert, put the Canucks back into a one-point lead over Chicago atop the Smythe Division.

"We needed this one badly to stay in the thick of the race with that Black Hawks team," said Chris Oddleifson who scored once for the Canucks.

But Vancouver coach Phil Maloney was concerned about the loss of defenceman Mike Robitaille who was injured in the second period.

"I just hope the injury is not a serious one and that he'll be back very soon," said Maloney who has had to juggle his line-ups the last couple months because of a rash of injuries.

After Boston's afternoon victory over Chicago, Bruin coach Don Cherry said: "Let's just say once that we played a good game and the other team wasn't exactly lousy."

Greg Sheppard had two goals for the Bruins.

At Detroit, the Wings jumped to a 2-0 first-period lead with the help of Marcel Dionne's 37th goal of the season and appeared on the way to an easy win over the lethargic Leafs.

Toronto suddenly rallied with four second-period goals and the score was tied 4-4 going into the final period when Inge Hammarstrom added the winning goal for the Leafs at the 8:46 mark.

Curt Bennett scored twice to lead Atlanta's victory over Kansas City. Bennett also set a league record for the most goals in one season by a United States native with his 24h goal. The previous record of 23 was set in 1962-63 by Tommy Williams, an American now playing with Washington.

Reggie Leach scored two third-period goals to lead the Flyers over St. Louis at Philadelphia.

Comedy of Errors

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was a four-act comedy of errors Sunday night in Halifax. The Voyageurs were the lucky winners and Springfield the unfortunate losers.

The Indians made the last mistake and Nova Scotia forward Mike Busniuk took advantage of it to score the winning goal as the Voyageurs edged the Indians 4-3 in overtime in an American Hockey League game.

Mistakes were costly to both teams throughout the game as defensive lapses and poor timing gave each side an advantage that resulted in goals.

In other league games, Rochester Americans edged Hershey Bears 6-5 and Providence Reds downed New Haven Nighthawks 6-1.

At Halifax, the biggest mistake was made by a Springfield defenceman who overskated the puck near his net in overtime while trying to elude Rick Chartraw of the Voyageurs.

Peter Sullivan slid the loose puck to Busniuk who took one stride across the net and whipped a backhander behind Kings goalie Steve Rexe.

The two teams battled through a scoreless first period and swapped a pair of goals apiece in the second—Busniuk and Don Howse counting for the home club while Warren Stamler and Tom Cassidy replying for the visitors.

Jim Cahoon banged in a rebound to put the Voyageurs ahead late in the third period but Cassidy, with his second of the night, took the puck away from a Nova Scotia defenceman and went in alone to beat Ed Walsh in the Nova Scotia net for the tying goal.

At Rochester, N.Y., Dave Hynes scored with seven seconds left in the game to give Rochester its comeback win over the Bears.

Centre John Wright scored two goals and assisted on two others in Providence's win over New Haven.

Tom Colley scored the only New Haven goal to give the Nighthawks a 1-0 lead at 9:38 of the first period.

John Campbell, Gerry Teeple, Doug Herbul and Marty Gateman scored the other Providence goals.

Topple Nordiques and Toros

Saints Are Rough on Toughies

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Minnesota Fighting Saints, in a stiff battle to remain in position for a World Hockey Association playoff berth, like to point out that theirs is a team effort all the way.

"We are relying on each other and it's encouraging," said coach Harry Neale after the Saints beat Toronto Toros 5-3 Sunday night.

To back up his statement, Neale had only to point out the work of defencemen Terry Ball and Rick Smith, who in addition to their blue line duties, picked up a total of seven assists in two weekend games.

Ball helped set up four goals and Smith three in those two matches which also included a 4-1 win over Quebec Nordiques Saturday night.

In other WHA games Sunday, New England Whalers beat Vancouver Blazers 4-1, Houston Aeros defeated Indianapolis Racers 4-3 in sudden-death overtime, Phoenix Roadrunners blanked Chicago Cougars 5-0, Edmonton Oilers beat Baltimore Blades 7-2 and San Diego Mariners and Winnipeg Jets skated to a 4-4 overtime tie.

HARRY NEALE

Saturday, Phoenix whipped Indianapolis 12-2, Houston beat Chicago 4-2 and Cleveland Crusaders and New England tied 4-4.

Don Tannahill scored his 18th and 19th goals and added an assist to lead Minnesota over Toronto. Tannahill's second goal of the evening at 16:16 of the second period rounded out the scoring after the Saints battled back from deficits of 1-0, 2-1 and 3-2 to remain two points behind second-place Phoenix in the West Division.

"We have all the talent it takes to win, but to win we have to have a team effort," said Smith. "Our goaltending's been great and we've had good backchecking."

Larry Pleau's goal just 15 seconds into the game touched off New England's triumph. Pleau's goal, his 22nd of the season, came on a deflection of Brad Selwood's shot from the point.

Tom Webster made it 2-0 in the first period with his 32nd goal and Ted Green made it 3-0 late in the second frame. John French finished the Whaler scoring at 5:44 of the third period.

Andre Hinse's disputed goal three minutes into overtime produced Houston's triumph. Indianapolis goalie Ed Dyck protested the goal should have been disallowed, claiming three Houston players were in the crease at the time.

Bob Sicinski of the Racers sent the game into overtime with a power-play goal at 16:22 of the final period. Houston had taken the lead on goals by Gord Labossiere and Larry Lund after the Racers' Bob Whitlock scored in the opening minutes of the period.

Rob Florek scored twice and had two assists to lead Phoenix while goalie Jack Norris recorded his first shutout of the season.

DON TANNAHILL

Linemates Mike Rogers and Tim Sheehy combined for three goals and six assists as Edmonton trounced Baltimore. Rogers, a rookie centre who leads the Oilers in scoring, collected a goal and four assists while Sheehy had two goals and two assists as the Oilers climbed within three points of second-place Toronto in the Canadian Division.

One Bad Game Costs King Junior Crown

TORONTO (CP) — Robb King of Edmonton went undefeated through round-robin competition, had the best shooting percentage of any curler and was selected to the all-star rink but one game left him a loser in the world junior curling championship.

"One bad game all week and it cost us the tournament," said King after his rink dropped an 8-6 extra-end loss to Sweden in the tournament final Saturday.

King skipped his Edmonton foursome to an 8-0 record in the round-robin, earning a bye into the final while Sweden had to battle through a semi final Saturday morning against Scotland.

King finished as the top shooter in the competition with 84 per cent and was named to the all-star rink along with his third, Brad Hannah and lead Chris King. Anders Grahn, who played in the final against a doctor's advice, was the all-star second.

Grahn had a badly-blistered hand from sweeping and missed the game during the round-robin in which the Canadians beat the three-man Swedish rink 8-4.

A doctor advised him to give the hand more rest and not play in the final but he ignored the advice.

Ullsten said he gave up a chance to compete in this year's world men's championship because after this year, he has only one more year of junior eligibility.

"I knew I would have only two chances to win the junior but many more to win the world title so I decided to go after the junior title this year," said Ullsten, who last year was runner-up in the world men's competition.

The Canadians, who were never ahead although they tied it 6-6 after nine ends on Saturday, had a couple of early misses in the extra end.

Sweden had two rocks in the house when King took his last shot. He drew to the four-foot ring but left it open.

"This time, I knew I could afford to hit and roll out," said Ullsten. "We had the two rocks in and I didn't have to worry about staying."

So he hit and rolled out, still counting two for the victory.

Harvey Mazinke Gets Job Done With 'Fifth Man'

FREDERICTON (CP) — Harvey Mazinke carries a fifth man with his Regina rink in its bid to regain the Canadian men's curling championship he won in 1973.

The 37-year-old farm equipment distributor used that fifth man in the 11th end of Sunday's opening round matchup with the host New Brunswick rink to take an extra-end 10-8 victory from John Clark of Fredericton.

The incredible 11th-end shot enabled the Saskatchewan foursome to take the lead for the first time and while New Brunswick got that one back in the 12th, it gave the Western Canada powerhouse the vital last rock in the extra end.

"I was certainly quite relaxed at the start of the game," said Mazinke, "but after you miss a couple of shots you tighten up a bit because you're trying to see what you're doing wrong. . . .

"There certainly was lots of tension at the finish of the game."

His shot on the 11th allowed him to steal the end. He got a punch and a roll for a partially-guard counter with his last rock and Clark's final shot nudged him farther into the rings.

"That was just a lifesaver, and a little bit fourtunate," he admitted. "This is the fifth man that I talk about that you have to have curling with you in the brier.

"You may curl well, but you have to get the bonus shot once in a while to get the wins."

Two rounds will be played today with the second round broken into a morning and afternoon draw, six teams going in each section.

At 9 a.m., AST Alberta met Ontario, the Territories went against New Brunswick and Nova Scotia played Newfoundland, skipped by Bob Cole of St. John's.

In other key games Sunday, Rod Hunter's favored Manitoba rink from Winnipeg edged Jim Ursel and his Quebec entry from St. Lambert, 7-5, by stealing one in the last end. Dr. Alex Scott of Kingston and his Ontario foursome downed Frank Beutel of Penticton, B.C., blanking three of the last seven ends and blanking the British Columbia foursome on the scoreboard.

Elsewhere, Don Twa and his Whitehorse rink, representing the first Territories team in the scored two n the 12th end for a 7-6 victory over John Fortier's Prince Edward Island crew from Charlottetown. Dick Boyce of Dartmouth and his Nova Scotia entry took an early lead and hung on for a 10-9 upset of Tom Reed of St. Alberta, Alta.

New Brunswick and British Columbia drew the bye in the evening round.

In the crucial 11th end, Mazinke said he had a couple of options, hitting and rolling either way, as he did, "or roll up to it and hope to keep them on two ahead."

"But with one end to go, two down is just about hopeless. So we got a real bonus out of it by getting dead behind the guards."

He said the New Brunswick rink is much stronger than the experts give them credit, especially with the addition of third Dave Sillipant.

JOE FRAZIER

BOGNER STOPS CANE

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — Britain's Joe Bogner retained his European heavyweight boxing title Saturday, stopping challenger Dante Cane of Italy in the fifth round of their 15-round bout at the Sports Palace of Bologna. Both of Cane's eyes were cut before referee Rudollph Durst of Germany declared the challenger unfit to continue the fight.

Ellis Stopped

Frazier Looking For Muhammad

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Joe Frazier just can't wait for another fight with world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali.

"I've whupped Jimmy, now it's Ali's turn," Frazier said Sunday after stopping Jimmy Ellis. "I don't care where I fight him. I just want to see him on the other side of the ring."

Smokin' Joe easily disaptched a tired and defenceless Ellis in nine rounds, and nothing seemed to matter now but a fight with Ali.

"I feel great. I feel like I could take Muhammad right now."

Frazier beat Ali in 1971 but lost to him in January, 1974. But he hardly has a return date with the champion in the bag. All Ali has said is that he'd "talk about" facing the winner of the Melbourne fight. And in the meantime, the champion has a fight March 24 with Chuck Wepner, and says he wants to give George Foreman a rematch.

Then there is the possibility that Ali might call a halt to his boxing career entirely.

The $325,000 Frazier - Ellis bout was a disappointment to many of the fans.

Ellis held his own for the first three rounds, winning them on points. But Frazier was probably just feeling out his opponent, and from the third round on Frazier was clearly in control.

In the seventh round, a Frazier hook opened a cut over Ellis' right eye. Ellis' manager, Angelo Dundee, took a look and sent Ellis back in, but by the ninth round he knew Jimmy had had enough.

He shouted to referee Bob Foster to stop it and the fight ended at 59½ seconds of the round.

Ellis had lasted five rounds longer than his first fight against Frazier, in 1970 at Madison Square Garden, when Dundee also had to end the contest.

The promoters of the fight recorded a paid attendance of 15,000, far short of the 52,000 capacity. They estimated a gate of $327,000 from tickets which were scaled from $10 to $65.

Frazier got $250,000 for his efforts, Ellis $75,000.

League Cup to Aston Villa

Everton Hangs on at Top

LONDON (Reuter) — Everton held on to the English League soccer lead while Aston Villa won the League Cup for the second time Saturday.

Villa, which won the inaugural League Cup final 14 years ago, snapped up the trophy again with a 1-0 win over Norwich in the final watched by a crowd of 100,000 at Wembley Stadium.

The match hinged on a 79th-minute drama in which Norwich defender Mel Machin handled the ball while deflecting a header from Chris Nicholl. Norwich goalkeeper Kevin Keelan got a hand on Ray Graydon's penalty shot but Graydon followed up to fire home the rebound.

Everton held on to its one-point advantage at the top of the First-Division standings with a 2-0 win away to relegation-haunted Arsenal. Martin Dobson and Mick Lyons headed the goals in a two-minute stretch.

Burnley moved into second place in the standings with a 3 0 win at Coventry, with Stoke moving down to third spot after a 2-0 defeat at Middlesbrough.

Stoke was quickly in trouble against Middlesbrough which earned its first home league goals of the year. John Hickton hit the first in the 17th minute before Alan Foggon scored his 15th goal of the season.

Behind the three front runners, five clubs were even on 36 points — Ipswich, Liverpool, Leeds, Derby and Manchester City.

Two goals by Peter Lrimer of Leeds were cancelled out by Alan Oakes and Willie Donachie for Manchester City in a 2-2 draw.

Ipswich suffered its second home defeat in the league when an Alan Woodward goal gave Sheffield United a 1-0 victory while Liverpool was held 2-2 at home to Chelsea.

Chris Jones, replacing England striker Martin Chivers, gave Tottenham Hotspur fresh hope of avoiding relegation when he shot them ahead against Derby.

But Derby hit back with goals from Bruce Rioch, Peter Daniel and Roger Davies to increase the burden on Spurs in the remaining weeks of the season.

Manchester United stayed four points clear of Sunderland in the second division when they slammed four goals past Cardiff City.

In the Scottish League, Glasgow Rangers held their four-point lead in the First Division with 2-1 victory over Hearts. Second-place Celtic defeated Partick Thistle 3-2.

Colts Win for Mark

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — The Kingston rink of Mark McDonald survived an early challenge by John Fraser of Ottawa to capture the provincial Colts curling tournament Saturday.

The McDonald rink took an early 3-1 lead, only to see Fraser rally for three in the fifth end to take a 4-3 lead. The Kingston team scored three in the sixth end and went on to a 10-6 victory.

It was McDonald's second appearance in the provincial final and his first win. He also skipped three provincial schoolboy champion rinks, as well as the 1973 Canadian schoolboy champions.

Kingston defeated Humber Highlands 12-6 and Brampton 16-3 to qualify for the final.

CHACON KEEPS CROWN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bobby Chacon knocked out Mexico's Jesus Estrada in the second round Saturday night to successfully defend his World Boxing Council featherweight championship. Chacon knocked Estrada down midway in the round and finished him off with a flurry of punches at the ropes with an overhand right the finale.

Luck Makes The Difference

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Bob Murphy turned from perennial loser to victor in the Jackie Gleason golf tournament and said it was just a matter of luck..

Murphy turned back Jack Nicklaus and Eddie Pearce with two dramatic shots in the stretch run and won the $52,000 first prize Sunday.

"It's been a long, long time, boys," the smiling Murphy said after his closing, four-under-par 68 had brought him from three strokes off the pace. He last won in 1970.

"I just had the feeling today that if the wind would blow, maybe blow some of those shots a little, maybe I'd get lucky."

And that's exactly what happened.

The wind blew a Nicklaus shot out of bounds and opened the gate for Murphy. And Murphy got lucky. He hit an eight iron shot that hit to the right of the pin on the 17th green and hopped dead at the flagstick as if drawn by a magnet.

"You have to say it's luck when it ends up an inch from the cup," Murphy said. "It was a good shot. It figured to be 10 feet from the hole. When it's one inch, it's luck."

Murphy finished with a 273 total, 15 under par on the windswept, 7,128-yard Inverrary Country Club course.

The 22-year-old Pearce was one stroke back with a 71 and 274. NNicklaus shot an erratic 73 and had a 275 total.

Nicklaus started the final round one shot in the lead. He once got three in front. But he three-putted four times in an unusal collapse, and hit that seven iron shot sailing over the green, over the heads of the gallery and out of bounds.

Veteran Miller Barber had a 68 for 276. Lee Trevino's 66—the best round of the day—brought him a tie at 277 with Hale Irwin, who had a closing 70.

Arnold Palmer, seeking his first title in two years, finished poorly. Playing in a threesome with Nicklaus and Murphy, Palmer shot 74 and was tied at 279 with Tom Weiskopf, who had a 73.

Murphy spent most of last season on the sidelines with his hand in a cast after suffering tendon damage in a fall.

"I guess this was just my time," Murphy said. "I was cool as could be while we were playing. But when I holed out on 18, my hand was shaking so bad I didn't think I could get the ball out of the hole."

Ingemar Stenmark Making His Mark

ALTA LAKE, B.C. (CP) — Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden says he is a slalom specialist. After his performance on the World Cup trail the last two weeks, one might think the giant slalom would be his favorite race.

The 19-year-old Swede beat a field of 74 competitors at Whistler Mountain Sunday to win the World Cup giant slalom event. It followed a victory in another World Cup giant slalom race a week ago in Japan.

Stenmark finished his final run on the 4,720-foot course with a vertical drop of 1,440 feet in 1:39.14, going through the 61 gates more than two seconds faster than anyone else.

In his morning run, he was timed at 1:38.86, leaving him in eighth place.

Heini Hemmi of Switzerland, first after the initial run, had a combined time of 3:19.83 compared with Stenmark's winning 3:18.00. Hemmi's times were 1:37.35 on the first run and 1:42.48 for the second.

Gustavo Thoeni of Italy, the men's over-all World Cup leader, was third in the giant slalom with a combined time of 3:19.86. The third-place finish put his over-all point total at 219, 19 more than Stenmark who moved into second place ahead of Franz Klammer, a downhill specialist.

Jim Hunter of Calgary was the top Canadian, finishing 18th with runs of 1:46.06 and 1:47.09 for a combined total of 3:28.15.

Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, Ont., was 19th with a combined time of 3:28.27 and David Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., followed in 20th place with a 3:28.52 combined time.

Only 36 of the 74 competitors to start completed both runs.

The weather was unstable, making course conditions far from perfect. Fog kept moving around the course and rain at times turned to snow. It made waxing of skis crucial.

Hemmi and Thoeni both said waxing their skis helped considerably on their second runs.

Hemmi added that the early runners had an added advantage Sunday when it started snowing in the second run and visibility was lessened.

Scott Henderson, coach of the Canadian team, agreed with Hemmi.

"We really skied well in the first run," Henderson said. "I was really pleased what with the poor start numbers we have in the giant slalom. Then on the second run, after the first seeding, it really started to snow. It came down so hard that once the first seed was over the other guys didn't have a chance."

The weather proved a constant headache to World Cup officials throughout the meet. Practice runs had to be cancelled and competition was set back as the schedule makers tried to fit men's and womens downhill races on to the agenda.

Challenger in Hospital

Could be Worse Says Champion

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Roberto Duran offered little sympathy to the man he sent to hospital Sunday.

"If I hadn't been in such bad condition, Lampkin would be in the morgue not just the hospital," Duran said after retaining his world lightweight boxing title against challenger Ray Lampkin.

The 23-year-old Panamanian was celebrating Sunday's 14th-round knockout victory at home with his wife and friends while his opponent was in a hospital in delicate condition.

"I'm not worried," Duran continued. "It could be me in that hospital," he shouted over the loud tropical music that filled his living room.

Meanwhile, the 27-year-old Lampkin, as he regained consciousness, said from his bed in the intensive care unit that he didn't remember much after the fight.

The battered and bruised Lampkin, of Portland, Ore., said jokingly: "I don't know which hurts the most—my face or my arms."

He'd been given numerous injections in his left arm and was hooked up to an intravenous feeding device with his right arm. "But I'm really OK," he added, a painful smile breaking over his cut and swollen face.

This was Lampkin's first defeat by a knockout in 33 professional fights. He has only lost four fights in his 10 years of pro boxing.

Lampkin was knocked out after 36 seconds of the 14th round of the scheduled 15-rounder with a left hook ot the stomach and a right jab to the face.

Durans brutal onslaught sent Lampkin sprawling to the canvas, and he was carried out unconscious on a stretcher. He regained consciousness half an hour later in hospital.

Lampkin said he didn't want to continue the fight at one point during the combat. "I don't remember in which round, but I recall telling my seconds that I didn't want to go on. I felt very bad," he said.

Duran, on the other hand, said he felt weak in the ring and admitted taking some punishment from his opponent.

"That's why I fell so many times. I almost felt like a featherweight," he added.

But Duran successfully defended his crown for the sixth time after winning the championship from Ken Buchanan of Scotland in New York's Madison Square Garden in 1972.

Duran has had 50 fights, winnini 49—42 of them by knockout. And 15 of those knockouts were meted out in the first round.

This title fight won him a $75,000 purse tax free, and $5,000 more for expenses. Lampkin earned $15,000 for his troubles.

L'Enjoleur Sixth in Flamingo Stakes

Foolish Pleasure—Relaxed Winner

By THE CANADIAN P RESS

Foolish Pleasure likes to relax when he gets the lead in a race.

But once again Saturday it didn't do his rivals any good as he remained unbeaten with an impressive victory in the $131,600 Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah racetrack in Miami.

"Near the wire, he started relaxing," said jockey Jacinto Vasquez . "He wasn't all out."

But Foolish Pleasure was 1¾ lengths in front of Prince Thou Art at the end of 1⅛ miles and was a major step closer to the Kentucky Derby, which he is the winter-book favorite to win.

"He won't level out too much when he's in the lead," said owner John L. Greer. "He likes somebody to run with him."

So far in nine races, no horse has been able to run with Foolish Pleasure.

The race was another disappointment for Jean Louis Levesque of Montreal, whose L'Enjoleur was sixth.

Greer also said the March 19 Fountain of Youth and March 29 Florida Derby at Gulfstream Park are possible objectives for the son of What A Pleasure and then "we'd probably go to Keeneland and go for the Blue Grass Stakes."

In winning his second start as a three-yearold, Foolish Pleasure took the lead from Somethingfabulous with about an eighth of a mile left and completed the 1⅛ miles in 1:48 2-5.

John Galbreath's Prince Thou Art came on to get second, three lengths ahead of Meadow Stables Something fabulous. Sylvan Place, Prince Thou Art's stablemate, was fourth, another two lengths back.

In other major races Saturday at United States tracks, Singh won the $58,100 Swift Stakes at Aqueduct in New York, Tizna captured the $100,000 Invitational Santa Margarita Handicap at Santa Anita Park in Arcadia, Calif., Hearts of Lettuce took the $34,550 Louisiana Handicap at the New Orleans Fair Grounds and Innocent Lady won the $32,800 Golden Poppy Handicap at Golden Gate Fields in Albany, Calif.

Porter Some Quarterback As Bullets Defeat Lakers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

K.C. Jones knows what to look for in a little man—a playmaker, a quarterback who can set the tempo of a basketball team's offence, a hustler who can harass an opponent into mistakes on defence.

Jones was that type of player with Boston Celtics, and as coach of Washington Bullets he's got a sparkplug who also fits that description—the unheralded Kevin Porter.

Porter, a guard who labors in the shadow of high scorer Phil Chenier, handed out a club-record 21 assists Sunday to lead Washington to its 21st consecutive home-court victory, a Angeles Lakers.

The 21 assists were the most by any player in a National Basketball Association game this season. Porter scored just four points, but team-mate Chenier had 27, Mike Riordan 24 and Nick Weatherspoon 22.

The victory raised Washington's record to 48-17, best in the NBA.

In other NBA games Sunday, Seattle SuperSonics beat Boston 104-97, Philadelphia '76ers beat New York Knicks 91-87, Kansas City-Omaha Kings defeated Detroit Pistons 122-112, Houston Rockets beat Phoenix Suns 110-104 and Portland Trail Blazers defeated Golden State Warriors 122-86.

Saturday, Philadelphia beat New York 100-94, Atlanta beat Kansas City 108-95, Detroit edged Chicago 95-94, Houston whipped New Orleans 121-109, Milwaukee edged Buffalo 104-100 and Golden State beat Cleveland 110-95.

In the American Basketball Association on Sunday, New York beat Memphis 111-87, Indiana defeated St. Louis 104-99, San Antonio beat Kentucky 103-98, Utah defeated Virginia 93-83 and Denver whipped San Diego 133-117.

Comets Lose A Pair

Gerry Gray's normal duties include scoring goals, but Sunday night he found himself trying to prevent them.

The Brantford forward was forced to don the goaltending equipment in the Foresters' 9-3 Ontario Hockey Association Senior A victory over Napanee Comets when starting netminder Steve Worosz was forced to the sidelines with a bad cut on the side of his face midway through the first period.

In the only game Saturday, Cambridge Hornets dumped Napanee 12-5. Play resumes Thursday with Brantford travelling to Whitby to face the McDonald's.

At Cambridge, Gary Brewer scored four goals to lift Cambridge within one point of fourth-place Orillia Terriers.

John Rutherford added three goals, while single goals went to Mike Doersam, Steve Robson, Gord Tucker, Doug Schoenfeld and Bob Channell.

Sandra and Val Won't Be There

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col. (CP) — Sandra and Val Bezic of Toronto say Sandra's ankle injury will keep them out of the pairs competition at the world figure skating championships starting Tuesday.

The Bezics, five-time Canadian champions and fifth in the world competition last year, missed the Canadian championships last month after Sandra suffered torn ligaments in her ankle.

The brother-sister team had planned to compete at this year's world championships and travelled with the Canadian team to Aspen, Colo., three weeks ago for training and to become accustomed to the altitude.

Sandra and Val said they hope to regain their Canadian title next year and qualify for the Winter Olympics at Innsbruck, Austria.

Canada will be represented in pairs competition here this week by Candy Jones of Toronto and Don Fraser of Richmond Hill, Ont., this year's Canadian champs, and by Kathy Hutchinson and Jamie McGreggor of Cambridge, Ont.

Ron Shaver of Cambridge, another skater who missed the Canadian championships due to injury, says he plans to compete this week.

He joins Canadian champion Toller Cranston of Toronto and Bob Rubens of Dollard des Ormeaux, Que., in men's singles competition.

VOLLEYBALL CHAMPS

QUEBEC (CP) — University of Sherbrooke won the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union men's volleyball championship, defeating University of Alberta 15-10, 15-11 and 15-9 in Saturday's final. In the CIAU women's championship, University of Western Ontario captured the title beating University of Saskatchewan 15-2, 15-5 and 15-9.

Communist Factions Confront Each Other

BOMBAY (CP) — In India the two faces of communism glare at each other with increasing hostility.

On the one side is the Russian-leaning Communist Party of India (CPI) which generally supports Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government. On the other is the Chinese-oriented Communist Party Marxist (CPM), which vigorously opposes it.

Borrowing a weapon from Chairman Mao's arsenal, the pro-Russian CPI has organized a Red Guard movement at Patna, 1,200 miles north of Bombay, which is attracting hundreds of young men and women from the cities.

The recruits, who include bank clerks, teachers, students and construction workers, sign up for a 12-month period of "active participation in a militant but orderly campaign against the emerging forces of fascism."

In the lexicon of India political invective, a Fascist is not necessarily bound ideologically to Hitler or Mussolini; he is simply a bad guy. And the CPM, as far as the pro-Moscow Communists are concerned, is a "reactionary party holding within it the seeds of fascism and right reaction."

So there is no question of the target CPI leader Rajeshwar Rao had in mind when he promised that "tens of thousands of Red Guards will move into action against the Fascists and tell the masses to be on guard against the agents of imperialism."

The pro-Chinese Communists angered the CPI by joining with non-Communist opposition parties in joint agitation against Mrs. Gandhi's government, calling for electoral reform and dismissal of corrupt legislators and inefficient officials.

Apprehensive of violence, police have warned that the Red Guards will not be permitted to carry weapons, even batons. They are investigating reports that the Red Guard is recruiting primitive tribesmen, armed with bows and arrows, from the remote jungles of Bihar state.

Police Rap Commission

TORONTO (CP) — More than 2,000 city policemen Sunday passed a motion of non-confidence in the Metropolitan Toronto board of police commissioners for stalling on a arbitator's order to assign two-man cruisers at night.

Sydney Brown, president of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Association, said that beginning tonight, the men "must not, shall not and will not accept assignments in one-man patrol cruisers."

The men also decided unanimously to support Chief Harold Adamson who recently reassigned 409 policemen from various special duties to help man the cruisers as a contingency plan until more men can be hired and trained.

The chief said the cost of providing two-man cruisers is about $7 million and the ideal number of men needed is 657.

Last April, a provincial arbitrator ordered that cruisers must carry two policemen between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m. The order was later upheld by the divisional court and the Ontario Appeal Court.

Mr. Justice John Brooks denied Friday the commission's request for a delay in implementing the order after the association voted to refuse assignments in one-man cars.

The commission plans to ask the Ontario Appeal Court March 17 for permission to appeal the order to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Munro Rests In Hospital

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro spent a restful weekend in the National Defence Medical Centre, recovering from fatigue and pondering his future, a spokesman said Sunday.

"He's been taking it easy . . . sleeping well and eating well," the spokesman added.

"It's been a restful day and a restful weekend for him."

Mr. Munro entered hospital Thursday after discussing with Prime Minister Trudeau the possibility of resigning from the cabinet.

The minister's name had been mentioned in connection with a harbor dredging scandal in Hamilton. The case has resulted in charges against five individuals, one a former harbor commissioner.

Mr. Munro, who underwent tough opposition questioning last week in the Commons, denied any political or criminal wrongdoing but said he might be forced to resign and fight to clear his name.

The Hamilton irregularities figure in a national RCMP investigation into the activities of dredging companies. A police official said last week more charges will be laid soon as a result of the investigations.

The spokesman for Mr. Munro said the minister was visited by one aide Sunday and spent part of the day watching television.

He is scheduled to undergo blood tests today and will "make up his mind later" whether to take a holiday in the south, the spokesman added.

He could not say how long it will be before Mr. Munro returns to the Commons. There was no indication when the minister will make a decision on resigning.

Prime Minister Trudeau said before leaving for a European tour last week he knows of no reason why Mr. Munro should resign.

The Hamilton case has already resulted in the resignation of George Kerr, Ontario solicitor-general.

He quit Feb. 21 to fight allegations that he was involved improperly in the affair. He has denied any wrongdoing.

Founding Head of CLC, Claude Jodoin, 61, Dies

OTTAWA (CP) — Claude Jodoin, 61, founding president of the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC), died in hospital early Saturday.

Mr. Jodoin, elected CLC president at its founding convention in 1956, suffered a stroke in May, 1967, and had remained in hospital since then.

He remained CLC president until 1966. Before assuming that post Mr. Jodoin had served as president of the Montreal Trades and Labor Council from 1947 to 1954.

In 1967, he received the Order of Canada award and a Centennial Medal and in 1972 was named to the Labor Hall of Honor.

His funeral will be held Tuesday in Montreal.

Mr. Jodoin, who presented a tough, non-nonsense image, was a driving force behind the CLC.

An associate once said:

"Without Claude Jodoin there probably wouldn't be a Canadian Labor Congress today. Whenever it started coming apart at the seams he held the whole thing together."

The CLC was created in 1956 with the merger of the Trades and Labor Congress (TLC) and the Canadian Congress of Labor.

While there was never any doubt about who was running the show, neither was there a serious question about Mr. Jodoin's position. At five conventions after he assumed leadership in 1956, there was never any real challenge to his leadership.

Train Derailed

GERALDTON, Ont. (CP) — A Canadian National Railways passenger train en route from Vancouver to Toronto was derailed west of here early Sunday. There were no injuries.

CN officials in this town 190 miles northeast of Thunder Bay said provincial police are guarding the cars to prevent looting.

The 135 passengers temporarily were accommodated at a high school. Toronto-bound passengers were to be flown to their destination, while Montreal-bound passengers were to board another train.

CN officials said they hope to have the line cleared by early Tuesday.

Half Drug-takers Sold Phoney Goods

TORONTO (CP) — Users of illicit drugs in Toronto are not necessarily getting what they are paying for, says the head of pharmaceutical sciences for the Ontario Addiction Research Foundation.

Dr. Joan Marshman said Saturday at a seminar held to acquaint family doctors with current alcohol and drug problems that of 10 samples of alleged mescaline tested between April, 1974, and January, 1975, four contained LSD, five phencyclidine—known as PCP, the peace pill or horse tranquilizer—and one gelatin.

She said only about half the drugs reaching her laboratory contain ingredients they are represented as being on the street.

"There has been no marked improvement in four years," she said in an interview. "It bothers me to think there are still people out there buying they-know-not-what."

Most common in samples during the last two years have been PCP, she said.

Between April, 1974 and last January, it was found in 63 of 152 samples, she said. It was sold as PCP in only a few cases and in other samples masqueraded as one of 11 other drugs.

The drug's popular legitimate use is in knockout darts to quiet large animals.

Dr. Marshman said that on the street, PCP is sold not only alone but also in combination with LSD or, less frequently, marijuana or an amphetamine.

In 10 months of testing, the drugs considered the most commonly found after PCP in the foundation's samples, are marijuana, hashish and LSD, she added.

Locks Open

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — The ore-laden, 767-foot freighter, Cason J. Callaway, passed through the Soo Locks Saturday, apparently assuring an uninterrupted winter navigation season on the upper Great Lakes for the first time.

The Callaway, owned by U.S. Steel passed downbound through the 800-foot-long MacArthur Lock, which had never before handled a ship longer than 730-feet.

Officials said the success of the passage means that ships will be able to traverse the upper Great Lakes for the entire winter.

Judge Holds Wink Criminal Offence

OTTAWA (CP) — When grandfathers do it grandchildren want to learn how because it's funny but for others it could be a criminal offence.

Winking—an ancient activity—was the object of study by an Ontario Supreme Court judge this week.

Mr. Justice Sam Grange ruled that a mere wink of the eye by a prostitute to a prospective client is a criminal offence.

He said that any move to entice a man to have sexual intercourse for a price could lead to a woman being convicted of soliciting.

The decision comes in response to a provincial court ruling last year which stated that persistence or annoyance is required for the activity to be called soliciting.

Last year Judge Tom Swabey dismissed a soliciting charge against Louise Rolland, 28, of Hull, Que., saying there was no evidence of persistence or annoyance. Hull is across the Ottawa River from Ottawa.

The man involved said he was sitting in an Ottawa hotel when he interpreted a wink from Miss Rolland as an invitation to join her.

He sat at her table and after negotiating a price for her services, went to her Hull apartment. When they returned to the hotel Miss Rolland was arrested by Ottawa police morality detectives and charged with soliciting.

Mr. Justice Grange disagrees with the provincial court decision in the case and has ordered a new trial.

"We must accept soliciting in its ordinary meaning of requesting . . . without necessarily involving a persistent or annoying element," he said.

Uncover Roman Site

LONDON (CP) — A 1,500-year-old question has been answered by archeologists investigating a Roman site uncovered during building work on the North Bank of The Thames. They have identified a 45-yard stretch of waterfront dating from the third century that proves that Roman Londinium did have an inner wall. Described by the City Corporation's Guildhall Museum as "one of the most important archeological finds for some time" the discovery sheds new light on London's trade and status during the Roman occupation.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Tuesday, March 4

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Negative vibrations you're picking up from a situation you're involved in can be disregarded. It will work out better than you think.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In your business dealings today don't take the first offer. If you negotiate a bit you'll come out with better terms.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A misunderstanding will arise with one with whom you share interest, unless it's clearly spelled out what's expected of each.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't tackle chores that are beyond your expertise. Bring in a professional—it will cost you less in the long run.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22) One you know socially may be coming to you with a business proposition. Scrutinize it very carefully before jumping in.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A matter that's been troubling you lately will shortly be partially cleared up. What remains can be dealt with later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) [illegible] aren't your best ones. You're not apt to grasp the big picture the first time around. You will, when you think twice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're still a bit too impulsive when it comes to buying things to satisfy your whims. Shop around. You'll save.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're likely to find yourself in an awkward spot today. Keep your cool. You'll come up with ways to extricate yourself easily.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you expect too much from others now you'll be disappointed but if your requests are reasonable they'll be complied with.

AQUARIUS (Jan. [illegible]) It's OK to be generous with a friend, but don't [illegible]osity exceed your common sense. Be kind, but also be practical.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You take things for granted early in the day. Not much will be accomplished. Later, when you settle down, goals are attained.

To Your Good Health

Wife, 50, Unhappy When Sex Stopped

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a problem that is making me slowly but surely ill. My husband is a few months older than I am. We are in our mid-50s. More than five years ago, he cut off all sex activity. In short, I am his housekeeper.

He said that if sex is stopped at 50 the chances of living longer are better.

We have a lovely family, and I do love him.

He is always ill to his stomach, but the doctor says there is no physical cause for this. I know he wants me as much as I do him, but he is fighting it to the point of making himself ill.

He reads your column every evening—No Name, Please

Much is said about sex education for the young, but from the letters I get, of which yours is a pretty typical example, there is some need of education for older folks, too. Your letter is also representative of those I get from wives who are disturbed by their husbands' inadequacy, often at younger ages than your husband's.

His notion about sex after 50 is not unusual in men, especially in those who have had a heart problem, a stroke, or lung disorders. It is, however, an incorrect notion. While sex activity declines in many men after 50, most remain quite active sexually. There is no more strain on a man than is involved in a brisk walk or any such moderate activity.

Has your husband given up all physical activity—cutting the lawn, doing chores around the house, playing golf?

His stomach complaints can be related to his frustrations surrounding this subject of sexual activity. Possibly he is using this as an excuse for his real or imagined inadequacy.

Once the idea is implanted it is difficult to dislodge. I have only one suggestion that might work.

Since your husband sounds too stubborn to consult a marriage counsellor, you might try to bring the subject out into the open through his physician. The physician could, at your suggestion, initiated a discussion with your husband about his stomach complaints, then subtly broach the very natural subject of his sex activity. In this way your husband might be prompted to discuss it frankly with the doctor, and the doctor thus allay his fears about engaging in sex.

Because it is your husband's health that is at stake, as well as your own mental state, I don't think his doctor would consider this a breach of medical ethics.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: There is much disagreement among my friends as to whether vitamins lose their effectiveness when taken with meals. Is it true?—Mrs. R.W.

If you think about it for a moment you will realize that most of the vitamins we receive are taken "with meals," and that is the most natural way to get them—in our food. Taking vitamin supplements with a meal has the same effect as taking them between meals.

There are times when they have to be given intravenously for more immediate effect, and this could be what you have in mind.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband, who is 50, had a complete examination recently and was told he has a rusty heart. I would like your thoughts on rusty heart—Mrs. H.O.H.

I, too, am confused by the term "rusty heart."

Readers send me a great variety of unconventional terms that their doctors use, and which only the individual doctor can interpret. I suggest you call your husband's doctor and ask him what he means.

Sensors Spot 75 Targets At Same Time

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Automatic ground sensor systems which detect, identify and track up to 75 military targets simultaneously have been developed by GTE Sylvania.

Dr. Richard W. Scott of the company's security systems department said present systems require human analysts.

"Computer-controlled systems not only will be able to track and process multiple target activity simultaneously but will provide more consistent and accurate information," he said.

The new systems can help discover a breach in a perimeter and can locate and monitor enemy activity in a protected area.

Master Mariner

Jim: "How about a week's articles on percentage and safety plays?"

Oswald: "They aren't exactly the same thing. For instance, here is a standard safety play. South finds himself in six notrump after a slightly irregular notrump opening. He might have reached six clubs, if he had opened one club or North might have played six notrump. It really doesn't matter. The principle involved is the same."

Jim: "South wants to lose just one club trick and he wants to give himself the best chance to do just that. He sees that he can't make the slam if West holds king-jack plus one or two small clubs. He wants to find a way to handle any other club combination."

Oswald: "The safety play here is to lay down his ace of clubs. This time he drops the king and has no trouble finessing against the jack and making all the tricks. If an honor failed to drop he would go over to dummy and lead the nine of clubs. This is a safety play against a guarded king-jack holding in the East hand."

Jim: "Had South bid seven he would have tried the best play for all the tricks which is a first-round finesse of the queen. It would have failed miserably this time, but it still would have been the best play."

Pollution Guerrilla Plans to Strike Again

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

AUORA, Ill. (AP) — The Fox, a self-appointed pollution guerrilla police have been trying to nab since 1968, says he is ready to strike again.

This time he says it will be with a national force of anonymous helpers. They'll stick anti-pollution labels on products The Fox says are fouling air and water.

"The campaign will start against a company located near the Mississippi River in Illinois," said The Fox by telephone. "It is a major polluter of the air and water."

The identity of The Fox never has been known. He takes the name from the Fox River, which flows 40 miles west of Chicago.

His exploits have become legendary. He once plugged the drainage pipe of a soap company with straw, logs and rocks. He walked into the reception room of the United States Steel Co. poured a bottle of vile-smelling liquid on the white rug and stuck a sticker on the glass door: "Go Fox - Stop Pollution."

He climbed on a railway bridge across the Indiana Toll Road and hung a 60-foot sign: "We're Involved - In Killing Lake Michigan. U.S. Steel."

He capped a factory smokestack that was emitting soot. He dumped a can of raw waste on the polished corporate floor of the U.S. Reduction Co. in East Chicago, Ind. He has dumped dead fish on doorsteps of executives.

He placed a sign at the bottom of the Picasso ironwork in the Chicago Civic Centre. The sign depicted Mayor Richard J. Daley and a representative of U.S. Steel talking of an airport in Lake Michigan: "Feel free to use the Lake, Dick. We do," says the steel executive.

There wasn't much heard from The Fox for a while. Then his tactics shifted to stickers. They appeared on bars of soap made by an Aurora firm he accused of polluting his beloved Fox River. Then aerosol cans of All Set hair spray began appearing on the shelves with orange stickers: "All Set Poisons Our Streams."

The Fox said the manufacturing plant in Coal City, Ill., was fouling water. The general manager, Dennis Arndt, denied it.

"The Environmental Protection Agency monitors our outflow," he said. "We were aware the stickers were showing up on the cans. But they did not reflect any change in sales to any extent. It was the whim of an unbalanced person."

Now comes the new sticker attack and The Fox said:

"The stickers are printed by a friend who donates his time. I can send thousands to environment - concerned groups at the universities of Illinois, Arkansas, Tampa, Southern Methodist. I have New Jersey outlets for the New York City area. A vice-president of a bank has friends who fly all over the West Coast and they carry the stickers and distribute them.

"I have a friend who sells sporting goods all over the Midwest and he passes out the stickers to kids. I have a bunch of little old ladies who live along the Fox River. They help in many ways."

Immigration Study Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons will set terms of reference this week for establishment of a special Commons-Senate committee to study the government's green paper on immigration.

Jake Epp, Progressive Conservative immigration critic, says he agrees with a government motion to send the immigration paper to committee.

But the committee's consideration of policy alternatives outlined in the green paper could be hampered by the "strictures of time," Mr. Epp (Provencher) said in an interview Friday.

The motion suggests that the committee report its findings to the House by July 31.

Mr. Epp said the committee should not be "a public relations operation for the government, not just a mouthpiece for decisions that the government is going to make."

"If it is looking for advice from the public, it should take that advice."

The joint committee "will have to tackle some highly sensitive political issues . . . such as the racial problem,' Mr. Epp said. "It is there and we will have to look at it squarely."

Immigration Minister Robert Andras, who tabled the 570-page immigration study in the Commons Feb. 3, has said it was designed as a "foundation for constructive discussion on the role future immigration policy should play."

Mr. Andras says he personally favors a "moderate growth" approach to immigration.

A quota system and an immigration program to gear the immigrant flow more directly to the national economy and labor market needs are among policy alternatives suggested in the study.

School Boards Ask Wells To Revise Spending Ceilings

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Chairmen of several large Ontario school boards Saturday sent a telegram to Education Minister Thomas Wells asking for a revision of provincial spending ceilings to meet "realistically" the needs of the larger boards.

John Ferris, London chairman, said in an interview Sunday that because of a recent 29-per-cent wage settlement gained by Windsor secondary school teachers, other large boards may face increases of up to 30 per cent.

Board chairmen from 15 major urban centres agreed at a two-day closed meeting in Ottawa that ended Saturday to seek consideration of problems unique to larger boards.

The Windsor situation has chairmen worried the settlement reached there will form basic teacher demands in their areas.

Mr. Ferris said the solution to increased costs is a revision of ceilings. If the London board honored ceilings, the most it could offer its secondary school teachers would be an eight-per-cent increase.

"That's not enough," he said. "If we offered them that, we'd have no schools operating now. Thats irrational.'

The London board, like many others, is paying staff more than the ceilings legally allow.

Mr. Ferris said the chairmen also agreed that individual contracts with teachers are no longer valid because they serve only to put such teachers in a preferred position.

Teachers now violate the contract as they have in Windsor, Thunder Bay and now Ottawa, "and boards don't have an effective remedy."

An Ontario Supreme Court justice recently ruled that while Windsor teachers were in breach of their individual contracts during the recent seven-week strike, he would not allow an injunction forcing them back to work.

The Ottawa board, where a secondary school teachers' strike began Friday, is also ignoring the ceilings. A spokesman for the board's negotiating committee said the latest offer will put the board $2.2 million over its ceilings.

Under current legislation, the province may impose penalties on boards that go above ceilings.

Mr. Ferris said the chairmen also asked Mr. Wells to enact school-board-teacher bargaining legislation after consultation with the Ontario School Trustees' Council.

The chairmen want the right to lock out teachers and close down schools when the board thinks schools will be inoperable because of teacher strikes or sanctions. Schools now cannot close without the minister's permission.

Death Sentence Imposed

WINNIPEG (CP) — George Joseph Peloquin, a 33-year-old former Vancouver newspaper man, has become the first person in Canada to be sentenced to death for slaying a prison employee since Criminal Code amendments in 1972 set a mandatory death penalty for such an offence.

A 12-man jury of the Manitoba Supreme Court deliberated about eight hours Friday night and Saturday before returning the guilty verdict.

Mr. Justice J. R. Solomon sentenced Peloquin to be hanged at nearby Headingley jail Sept. 10 for the murder last July 22 of Stanley Conrad Green, 52, a carpentry instructor at Stony Mountain prison, where Peloqnin had been serving a term for armed robbery.

Peloqhin's sentence was pronounced just five days before he would have been eligible for parole.

The jury recommended clemency in returning the verdict, which carries an automatic appeal.

Evidence presented during the trial indicated that Peloquin suffered severe mental difficulties since he started taking drugs in the late 1960s.

Plant Occupation Is Ended As Sale Arrangements Made

ABBOTSFORD, B.C. (CP) — Former employees of Canada Packers' defunct Willows poultry processing operation claimed victory Friday as they ended their 36-day occupation at the plant.

"It's a win, there's no doubt about that," Jim Wells, union business agent, said.

The members of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers union decided to leave the plant as Maplewood Processors was on the verge of completing its purchase from Toronto-based Canada Packers.

Mr. Wells said the sale to the Victoria-based firm only awaits a promised loan guarantee from Dave Stupich, British Columbia agriculture minister, under the Farm Products Industry Improvement Act.

He said Maplewood has agreed to take on the existing union contract as part of the purchase deal. When Canada Packers announced the Jan. 24 closure, the firm said it would end the operation rather than continue under terms of a collective agreement which improved wages and benefits, reached with the union in December.

The new contract increased women's wages to $4.96 an hour from $3.69 an hour during two years, while men's wages were increased to $5.11 an hour from $3.86 an hour during the same period

PM Helps Vickie, 9, Prove Tale

FORESTVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Nine-year-old Vickie Vermeulen of this town 12 miles southwest of Simcoe had a problem that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau later helped to solve.

The prime minister had just finished a Jamaican holiday with his family in January and was about to fly home when Vickie, on vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Vermeulen, had the luck to meet him at Montego Bay airport.

When Vickie returned home and told her story about the meeting, the boys in her Grade 4 class at Forestville public school didn't believe her.

To clear up the doubts once and for all, Vickie wrote to Mr. Trudeau explaining her problem and asked if he would reply.

Mr. Trudeau's autographed reply, which arrived last Thursday, said in part: "I do indeed remember chatting and shaking hands with a lovely little girl at Montego Bay airport, and I am very pleased to see that you also, Vickie, keep a fond memory of our frienlly meeting."

Mr. Trudeau also asked her to say hello to the children in her class for him.

Vickie says that the boys in her class didn't apologize to her even after they saw the letter.

Lindsay Man Held After Four Wounded

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 22-year-old Lindsay, Ont., man has been charged following a shooting early Sunday in which four persons were injured at the Jericho Youth Hostel in the city's west end.

Peter Ian Wood, resident at the hostel for about six months, was charged with five counts of attempted murder, one of breaking and entering and another of possession of a dangerous weapon. He will appear in provincial court today.

Police said the affair began when a man jumped from his bed at the Hostel and began firing indiscriminately with a Swedish-made .30-30 rifle. The 50 guests in the hostel scurried for cover and one cut himself diving through a window to escape.

The man apparently then left the hostel and ran into a nearby gun shop, police said. They credited shop owner Douglas Hough with preventing what might have been a major shoot-out.

Mr. Hough ran from the rear of his shop and found a man firing a rifle through a window at police outside. Mr. Hough fired one round from a pistol at the intruder who promptly surrendered and was turned over to police uninjured.

Injured earlier at the hostel was Richard Smith, 22, of Toronto, who was in critical condition in hospital following surgery for wounds to his face, head, chest, shoulder and arm. In fair condition in hospital was Paul Visoski, 22, of Toronto, with bullet wounds to the chest and wrist.

Arthur Skolnik, 21, of Quebec, was in fair condition in hospital with wounds to the thigh and shoulder Christopher Dailey, 22, of Toronto, was in fair condition with a broken leg.

Olivia Newton-John was best female pop vocalist, winning the Record of the Year award, for her I Honestly Love You.

The Grammy Awards are to the recording industry what the Oscars are to the movies.

Sinatra Show Seats Kept For VIPs

TORONTO (CP) — Hundreds of Frank Sinatra fans who lined up for hours Friday to buy ringside seats for his May 10 performance were left fuming because most of the seats were put aside for VIPs.

Only 700 of the 2,000 $25 seats for the Maple Leaf Gardens' performance were available to the public, and they were sold out Friday, leaving hundreds of people who lined up early at five Simpsons stores—the only ticket outlets—disappointed.

Sinatra will earn almost $500,000 from his two performances at the 19,000-seat Gardens—the biggest box-office gross ever for a single entertainer in Toronto.

Gardens attraction manager Peter Larsen admitted in an interview that most of the $25 tickets had been set aside for "people with connections."

"Just about every VIP in town—company presidents, bigshots in the media, and entertainment world executives—have been begging us for weeks for those status-symbol $25 seats," Mr. Larsen said.

Lorenz Still Held

BERLIN (AP) — Kidnapped political leader Peter Lorenz still was missing today. But the plane that took five anarchist convicts out of the country in compliance with the demand of his abductors left them in Aden and took off, the West German interior ministry announced.

Aboard the Lufthansa Boeing 707 was Lutheran Pastor Heinrich Albertz, a former mayor of West Berlin who accompanied the anarchists on their flight from Frankfurt Monday.

The Movement of the 2nd of June, the terrorist organization that said it abducted Lorenz last Thursday, said it would not release him until Albertz returned with word that the anarchists had found refuge.

The three women and two men were released from prisons in West Berlin and West Germany during the weekend and sent out of the country with 120,000 marks ransom (about $52,000), complying with the demands of the kidnappers. A sixth convict whose freedom was demanded refused to leave jail.

The plane landed the anarchists in Aden, the capital of South Yemen, Monday night after officials in Tripoli in Lybia, Damascus in Syria and Djibouti in French Somaliland refused to accept them.

Quinte Sports Centre Re-zoning Is Approved

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

City council has approved — after some on-the-spot amendments — the draft bylaw proposing rezoning for the long-awaited Quinte Sport Centre project in northeast Belleville.

Action on the bylaw was delayed two weeks ago when spokesmen for the Belleville Yardmen — the organization whose lottery is funding the Cannifton Road complex — asked for a number of changes.

The draft document — after being reviewed in the interim by Quinte Planning Board officials — came back to council Monday night to again meet request for some alterations.

The major request — from George Murray, lawyer for the Yardmen— was for a change in parking space proposals. The bylaw proposed parking be based on one space for every four people accommodated on the premises.

Mr. Murray indicated present developmental plans for the site could not meet such a requirement and said council already had decided on approval after viewing the site plan.

There would only be a few annual occasions when the centre would draw a maximum crowd and arrangements could be made to avoid parking problems he said.

But, as yet, the entire site was only 26 acres. If parking problems developed in future the organization would be prepared to look at alternatives.

Finally, Mr. Murray went into conference with city manager Wilbur Purcell and an amendment was produced to which council agreed.

The parking ratio was altered to one space for every six covered, permanent indoor spectator seats. On a permanent basis this would give the centre 767 parking spaces.

Salmon from Moira Laden with Mercury

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Quinte-area anglers should be cautous about eating fish stocked in the Great Lakes by U.S. conservation agencies and now being caught in district waters, a Belleville city councillor warned Monday night.

The caution came from Ald. Stu Meeks. He said a coho salmon taken from the Moira River contained "above acceptable" levels of mercury.

He told city council he realized it was only a single specimen and that he would ask the Moira River Conservation Authority to seek a "proper study" of the situation.

Meantime, "I though our citizen should use a bit of discretion in eating these fish," sad Ald. Meeks.

The cobo, caught last fall, had a U.S. conservation tag, he said, and the mercury level was reported after he sent the fish to the natural resources ministry.

Ald. Meeks — chairman of the conservation authority's fish and wildlife adivsory committee — said later he would discuss the report at the group's next meeting and ask for a study.

Algerian Proposes Development Deal

ALGIERS (AP) — Algerian President Houari Boumedienne said today the oil-exporting countries should offer to freeze their prices "in real terms" until 1980—provided the industrialized countries commit themselves to "a huge undertaking for the development of the Third World."

Boumedienne made his proposal as he formally opened the first summit conference of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

He urged OPEC to set up a fund of $10 billion to $15 billion to make the oil countries' mounting assets "fructify"—or fruitful. He suggested helping importing countries pay their oil bill and promoting development co-operation with the industrialized countries.

Algerian Foreign Minister Abdelaziz Bouteflika first submitted Boumedienne's proposal to a preparatory meeting of OPEC oil, finance and foreign ministers on Sunday. Sources said the ministers were unable to reach agreement on the plan but decided to pass it on to the summit.

There was no immediate reply to Boumedienne from the other leaders present.

Hydro Official Opposes Public Voice in Projects

TORONTO (CP) — A senior Ontario Hydro official said Monday that project delays caused by lengthy public hearings may create problems in meeting provincial electricity requirements after 1978.

H. A. Smith, vice-president of engineering and operations, said the public should have a voice only in projects at least a decade away.

He told delegates at the opening session of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association and Association of Municipal Electrical Utilities that tight construction schedules after 1978 may lead to late in-service dates and an increase in unreliability.

He said a proposed nuclear station near Bowmanville, Ont., is one year behind the original schedule because of approval delays.

Mr. Smith said the major cause of delays is a lengthy public planning process.

Price of Link to Euromart May Be Investment Chances

BONN (CP) — Canadian willingness to give the European Economic Community a break in investment opportunities might be the key to a special agreement with the EEC, a West German official indicated today.

Arnim Grunewald, deputy government spokesman, told reporters that West Germany hopes for a chance for increased mutual investment with Canada, a trend that might require special treatment for the EEC under foreign investment controls adopted last year by Canada.

The Canadian legislation, based on a test of significant benefit for new investment or takeovers by foreign concerns, "might not be the ideal towards the EEC."

"This is a question for the Canadian government to answer," Grunewald added.

Emphasizing that any "contractual agreement," the term used by Trudeau to refer to a link with the EEC, would have to get the unanimous consent of the nine EEC member countries, he said that the free investment attitude of West Germany is shared by other members of the European Common Market.

Grunewald made his comments as Trudeau continued to meet with West German officials to discuss the EEC question and other topics of bilateral and international interest.

Grunewald appeared as confused as most observers here at to what is meant by a contractual agreement, the expression used by Trudeau to describe the closer economic ties and co-operation Canada wants with the EEC. The concept was given general support Monday by West German Vice-Chancellor Hans-Dientrich Genscher.

"i didn't invent it, it's not my word," said Grunewal, laughing, when asked what form the West German government considers a contractual link might take.

Drop Humane Society Pact

City to Build Animal Pound

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Belleville is ending its animal-control agreement with the Ontario Humane Society (OHS) City council members agreed Monday night the agency was pricing itself out of business with the city.

Council decided, it will build an animal pound in the city and contract for pound and control servces.

The OHS has sought a new contract for the services operated out of its big regional shelter on Avonlough Road, west of the city. The current contract runs out next month.

Proposed terms of a new contract, recently outlined by OHS vice-president Tom Hughes, provided that the current per-capital fee of 75 cents paid by the city be increased to $1, to $1.10 by July and $1.25 by 1976. (With its present population, the city would pay about $35,000 on the $1 per capita schedule.)

Mr. Hughes also proposed that any contract termination be reduced from the present six months' notice to three months.

City manager Wilbur Purcell reported it was his opinion the OHS "is pricing itself out of contention for the services required. . ."

Reducing termination notice to 90 days would create a weaker future bargaining position for the city should the OHS "want to use the termination clause to force an increase in the contract rate"

Mr. Purcell said a preliminary cost estimate from the provincial agriculture and food ministry showed a "typical" pound with 20 pens would cost $15,000-$20,000 — if built on a site already owned by the city.

The duties of animal warden and pound operator could be contracted out to an individual, or couple, at a fixed price, he said.

Ald. George Zegouras questioned whether the costs of such a scheme would not eventually prove it would be cheaper to renew the OHS agreement.

But Mayor Robin Jeffrey said she supported the city manager's suggestions since the OHS has become "so expensive" the city has to seek alternatives.

She also said the OHS Avonlough Road facility is up for sale. If sold a problem could be created if the city was tied to 90 days notice.

She said Mr. Hughes had also indicated that if the OHS shelter found a purchaser, the agency would seek a city grant to help build a new facility.

"That's still a question mark," said the mayor.

Ald. Stu Meeks believed the city manager's proposal would be cost-saving in the long run.

Margarine Lets Men Flee By 6-inch Hole

TORONTO (CP) — Two prisoners, who escaped from Toronto jail overnight by using margarine to help them slither through a six-inch-wide corridor window, are back in custody.

Police said the prisoners, Paul Halpin, 27, and Mervin Hardy, 24, ripped a screen off the window, used a leg of a chair to pry apart iron bars across the opening and squeezed through the window after greasing their bodies with margarine.

Teachers' Demands Intolerable: Davis

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier William Davis says the wage demands of some teacher groups cannot be tolerated but he hopes a local strike by 1,600 teachers can be solved without provincial intervention.

The 17-per-cent wage increase granted to teachers in Windsor recently is too high and if Ottawa teachers are asking for 40 per cent, that figure also is beyond reason, he told a group of law students Monday night.

"We cannot tolerate requests of this kind if they are translated province-wide," he said.

The high school teachers have left 26,000 students without classes since they walked out last Thursday. The Ottawa board of education says they are asking for wage increases averaging 42 per cent.

The teachers, represented by the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation, do not use percentage figures in describing their demands. They are asking that the minimum annual salary be increased to $12,490 from $7,200 and the maximum be raised from $18,535 to $26,230 in a one-year contract.

Mounties Leave Answer

SEPT-ILES, Que. (CP) — The runaway ship Answer is somewhere "in the middle of the ocean" plying its way to an undisclosed destination, an RCMP spokesman said today.

Supt. G. A. Kennedy said in an interview in Montreal that RCMP agents, who had been aboard the Answer to execute a seizure order, had been taken off the ship.

When asked where the Answer was being guided by its controversial Captain Brian Erb, he replied:

"I don't know where Captain Erb is going. The boat is in the middle of the ocean and is staying there."

After boarding the vessel during the weekend, RCMP had said it was headed towards the port of Sept-Iles, but Supt. Kennedy said its destination now depended on various factors, including ice conditions and fuel.

A spokesman for the transport department in Halifax said the boat was 35 miles north of the Magdalen Islands by mid-morning and headed in a south-easterly direction at nine knots per hour.

Sidney Stands Pat On Bridge Site

Sidney Township officials are cautiously optimistic that municipal taxpayers might get off lucky this year.

Based on preliminary figures released by the township's tax department, an estimated $700,000-increase in the township's assessment in 1974 might cover slight increases in the costs of municipal operations. An approximate $70,000 in revenue is anticipated from this new assessment, a township official said.

In the last three years, total budget spending for the township has increased marginally from $1.2 million in 1972 to $1.5 million in 1974.

Township Reeve Gord Wilman said an accurate forecast is difficult before the township learns what education and county bills will amount to — two bills the reeve said are generally the largest of all municipal expenditures.

Detailed financial discussion for the township are not expected to begin until the early part of April, said Reeve Wilman.

"We might be able to hold the line on taxes but we don't know for sure," he said at the close of Monday's council session.

Two factors in the coming budget are a substantial increase in the township's payment to the Moira River Conservation Authority and the first-time-ever budget for a township parks department.

Based on information passed along by the conservation authority, the township's levy will increase from last year's $2,300 to $3,826 in 1975.

Also at Monday's meeting, council was approached for $6,500 by the newly-appointed township parks board. The bulk of the funds — as outlined in the budget proposal — is earmarked for creation and upkeep of park facilities surrounding the municipal offices.

Both funding requests were approved.

Sidney May Hold Line On Tax Hike This Year

Sidney Township council Monday night re-affirmed its stand that any new, high-level bridge connecting Hastings and Prince Edward counties should be situated in the vicinity of Loyalist Wallbridge Rd.

Initially, the township was approached by the council of Ameliasburg which asked for Sidney Council endorsement for such a scheme. In the fall Sidney councillors elected to concur with their neighbors across the bay presenting the united front with Prince Edward County Council that the new bridge should not locate on the present swing bridge site at Rossmore.

Sidney Township received a letter from Ameliasburg Monday once again asking for support of a resolution — this time to rescind the earlier resolution and have the new bridge built at Rossmore.

Council received the letter but refused to pass such endorsation saying their reasoning for moving the bridge still stand.

Deputy Reeve Glen Meyers said, "new growth is going to take place near the Wallbridge Road and it makes sense to have the bridge there."

"I haven't changed my mind (about the location), said Councillor Reg McCurdy. "Neither have I," said the deputy reeve.

Two meetings are scheduled within the next three weeks for local discussion of the bridge.

March 7 a technical meeting of municipal delegates will be held in Ameliasburg followed by a meeting of all municipal councils to be held March 20 in Hastings County Court offices at 7.30 p.m.

Authority May Ban All Building on Flood Plain

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

FRANKFORD — By the end of June this year, the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority may have regulations in force that empower it to control development inside the Mayhew Creek flood plain.

The estimate came during an interview Monday with authority resources manager Bryan Boyce, who currently is reviewing work by Kilborn Engineering Ltd. of Toronto. The firm has produced a map of the creek's flood plain within Trenton's town limits.

At present, delineation of the flood plain and supportive documents are at the next-to-final stage of approval by the authority. Once it has reviewed the work of engineers, the stage will be set for adoption.

Mr. Boyce said Monday he hopes all necessary work will be completed by early summer.

Put simply, he said, the aim of the mapping of the creek's flood plain is to protect property and lives. What is not wanted in Trenton is the reoccurence of the massive flooding in the Grand River Conservation Authority where an estimated $10-million damage was done in 1974.

As defined by the engineering study, the maps show the maximum limit of flooding that would occur if a once-in-100-years regional storm dumped 8.24 inches of rain on Trenton. They also define an area, approximately 50 feet outside the limit of the flood plain, that cannot be filled in and used for development.

Through the Conservation Authorities Act, said Mr. Boyce, the authority, in co-operation with the town, will be able to enforce those limits. Developers who infringe on the flood plain may be taken to court.

He said in Ontario, court action has been taken but "a lot have been settled out of court because a developer has taken it (any building) out himself".

Commercial development, housing, even picnic shelters and outdoor washrooms, will be banned from the flood plain, he said.

"The aim is to stop development before it becomes a costly debt to the taxpayers and developers," said Mr. Boyce.

As a potentially "hazardous" area, it will be set aside for passive parkland use, once the authority adopts the study.

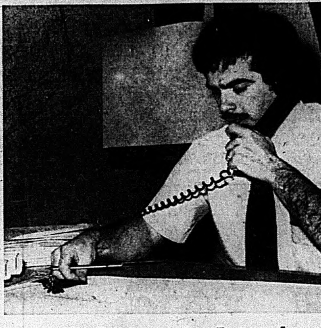
Existing development in the flood plain may "have to be put up with", said Mr. Boyce, but "we may be recommending that they (homeowners) flood-proof homes."

Homes mainly along the north side of Wooler Rd., are situated in the creek's flood plain and are flooded some years in spring.

Part of the problem there is that a culvert at the CNR bridge cannot handle water naturally draining into the area during spring run-off or during heavy rains, he said.

When adopted, the study will define those areas that will no longer be useable for housing. The permanent freeze on development will be defined clearly in the town's official plan. At present, only a block designation exists on the land that now is defined as an environmentally "high hazard" area.

To be affected, is an area of varying widths along Mayhew Creek from the Tremur Lake dam to the Trent River, opposite Le Cas Island. It is roughly 1.5 miles of the 14.2-mile length of the creek.



Building to be Banned

In an interview Monday, and despite the occasional interruption by a telephone call, Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority resources manager outlines the impact of the now nearly-completed mapping of the flood plain of Mayhew Creek in Trenton. The study, whose costs was borne principally by the town, defines an area in which development will be banned in order to safeguard both lives and property from the affects of flooding.

County Jail Termed 'Horrible' by Byers

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Town council is going to jail for a first-hand view of lock-up facilities termed "completely unsatisfactory" in a motion forwarded by the Picton Police Commission.

The motion, moved by police commissioner Judge Wilfrid S. Lane, stated that Picton police chief Charles Fletcher has emphasized the condition of the old jail cells since he is responsible for the welfare of prisoners there. It was noted the municipality also is liable and it could become a serious matter should a prisoner receive injuries or attempt suicide while in custody.

Town coucillor and Picton lawyer Richard Byers said he is concerned by the report on conditions on the lock-up.

He said the cell doors with their high cross-bars clearly are against regulations.

"If you went there you would find it horrible," he said, referring to the jail.

Mr. Byers added that the question of town employees locking prisoners up in illegal facilities is a serious one. Policemen on duty cannot see the cells at all times.

Picton Deputy-Reeve Larry Richardson, who suggested council tour the jail, said the likelihood of a suicide should not be taken lightly. He was supported in this view by councillors Norman March and Charles Hepburn.

In its motion to town council pointing up the inadequacy of the lock-up the police commission stressed it is not recommending any specific action at this time. Chief Fletcher has been authorized by the commission to make a thorough investigation and report. After its submission to the police commission, the report will be forwarded to council with a request for action.

Counselling Costs Up

BANCROFT — Municipal council here met Monday with area trustee of the Hastings county board of education Earl Hawley and Alan Browson, chairman of the board of Children and Family Services of Hastings county in an attempt to discuss the reported increase in the cost of attendence counselling for the north Hastings area.

Trustee Hawley told the local council that the attendance counselling for the whole county had, in the past been handled by the Children and Family services, however, in the last year that group had appeared reluctant to do the job in the northern township so it had been contracted to a private individual.

At the moment, the board is paying the contracted agent $5 a call up to 10 calls a week.

Presently the attendance counselling in the county cost about $29,000.

Mr. Bronson, of the children and family services, said his organization feels school attendance often reflected the home environment so the children's workers could usually handle the attendance problem.

Bancroft reeve Russell Hawley indicated concern over the increased costs of providing the attendance service since a portion of the funding would come from local taxpayers.

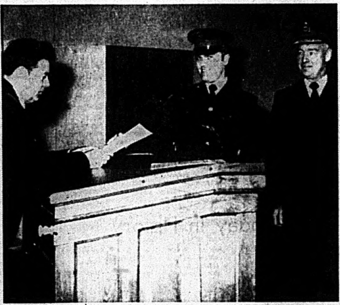
Thrush Joins Picton Force

PICTON — A former Metro Toronto police officer, Thomas Charles Thrush, Monday was sworn in as a constable with the Picton police department.

Constable Thrush, who took his oath of office before Judge Robert Walmsley of Picton, fills a vacancy on the force created when Constable Charles Fletcher was promoted to chief of police in December 1974.

The induction at Shire Hall was attended by Picton Crown attorney Richard Sheehy, Picton police chief Charles Fletcher, town police constables George Wright, Donald Camp and Ronald Roblin and officers from the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Picton's police force now has eight men, including chief Fletcher and sergeant Scott Hele.



Thrush Sworn In

Constable Thomas Thrush, formerly of the Metro Toronto police force, Monday was sworn in as an officer with the Picton police department. Constables from the town police force and the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police attended the brief induction at Shire Hall. Constable Thrush was sworn in by Picton judge Robert Walmsley with Picton police chef Charles Fletcher looking on. His duties begin at once.

Council Told Upgrade Hall Or Lose Banquet Permits

STIRLING — There has to be a lot of changes made to the Stirling community hall or no more banquet permits will be issued by the liquor control board, Reeve Ray Short told council Monday evening.

The Stirling and District Business Association was granted a banquet permit for three days during the Homecoming Weekend.

An inspection was made by authorities, council learned, and the finding were not favourable The reeve said the inspectors were not happy with the fire escape for one thing.

"If we had a fire it would be dangerous," deputy-reeve Fred Brandt said.

"They would be jumping out of the windows," Reeve Short added. He went on to say that there were only 130 persons allowed upstairs, but noted the place had been overcrowded on the weekend.

Councillor Wayne Martin objected that when council was asked for permission to seek a banquet permit, the spokesman "specifically asked for beer. There was more served than that. It's the principal of it; when asked for one thing and it's expanded quite a bit, that bothers me."

Deputy-reeve Brandt pointed out that there was nothing in writing in the request.

In other business, Councillor Ruby Tompkins said the library board was disturbed that Sydney gave Frankford and Stirling equal grants of $100 last year.

Mrs. Tompkins explained that Ontario gives municipalities grants based upon population, and that Sydney spend $10,000 on its library in Batawa. She pointed out that Rawdon gave $3,252 to the Stirling library last year.

Council is going to support the library board in letter form in a bid to get more library funds from Sydney.

Pools Popular Despite Abundance of Beaches

By TERRY SPRAGUE
Staff Correspondent

PICTON — Who would buy a swimming pool in a county completely surrounded by water and boasting a number of recreational parks and several fine beaches?

'An increasing number", says Picton resident Hugh Jones, Mr. Jones, a four-year veteran of swimming pool installation, says the idea is becoming "more popular" and compared to other forms of recreation, the investment is considerably less. He says he expects to install 15 swimming pools this summer.

Mr. Jones attributes popularity of pools to "unpleasant swimming conditions" in surrounding waters. Many people too, enjoy the privacy of their own swimming pool.

"Not everyone cares to swim at a beach crowded with thousand of people," he added.

Mr. Jones says swimming pools come in a variety of shapes and sizes but the most popular size is 16 by 32 feet Depending on the construction, — concrete, vinyl or fibreglass the cost can run anywhere from $7,000 to $9,000.

"It usually takes prospective buyers at least three years before they make up their mind to put in a pool," says Mr. Jones.

Construction commences in April if ground conditions are suitable.

Mr. Jones emphasises the importance of a sound deck around the pool.

Pools Take

"Prospective buyers should ensure that a deck is included in the price of a pool, as it must be constructed properly to withstand the winter," he stresses.

An optional piece of equipment which he says, many people are investing in is a heater. Available for about $500, they maintain a constant water temperature, lengthening the time in which the pool can be used during the year.

Life-saver Gets Award

PICTON — A part-time teller with the Bank of Nova Scotia here, Gladys Porter, of Picton will receive an award Friday during the annual meeting of the Royal Lifesaving Committee in Toronto.

Mrs. Porter saved the life of an Oshawa man, Leslie Curran, 45 at Salmon Point last summer when she administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation after the boater fell overboard from his craft.

He was towed to shore by a cottager, Peter Cole of Toronto who is a former Picton resident.

Mrs. Porter, who holds YMCA, Royal Lifesaving and national lifesaving certificates, immediately began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to revive Mr. Curran, who was later taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital.

She was recommended for the lifesaving award by Constable Donald Watt of the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Mrs. Porter instructs residents at Prince Edward Heights, the provincial government complex for the mentally retarded, in swimming.

Winter-dug Graves Splits Stirling Council

STIRLING — Unless a certain clause is removed from the new cemetery bylaw which last year's council passed in December, Councillor Ruby Tompkins wants to be removed as chairman of the cemetery committee, she told council Monday night.

Councillor Tompkins said she broke the bylaw twice recently. The clause states that only a clergyman can request the cemetery committee to dig a grave in the winters months. An undertaker or a member of the deceased's family cannot ask for a grave to be dug it was pointed out.

Despite the legal formality, Mrs. Tompkins said she has approved winter graves. She said a Belleville undertaker told her it was the silliest bylaw he had ever heard.

Reeve Ray Short said he had never heard of such a situation before, where the minister only could call to dig a grave. Deputy reeve Fred Brandt favoured going back to the old system of shoring remains in the vault until spring burial could be carried out.

Councillor Wayne Martin was against a motion that the cemetery committee draft an amendment to the bylaw to be presented to the next council meeting. Mr. Martin helped draft the bylaw last year.

In other business, Councillor Wayne Martin achieved partial success in his bid to have money spent on a new ice-making plant for the arena to come from the general account rather than funds controlled by the fund-raising committee for a new Stirling district area.

Councillor Martin pointed out after the meeting that the situation might not remain this way. At the last council meeting, council passed a motion authorizing the money to be taken from the arena building fund. Now this new motion ignored that action.

Councillor Martin could not explain how this came about when asked if another motion was required to over-ride the motion made two weeks ago. Council approved a sum of $9,324. The totol bill will come to over $29,000 council was told by the clerk.

Reeve Shortt said that if council pays for the ice plant out of general funds now, he would recommend that Stirling pay for it over two years and borrow the money to do it.

Clerk Robert Hulin told council he had received a telephone call from MP George Hees' secretary regarding a federal grant for a new arena.

"The word is, no grant is available at present," the clerk related. "When there is one, Mr. Hees will work to get it. He said there is no sense coming to Ottawa for a meeting, because we would get no satisfaction when we got there."

Lack of Snow Limits Snowmobiling in Parks

OUTLET PARK — Despite certain restrictions on snowmobiling in some of Prince Edward County's provincial parks, there has been little trouble this winter, says Outlet Park superintendant, Bob Davison.

The lack of snow this winter resulted in fewer snowmobilers in the county's park.

"There were only about six weekends when snowmobilers were active in the parks," stated the superintendent.

Restrictions in Outlet, Sandbanks and North Beach Parsk are being enforced to prevent possible damage to the fragile sand dunes and reforested areas.

At present, snowmobiling is prohibited in both North Beach Park and Sandbanks Park, and is allowed only on the main park road and camping area road in Outlet Provincial Park.

Longer Council Term Suggested

BANCROFT — Village council here passed a resolution during Monday's meeting that it is not in favor of any changes to Ontario's Elections Act with the exception of extending the term of office to a three-year period.

Bancroft's reeve Russell Hawley said the mechanics of changing council's fiscal year would be monumental.

"If we had a three-year term for the local council maybe we could get something done," said deputy reeve Audrey Donnelly.

Mr. Donelly cited the examples of Bancroft's municipal sewer system which has taken six years to complete and the senior citizens housing complex which has needed four years to get to the start of construction to show how slow a local council has to move when working with a provincial government

EXCLUSIVE OR MULTIPLE LISTING

Ed. McKinney
J. E. McKinney
Realty Ltd.

There are two ways to list your home for sale with a REALTOR. The exclusive listing and the multiple listing. An exclusive listing gives one REALTOR the opportunity to find a buyer for your home within a specified period of time. It also gives him an incentive to devote much time and attention to the sale because he knows he will receive the full commission if he is successful.

In many areas of Canada, there is also Multiple Listing Service (MLS). Under this system, you stil list your home for sale with one REALTOR, but he distributes information and photos of your home to all other REALTORS who belong to the MLS System. This gives greater exposure to prospects than if your home is listed with only a single REALTOR. You still pay only one commission — to the listing REALTOR. If another REALTOR produces the buyer, they share the single commission. Ask your REALTOR which would be the most advantageous method of listing your particular property.

In Our Time

Signs of our times — in the United States in particular, as reflected by the job ads in The New York Times under the heading of Health Care/Hospital/Medical employment opportunities.

Not a few of the job openings are for psychiatrists and psychologists, and for counsellors and other staff at alcoholism treatment centres, and in one case for a project director at a child abuse protective resource institute in New Jersey.

These are the kind of jobs that go with our often perplexing way of life, here in Canada as much as anywhere else in the western world. But they seem to hold special urgency amid the teeming masses of the United States — a land moreover where to be ill can be ruinous financially.

There was an item in the paper the other day about a man in the U.S. who had offered an eye to pay for his wife's cancer treatment; she died anyway. And another about a doctor who refused to deliver a baby, claiming he had repeatedly told the woman she would have to be able to pay for the service — in excess of $300. The child was born in an ambulance.

These are the kind of situations when Canadians — seldom placed in this sort of dilemma — may claim with truth to be "fortunate."

On medical costs in the United States, the eminent Dr. Karl Menninger made a revealing observation in a recent interview with Arthur Snider of The Chicago Daily News.

"A friend of mine said he was in the hospital for only a few days and already his bill was over $2,000. How in the hell will people be able to pay us? I don't know whether I ought to say this and start a row, but I think we doctors must be chastened. We've had too much success and too much money. I think there is something intrinsically wrong in charging fees when it involves acts of mercy."

Well of course they must be paid; nobody expects it to be for free — even if it is virtually that when medicare schemes are involved — but the question is, when is enough, enough?

Religious Expression

"Give us more of that old time religion" runs a popular gospel song of the day. Certainly neither religion nor God is dead in our society, changed though it is in so many ways.

It is said there has been a decline in churchgoing in Canada in recent years. That may be so, but it does not mean that people at large have necessarily forsaken their beliefs in Christianity or in a divine being.

One of the most encouraging and effective means of expressing such belief in our time is through gospel music and the groups of young people who pursue this means of religious expression.

St. John's United Church in Tweed recently had a local youth folk gospel group at the evening service. Another group is the Brockville Bible College Singers who gave a performance at the Standard Church there following a tour which took in centres in eastern Ontario, Quebec and New York state. The group itself has members from across Canada as well as New York.

Coupled with the popularity of religious music as sung by many well known recording artistes and choral groups, the work of these and other young people's groups in communities across Ontario is an indication that religion still plays a strong part in this day and age.

Insurance Costly

A classic example of inflation in our day is auto insurance. A few years ago an annual premium of $80 or so seemed quite a lot of money to pay for an annual premium on a compact. Today that same premium has almost doubled; and even without there having been any claims in the meantime. Safe driver or not, the insured person's premium mounts steadily year by year.

Canada's Little Watergates

Public Morality in Era of Inequities and Violence

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

A few weeks ago Prime Minister Trudeau was speaking publicly about the threats from within, the potentially destructive elements in a free society, terrorists, international criminals, those who defy law and order.

It is correct and essential that the Canadian prime minister say these things at this time. What he cannot add to the list, presumably because his own government is under attack, is the dangerously growing cynicism of the public in a free society like ours with the role of government.

The obvious source of such cynicism, even a feeling of abandonment with our elected politicians, has to be the Watergate crisis and the deep-set evils it ultimately revealed in the American governmental apparatus.

Watergate has given to Canadian conflict-of-interest crises within government a bite they would otherwise not have had. The several scandals in the Ontario Conservative government, lesser ones in other provinces, the current difficulties of the federal labor minister relative to activities of the Hamilton Harbor Commission.

Where our own country is concerned one could say that such conflict-of-interest has been the warp and woof of the pattern of Canadian history.

Prof. A.R.M. Lower articulately admits to this in his brilliant history of Canada, Colony to Nation. He analyses the scandal which brought down Sir John A. Macdonald's first Conservative government in 1873.

But less well-known, he also analyses the way in which such colonial adventures as the Grand Trunk Railway was built by men who would be its senior executives one year, then switch to become members of the Upper Canadian government the next.

He debunks the arrogant Anglo-Saxon bias that Quebec politics are essentially more corrupt than Anglo-Canadian ones, a view that has been aroused again as Premier Bourassa's provincial government is linked more and more to scandal, conflict-of-interest and even to international criminals.

If nothing then has changed in our domestic politics, or for that matter in the course of U.S. politics from Tammany Hall on up, (or is it down?), why should we worry?

We should worry because our age, in spite of its massive inequalities and barbarities, has established a basic morality in public life which is there for the politicians to follow.

Labor Minister Munro is taking a self-enforced holiday either because he knows he might be involved in a scandal or conversely isn't at all and can't stand the strain of association.

He is a worrier and he is worrying. The Haldeman - Erlichman gang were much harder men, for whom cynicism was a positive philosophy.

They also had a voters' mandate, in which they personally did not share, except to form the machinery which won Nixon the largest presidential vote in history in 1972.

And yet a morality existed even in Washington which swept these men away from very great [illegible] and their presidential master with them.

Maybe the lack of intensity in similar scandals in Canada is the fact we do everything here on a smaller, less exciting stage.

If so, the underlying morality of public life, of the democratic system is no less smaller than it is in any democratic society.

Nor is the threat that some day we in Canada, like the Americans, could lose it.

Television Ads' Image of Women

Boston Globe

When television was new, there was worry lest watching it might ruin children's eyes. That didn't happen, but something worse did.

Now television commercials are maligning and belittling women in ways which should, one would suppose, have feminists yelling their heads off in protest.

Take that ring around the collar bit. This involves the rudeness of those who would point out such a thing and also the implication that a housewife who doesn't get shirts clean is pretty deficient. It might be pointed out in the picture, but it isn't, that the collar wouldn't be dirty if the man washed his neck. Some pop-eyed radicals might also go so far as to state that nowhere in Holy Writ is it said that part of a woman's duty is to wash clothes. Nor that others are entitled to point the finger of scorn at her if she misses a soiled spot now and then.

There are also the harpies who walk into a house and complain that it smells bad. This is a fair portrayal of women? In other plugs, women are shown as utter nitwits. Somebody walks in off the street, announces that Brand A beats Brand X, and the housewife accepts the statement instantly. The suggestion is that she's an idiot who'll believe anything. How about some commercials showing women with brains and courtesy?

Becoming Acquainted with Metric

The Trentonian

It should be no more difficult to learn the metric system than it was to learn the system to which English-speaking peoples have been accustomed for centuries. It is more difficult for those who have, so to speak, to unlearn the former system. It is especially difficult because many of us can see neither the need, nor the value, of the change.

As for the difficulty of learning the system of measurement we have known, it did not exist except as a figment of the imagination of metric-pushers. Whatever value the metric system has, universality being one, it is not necessary to downgrade a perfectly good and usable system which has served us well for centuries.

The formidable task of making things made under the present system work under the new one is not merely a matter of cost, but of a whole psychology. One has only to think of motor vehicles calibrated in miles per hour to see the problem. It is all very well to be enthusiastic for metrication. But the difficulty of the change should not be underestimated. For children learning the new system only, it will be a problem. The problem is for the millions who must adjust a whole way of living. As for business and industry, the cost boggles the imagination.

So whatever one's feeling for metric measurement as superior, he must also have some sympathy for the enormous problems involved in the change, and realize that in addition to the physical and financial problems, there is a very real and very formidable psychological problem. Nobody can brush that off.

Latter-day Farm Economics

Owen Sound Sun-Times

Canadian farmers have learned to be cautious.

Especially when politicians start telling them how to run their affairs.

The latest messages to farmers have been "grow more."

Fair enough. Obviously Canada is using more food all the time, and a hungry world can use our produce.

Food costs are going up, and so are farm costs.

Last year, gross farm income was up about 24 per cent, but the net increase to farmers was less than two per cent.

That's as hard for farmers to swallow as high food prices are for consumers.

It's fine to tell farmers that opportunity is knocking, but they like to know what's at the other side of the door.

Those Liquor Laws

Provincial Politics as Viewed Over a Span of Thirty Years

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Dozens of people have said to me, seeing as I have spent some 30 years around this place, that I should write a book.

It is doubtful if there will ever be such a book. Partly, perhaps, because I may be lazy. And partly, perhaps, because I am just not a book writer.

However, there are stories from out of these years which bear telling.

Some of them because they should be on the record somewhere. And others because they are just possibly interesting.

So from time to time I shall tell some of these stories which we will call "This Was Politics", with the hope that if you can't find value in them or find them interesting you will at least be patient with them.

Notes such as how our modern-day liquor policies were formed.

George Drew was premier in 1945 and there was an election that year.

During the election campaign although it was never publicly mentioned there was widespread rumor that if Drew were returned he would authorize hard liquor bars in the province. At the time there were only beer taverns.

Drew was returned and surely enough he immediately started the machinery in operation to establish bars.

The first step was to set up a committee of cabinet consisting of Drew, Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell and Treasurer and Minister of Mines Leslie Frost.

And it was this committee which drew up the guidelines for the system which essentially we are still operating today.

The fact was, however, that in reality it was only two men who did the work.

For Drew never sat in on the committee. He didn't sit in because he couldn't stand Frost. The two men were just not of the same breed and a few minutes with his Treasurer would have the premier champing his jaws.

But as can happen in life there was a curious later development in this relationship.

In the 1949 convention to elect his successor Drew backed Frost, in fact was largely responsible for him winning.

His reason was simple. He wanted to keep control of the powerful political machine he had built up in Ontario and he knew he wouldn't be able to do this if the powerful Blackwell, Frost's main opponent, was leader.

So he backed Frost and then a couple of days later had the shock of his life.

For Frost called him in and said, in effect, "Good-bye George. Run along. I'm leader now."

For Frost didn't like Drew either. (He never supported him in his federal campaigns.)

The Great Smoking Controversy

Oshawa Times

This is getting to be a harder world every day for the smoker, and around The Times' newsroom it's a harder world than just about anywhere else. We have all these non smokers, you see, and boy! Are they dedicated!

Not, mind you, that we're REALLY crying. We're in the midst of a struggle ourselves to break that particular addiction, one of better than 30 years' standing, and having a steely-eyed gang of critics on watch all day long is helpful, if horrible.

The interesting thing about the continuing smokers versus non-smokers battle in our newsroom is that the non-smokers represent about half the staff. Two years ago, there were only five non-smokers in a staff of 22. Today there are 11 of 23.

And, bearing out the national statistics quoted by the federal department of health, it's our ladies, not our gents, who are the more dedicated smokers. Four of our six females smoke, while nine of our 17 males don't.

Another interesting statistic is that of the 11 members on the editorial staff who are under 30, only three are smokers ... and two of the three are female.

All of which should prove something, because it wasn't that long ago that a non-smoker was an absolute rarity in anyone's newsroom, much less our own.

Newspaper people work under pressure a great deal of the time, which was always our favorite excuse when the Better Half, who swore off herself 10 years ago and is still hanging in there, got on our back. Yet three of our four editors, six of our 10 city and district reporters and two of our three sportswriters are non-smokers, which would seem to knock that argument into a cocked hat, because the editing and writing jobs are the pressure-cookers in editorial. (We've stopped using THAT excuse ourselves.)

Our own intake of tobacco is way down; from 75 cigarettes a day on bad days to a maximum of 20 and as low as five. Which is why we kinda like to have those railbirds around, because another victory for them would surely be a victory for us too.

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Eight ways to reduce the use of cigarettes are suggested by Dr. Gerald Evans, Waterloo Region's medical health officer, in a report prepared for regional council. Very few will argue with the intent of his proposals. People hooked by the cigarette habit are likely to be the first to wish they weren't.

It is a long step, though, from agreeing on what is desirable to agreeing on what is possible. Heading Dr. Evan's list is a recommendation that cigarette advertising be prohibited. This is not a new idea.

Four years ago a number of American newspapers started to refuse cigarette ads. One by one they fell away from the high resolve. Recently the last among them, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, gave up after 45 months without cigarette advertising.

Dr. Evans proposes that doctors, nurses and teachers should not smoke, because they are example setters. This will seem a good idea to all smokers who are not doctors, nurses or teachers. It falls under the heading of, "Somebody do something, but not me."

One idea that might be feasible is his suggestion that there should be lower life-insurance rates for non-smokers. This makes actuarial sense. Masses of statistics make it clear that non-smokers live several years longer than smokers, everything else being equal.

The problem for the life insurance companies would be to spot the cheaters.

Those interested in donating corneas should write to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, 1181 Guy Street, Montreal.

On another occasion, (again in Ann Landers column) you advised readers to write to Pennsylvania for information about learning handicaps in children. I suggest a far better idea would be to write to Denis Laberge at the Vanguard School, 6520 Gouin Boulevard, Montreal for information. This school, which would also welcome donations, has been established to help children in Quebec with learning disabilities.

Stanfield Finds Nobody On Hand for Questions

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition rolled the heavy artillery into the Commons Monday but found that most of the targets in the harbor dredging scandal were missing.

Tht three most-questioned ministers in the controversy were absent, as was Prime Minister Trudeau who is on a 16-day visit to Europe.

Their absences appeared to anger the Progressive Conservatives and Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield was on his feet protesting even before the 40 minutes allotted for questioning of ministrs began.

He said he can understand the absence of Labor Minister John Munro—"and I mean that sincerely"—because the minister is in hospital recovering from exhaustion connected to the controversy.

But why were Transport Minister Jean Marchand and Solicitor-General Warren Allmand missing, he asked.

Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp, acting prime minister, said both had good reasons.

Mr. Allmand was in Regina attending graduation ceremonies for the first female RCMP members and Mr. Marchand was in Montreal discussing inflation with trade union representatives. With Mr. Marchand was Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet, acting labor minister.

There were tough questions in the Commons last week on irregularities associated with federal dredging contracts, and the opposition had expected to continue the barrage Monday.

Little happened, but the government continued to resist calls for a full-scale public inquiry.

Mr. Munro 43, offered last week to resign from the cabinet because his name has been associated with a dredging scandal in Hamilton, his hometown.

He entered hospital when Mr. Trudeau refused to accept his resignation and advised him to see a doctor, take a rest and think it over.

An aide indicated Monday that Mr. Munro may stay on. The minister, who has denied any wrongdoing, has had other disappointments in his 13-year federal political career and "he's come back," the aide said.

Resignation hasn't been discussed since last Wednesday, the day Mr. Munro talked with Mr. Trudeau, the aide added. "That's as far as I can go."

Five persons have been charged so far in the Hamilton case and police say other charges will follow soon as a result of a nationwide investigation into dredging contract irregularities.

Mr. Sharp, fielding questions from Conservatives Lincoln Alexander (Hamilton West) and James McGrath (St. John's East), rejected a public inquiry on grounds that the police investigation should be completed first.

No additional inquiry should be ordered until all results are in from the RCMP inquiry, he argued.

Mr. McGrath said enough questions have been raised to warrant a public investigation. Contracts awarded by the government totalled millions of dollars and the public had a right to know the full story.

Meanwhile, the Commons approved joint Commons-Senate committee hearings to help determine future immigration policies.

Immigration Minister Robert Andras warned, as the House passed a motion to hold the hearings, that no one should demand "extreme action."

"Canada will want a policy free of discrimination regarding race, color or creed," he said. "The scope, importance and magnitude (of the study) involves very thoughtful, very mature consideration."

The committee, given a six-months deadline, must report its findings by July 31.

Will Halt Dumping Of Books

OTTAWA (CP) — Responding to pressure from authors and publishers, the government announced plans Monday to control the domestic sale of cut-rate U.S. editions of books by Canadian authors.

Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner said the government has decided it has the power under the existing Copyright Act to stop books at the border that have been written by Canadians, published in the U.S. and then declared surplus at bargain-basement prices.

He said in a prepared statement that the government will place such books on the prohibited schedule of the customs tariff on receiving "satisfactory evidence" that the copyright legislation was being transgressed.

The announcement follows complaints by Pierre Berton, Farley Mowat and about 50 other Caadian authors that the low-priced U.S. publications were undermining sales of domestic editions of their books.

Supplementary Estimates Put Outgo Far Over Target

OTTAWA (CP) — The government tabled final 1974-75 supplementary spending estimates of $1.65 billion Monday, bringing its over-all spending projection for the year to $26.53 billion.

The total is nearly 30 per cent higher than the original over-all estimate of $22.02 billion tabled a year ago. The government's fiscal year ends March 31.

The main annual spending forecast tabled prior to the start of each fiscal year, normally increases during the year with the periodic tabling of supplementary estimates.

But the rise through 1974-75 was far above the 11 per cent 74 when over-all spending totalled $20.47 billion.

The unusually-high increase through 1974-75 was caused in large part by a 12-per-cent national inflation rate and an expensive oil subsidy program to hold down petroleum costs in eastern Canada.

The over-all figures cover budgetary spending and do not include non-budgetary items such as loans advances and investments for which the government expects to be reimbursed.

Estimates are acutally spending requests by the government. They must be approved by Parliament.

Those tabled Monday, the fourth supplementary package of the year, totalled nearly $2 billion including non-budgetary items.

One non-budgetary entry was $138 million for investment in Alberta oil sands Syncrude Canada Ltd extraction project.

Three budgetary items accounted for most of the remainder: $700 million for the old age security fund, $449 million in payments to the provinces under a tax-sharing arrangement and $155 million for the new Mirabel airport near Montreal.

The four supplementary estimates tabled during the year totalled slightly more than $6 billion—28 per cent above budgetary spending projected a year ago.

The final spending requests prompted a renewed outburst of criticism from Gerald Baldwin, Progressive Conservative House leader.

If supplementary estimates are tabled through 1975-76 at the same rate as in 1974-75, the total budget will hit $38 billion, "something like a 70 per cent increase" in two years, he said.

"We say it's time to call a halt. This is incredible to say the least."

Berger Opens Inquiry

Arctic Pipeline Decision May Be Before Report

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — NDP Parliamentary Leader Ed Broadbent said Monday night that Mr. Justice Thomas Berger may want to consider whether to continue his inquiry into the Mackenzie Valley pipeline in view of government statements in the Commons.

Mr. Broadbent was speaking to reporters prior to a meeting on the pipeline call by his party.

He was referring to statements in the Commons by Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp who said that Ottawa might decide to make a final decision on the pipeline before Mr. Justice Berger concludes his inquiry and makes recommendations on conditions he thinks should be applied to the project.

Both Mr. Sharp and Energy Minister Donald Macdonald refused to promise to wait for the Berger report before deciding if the 2,600-mile natural gas pipeline proposed by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipelines Ltd. should go ahead.

The much-publicized inquiry under Mr Justice Berger started Monday with a suggestion from the Canadian Arctic Resources Committee that the government's unco-operative stance towards the inquiry revived suspicions that the government has already made up its mind.

Mr. Broadbent said:

"I find it totally irresponsible if this is what Mr. Sharp meant and I can't see how it can be interpreted in any other way."

Judge Berger said neither he nor his staff would comment on Mr. Sharp's statement.

But Andrew Thomson, president of the Canadian Arctic Resources Committee, a public interest group with members across Canada, said he is not ready to accept the statement as meaning the government will ignore Mr. Justice Berger's recommendations.

"If that is what the government meant, we should be told so and then we might as well pack up and go home," said Mr. Thomson.

Pierre Genest, lawyer for Arctic Gas, said only he couldn't guess what was on the government's mind.

The Ottawa development overshadowed what went on in the inquiry itself. All participants made opening statements outlining the stand they will take.

Mr. Genest, appearing for the pipeline company, said the $7-billion project is Canadas best defence against the world energy crisis.

It represents "the best chance to reduce substantially Canada's exposure to economic and financial problems which, if they are not solved or alleviated, are bound to seriously affect the well-being of every Canadian man, woman and child," he said.

The Arctic Resources Committee repeated allegations that the federal government is not co-operating with the judge's intention to hold a full and fair hearing by not producing all of its research documents.

It also said the federal environment department has changed its mind about appearing at the inquiry and has so instructed its experts.

R. G. Biggs of Calgary, appearing for the Foothills Pipelines Ltd., which wants to build an all-Canadian line to take natural gas from the Mackenzie, warned that the Arctic Gas line, which also will carry Alaska gas, could become a Panama Canal across Canada.

"Let us first recognize that the Canadian Arctic Gas project was not designed to meet Canadian needs," said Mr. Gibbs.

He said Delta gas will be needed by 1979 or earlier "but why not supply this need through a simpler, more manageable, more modest, more Canadian approach?"

Crown lands "should be restricted for wholly Canadian use," he said.

Asked later how he would counter the Foothills argument, Mr. Genest said he might buy a larger Canadian flag.

The resources committee asked Judge Berger not to accept at face value arguments that Canada faces a natural gas shortage.

It said the commission should await a report on natural gas availability from current national energy board hearings.

Clerical Jobs to Grow

OTTAWA (CP) — Clerical jobs will be the fastest growing occupations between now and 1980, the manpower department said Monday.

The department released the first report in an elaborate program to forecast demand for workers in various jobs. It is working on a similar survey on how many people are planning to take up various occupations and this report is due out in about a year.

Gas Export Stretchout Advocated

OTTAWA (CP) — Exports of natural gas to the United States under existing contracts should be stretched over a longer period, lessening the amount of annual shipments, the Industrial Gas Users' Association suggested Monday.

Appearing before the National Energy Board supply and demand hearing, the association called for a review of exports in view of a threatening shortage of gas. But the association stopped short of calling for export reductions.

B. T. Johnson, chairman of the association, said later outside the hearing that his group was looking for "a more politically aceptable" solution to the problem.

Most exports now are made under contracts extending for 15 to 20 years, Mr. Johnson said. The board could adjust those contracts to extend for another five or 10 years, reducing the annual export level but not affecting export volumes over the term of the contract.

Witnesses already have told the board a shortage will develop between now and 1980, lasting until frontier gas is available by pipeline from the north.

Kids Discover Woes of Inflation: Allowances Grow, But Don't Go As Far

By ISABEL HUGGAN

Grown-ups have their problems dealing with inflation and reduced buying power.

And although they face the issue on a smaller scale, kids are having just as rough a time.

Allowances may be up, but nothing costs a nickel anymore, and that weekly sum just doesn't stretch the way it used to.

Discussing the matter of allowances recently, Grades 5 and 6 at Sir John A. MacDonald Public School looked at all sides of the question.

Regular allowances are received by 30 of the 34 students to teacher Bob Watson's class. Amounts range from a low of 50 cents to a high of $5. The average allowance for these ten-year-olds in the Avondale area is a little more than $1.

A show of hands indicated that 14 children receive a set sum every week and are not paid for specific household tasks they do. However, 20 children said that they are paid for helping their parents, either in addition to, or instead of allowance.

Asked how they spend their money, the children gave answers that varied from "candy bars and treats" to 'saving for a trip to England". In fact, the majority of the students are surprisingly sensible and "adult" in the ways they use their allowance.

Bruce Penney is saving for a bike, Jamie Gray for a snowmobile, Charles Lanning for model trucks and Kim Newman for records. Other children mentioned clothes — "really good cords", for example — as immediate goals, and still others had distant expectations such as college.

Piggy banks are still in style for savings — 10 children use pig-shaped banks for their small change deposits. But talk of a bank account is not uncommon either.

The importance of budgeting has been learned by all the children, who keep a wary eye out for bargains. They are also highly suspicious of merchandising methods that promise more than is delivered.

"Cheeseburgers have gone up 15 cents in two years," noted Matthew Whitley.

"You get smaller scoops on an ice cream cone and they cost more too," said Donald Reeve.

Soft drinks served from machines tend to use more ice to fill up the glass according to the pop drinkers, and although potato chip bags look bigger "they're just full of more air," they say.

A number of the children have had to give up things because of rising costs. Horseback riding lessons, souvenirs, chocolate bars ("they cost 20 cents but I'm pretty sure they're smaller" said one disappointed candy fan) and little presents for others have all been dropped from budgets.

Asked whether they saw much point in saving when the future value of their money might make it worthless, the students maintained their sensible attitudes.

"If your money is in the bank then at least it's collecting interest" was a common approach to saving. And Danny Jafri offered an off-beat reason: "You should always have some savings on hand for paying debts."

Danny also came up with one of the more fanciful solutions to the economic problems ahead.

"We'll just have to move people to other planets," he said, adding that he'd be happy to go.

Guy Prud'homme suggested manufacturing more money, and Matthew Whitley believes that consumers will learn better buying habits, and get more for their money by shopping wisely.

Many children have ideas to make extra cash to supplement their allowance. Scott Langstaff made $7 by shovelling driveways this winter, Robert Indeway chops wood and sets up maple sap lines, and Diana Sage gets 25 cents for her cleaning of closets. Lori Devin is working with a friend to make puppets so that they can raise money by charging admission to a puppet show.

The students at Sir John A. MacDonald have all been involved in a school money-raising project this winter, selling light bulbs door-to-door in the neighborhood.

Although the class seemed to have a firm grasp of the causes and effects of inflation, like the rest of us they're not too sure how to stop it.

As Lydia Conley put it, "I guess we'll just have to learn how to do without."

Ask ME About Inflation!

Students in Bob Watson's Grades 5 and 6 class at Sir John A. Macdonald Public School were eager to tell about how they are dealing with inflation. Those who receive allowances are learning to budget, to shop for bargains, and to save some funds for future use. The students showed a "common sense" attitude to economics, and are very aware of tricky packaging and advertising aimed at young consumers.

TOMMY

Tommy is a pleasant, polite 11-year-old, doing well in Grade 4.

Though he is a registered Indian, his hair, eyes and complexion are not dark like most Indian children. He has light brown, very curly hair, hazel eyes and rather fair skin. His complete family history is not known.

Quiet and shy, Tommy needs help in developing self-confidence. It is only recently that he has mustered the courage to express an opinion on anything.

Tommy is a healthy youngster who enjoys the outdoors. He likes camping and is interested in farm activities. He finds machinery intriguing — not only when it works but when it doesn't. He has a knack for fixing things.

Because Tommy's foster home is in a rural area, organized games are not available to him but he has lately begun to be interested in sports.

Tommy likes carving and making things such as bows and arrows.

He enjoys music, is fond of reading and has started to write poetry.

Tommy needs a family who will give him much love, who will be able to encourage him to involve himself in family doings, and who will be patient while he learns that he really belongs.

To onquire about adopting Tommy, please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888 Station K, Toronto M4P 2H2.

Murder Trial Becomes Focus for Civil and Women's Rights

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — When Joanne Little fled the Beaufort County jail in the early-morning hours last Aug. 27, she believed she was running for her life.

Miss Little, a 20-year-old black woman, left a white jailer dead or dying in her cell. She said he had tried to rape her and she had fought him off with an ice pick.

Her case has become a focus for civil rights and women's rights advocates alarmed over the treatment of blacks and women in small town jails.

The guard, Clarence Alligood, 62, was found on a blood stained cot, stabbed 11 times and clutching an ice pick in his right hand. In his other hand he held his trousers. He was nude from the waist down.

Miss Little said she ran so she could live to tell her story. She eluded a manhunt for eight days before turning herself in to state authorities in Raleigh.

When she goes on trial for first-degree murder in Beaufort County Superior Court April 15, one of the key issues will be a woman's right to self-defence.

During their search, police tried unsuccessfully to obtain a court ruling declaring Miss Little an outlaw. Under North Carolina law any citizen may shoot an outlaw on sight if he refuses to surrender.

"They actually came looking for me with high-powered rifles," she said in an interview. "If they didn't want to harm me, why would they come after a woman with high-powered rifles?"

Miss Little now is in the hands of state authorities at the women's prison in Raleigh 115 miles away. Beaufort County officials said they don't want her back in their jail.

The oldest of nine children, she dropped out of school when she was 16 after Beaufort County refused to accept the grade level she had reached at a Philadelphia high school. She worked as a waitress until she learned to do a construction job that paid $5 an hour.

Miss Little worked on construction jobs until she was arrested last May and returned to Washington for trial on changes of breaking and entering in connection with a trailer-park robbery.

She was convicted, sentenced to seven to 10 years and lodged in the Beaufort County jail while she awaited action on an appeal. She had been there 81 days when she fled.

A half-dozen national groups are rallying to her cause under the banner of women's rights, black rights and prison reform.

Beaufort County Sheriff O. E. (Red) Davis said things were probably not as they should have been in the jail. There were women matrons on the day shift but only male jailers at night. Alligood was never far from where Miss Little sat in a cell she described as "small and filthy." If she wanted to take a shower, she had to call him to turn on the water.

However, Miss Little noted in a journal she kept on the pages of a magazine, she liked Alligood, a farmer as well as a jailer, who was both a husband and father. Her lawyers said the jailer brought her sandwiches and let her use the telephone.

On the night of Aug. 27 Alligood let Miss Little make a phone call.

Davis said that while using the phone she had access to the ice pick which Alligood kept in a desk drawer. The prosecution apparently will contend that she took the pick, planning to lure the jailer to her cell later, stab him and escape.

Key law enforcement officials in the county said privately that Alligood was involved in sexual activity with Miss Little the night of her escape. One acknowledged that the jailer went to her cell voluntarily.

That was not the word immediately after the incident, however. For the first few days after Alligood's death, there was no public mention of the sexual aspects of the case. This was brought to light by the state medical examiner and Miss Little's counsel, Jerry Paul and Karen Galloway.

If Miss Little is convicted, she faces a mandatory death penalty.

The defence lawyers said they have been denied access to some of the evidence.

The defence contends that there can be no fair trial in Beaufort County for a black woman accused of killing a white jailer. The population is about 35 per cent black but Miss Galloway, herself black, said a much smaller percentage serve on juries.

"It would take a jury five minutes to convict her down there," said Paul, who is white. On the other hand, in one of the state's urban counties, "it would take a jury five minutes to turn her loose."

Efforts to obtain a change of venue have failed.

The people of Washington, a rural community of 10,000, say they do not understand the national furore surrounding the Little case.

Many residents were shocked to see their community featured on a national television news show and they view the publicity as some kind of plot.

Perfumes Can't Disguise Awful Smell of Smoke

Dear Ann: It always amazes me how a lady who wants to be sweet as a flower manages to botch it up. She starts off by bathing in a bubble bath, pats herself with a scented powder, sprays herself with expensive perfume, brushes her teeth with a mint-flavord toothpaste and gargles so her breath will be fresh and kissable. Then she spoils it all by sticking a stinking cigarette in her mouth.

I happen to be a guy who wouldn't marry a girl who smokes and there are many more like me. Before anyone calls me a miserable old sourpuss, let me confide, Ann, that when I was in my prime, I received 13 proposals. My first wife died when I was 62. Within the year I got three more proposals and later married the one who didn't smoke.

P.S. I'm nothing special. Just an average guy from—Martin's Ferry

Dear Martin: No "average guy" gets 18 proposals. C'mon now, what's your secret weapon? I'm dying to know.

Dear Ann Landers: A line in a recent letter from "The Other Woman" caught my eye. She wrote, "He sleeps with his wife because he has to." Obviously, he told her that. I wonder if it ever occurred to the lamebrain that he is telling his wife he really loves her, that "The Other Woman" means nothing to him—she was just there, he was a little drunk. The affair is about to fold up and he is begging her to please be patient.

Which of these lucky ladies is getting the truth? I wonder, too, if the female who carries on with a married man would still feel she is creating a "heaven" for him if she knew the hell she was creating in that man's house?

His kids are becoming emotionally disturbed because they sense their mother is miserable. Their dad isn't at home as many evenings and weekends as he used to be. They miss him. Such a woman can't care much about the man—or anything except herself.—Trying to Pick Up the Pieces

Dear Trying: Thank you for the rebuttal. I wonder how many Other Women are itching to know what city your letter came from. I'll save you all some postage. Don't bother to write. I'll never tell.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell Harpooned to stop crying "quietly in her pillow." Tell her to cry loud—so he can hear. Then explain why she is crying, and get some dialogue going.

Also, here are a few questions Harpooned should be asking herself:

(1) How long has it been since you told him you loved him?

(2) When did you last ask his advice about something because you value his opinion?

(3) When did you last make a pass at him because he's so attractive you find him irresistible?

These three questions can put a whole new face on a marriage. Sign me—Extra Zest

Dear Zest: You're a smart lady. Thank you for some homey hints on how to pump some life into a moribund marriage. (P.S. Notice, students, I said moribund—not dead.)

Welfare Life Means Scrimping

TORONTO (CP) — Ruth Lariviere, 29, who has four young children, says she dislikes being on welfare but that drawing welfare benefits is better than working on a minimum-wage job.

"You don't have anything on welfare," Mrs. Lariviere said in an interview. "They don't give you enough to live on and you have no independence."

She said she hopes Canada Manpower will train her so she can work at a job that pays more than the minimum wage.

Mrs. Lariviere, who has a Grade 9 education and no skills, said the father of her children deserted her just before last Christmas when they lived in Montreal.

She was one year old and her mother was pregnant when her father deserted them. Later on, she quit school to help look after the four young half-brothers and sisters.

The family lived on welfare and her clothes embarrassed her.

"You have second-hand clothes or clothes people give you," she said. "You don't have things of your own."

She said she has had herself sterilized because she is determined that her children will have an education.

"Four is enough to raise. I don't want to drill into them that they have to go to college but if one of them has the brains and wants to go, I want to have the money to send him."

The worst day of her life was when the food ran out and the children were hungry.

She had nine potatoes and, by borrowing a dime, managed to gather enough change to buy a loaf of bread. The children were given potato sandwiches.

She moved to Toronto and eventually called the Children's Aid Society, which arranged accommodation for the family.

To put a life together for herself and her sons, she needs a place to live, furnishings, job training, day care for the smaller children and money to feed them.

Families of Alcoholics Learn Through Talking

Dear Doris: In your item about Al-Anon, you stated that relatives, usually wives, attend and talk about what worries them most, their husbands. Al-Anon is composed of wives, husbands, parents, children, friends, etc. of alcoholics. We share experience, strength and hope.

This is done by sharing our own feelings and reactions; not by talking about the alcoholic. Talking about the alcoholic is futile. The purpose of Al-Anon is spiritual growth, and this can only be done by finding ways of self-improvement by discussing self.

We have spent time and hard work to erase the image of "Gossip sessions", as the alcoholic reaction to Al-Anon attendance is usually just that — ("What right do you have talking about me?")

Thank you for supporting our work.

Al-Anon and Alateen Public Information Committee (Winnipeg).

Dear Al-Anon: Thank you for giving us the picture. And keep up your wonderful work.

Dear Doris: I was receiving old papers in order to dispose or save them when I came across a very jolting letter (February 1974), from "Would Dearly Love Help". This lady stated that this was the saddest Christmas of her 82 years.

I feel that it is nothing short of disaster that elderly people should be so unhappy in a home where they are to spend their remaining years; supposedly in comfort. I know there will always be a few who are harder to please but may the majority find love and peace in this, their only home.

I am wondering if there is any club where some younger people could be available to communicate with some of these perhaps lonesome people, through the mails. I don't mean like you but just on a friend-to-friend basis.

I enjoy your column, although I hope I never need your help personally.

Mrs. V.J.

Dear Mrs. V.J.: There are pen pal clubs, of course. But sometimes an older person hesitates to start anything. If either older or younger write to me, I'll do my best to connect them up.

In any case, you have given others food for thought. Perhaps you have even started an idea in the minds of some of our eager-to-help younger readers.

Confidential to Golden Wedding: The leaflet I am sending will answer most of your questions about a 50th anniversary party.

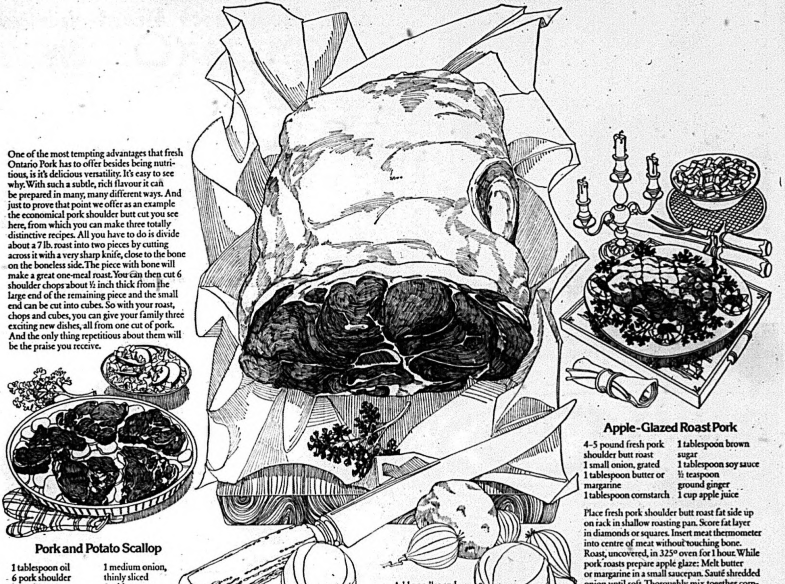
Usually friends of the family or older relatives pour tea and coffee at each end of the tea table. Sandwiches, cookies and cake are placed on the table. Guests may either help themselves or have refreshments offered to them by some of the younger family members.

Be sure the couple being honored are not asked to stand on their feet too long; make every effort to save them becoming overtired.

This is their day to celebrate, but they must be given some respite. Perhaps a few minutes' rest away from the crowd from time to time would help.

(Talk it over with Doris by writing to her in care of this newspaper.)

How one pork cut can solve your dinnertime dilemma three times this week.



One of the most tempting advantages that fresh Ontario Pork has to offer besides being nutritious, is it's delicious versatility. It's easy to see why. With such a subtle, rich flavour it can be prepared in many, many different ways. And just to prove that point we offer as an example the economical pork shoulder butt cut you see here, from which you can make three totally distinctive recipes. All you have to do is divide about a 7 lb. roast into two pieces by cutting across it with a very sharp knife, close to the bone on the boneless side. The piece with bone will make a great one-meal roast. You can then cut 6 shoulder chops about ½ inch thick from the large end of the remaining piece and the small end can be cut into cubes. So with your roast, chops and cubes, you can give your family three exciting new dishes, all from one cut of pork. And the only thing repetitious about them will be the praise you receive.

Pork and Potato Scallop

1 tablespoon oil
6 pork shoulder butt chops
4 cups sliced raw potato
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
Salt and pepper
1½ cups hot milk

Heat oil in frypan, brown shoulder butt chops. Place a layer of potatoes and onion slices in 2-quart shallow casserole or baking dish. Sprinkle with some of the flour, salt and pepper. Repeat, ending with layer of potatoes. Pour over enough hot milk to almost cover potatoes. Arrange chops on top of potatoes. Bake, covered, in preheated 350° oven for 45 minutes. Uncover and bake 15 minutes longer until potatoes are done. Makes 5–6 servings. Great with buttered spinach, Waldorf salad.

Pork and Noodle Bake

1½ pound fresh pork shoulder butt
1–2 tablespoons oil or drippings
1 medium onion, chopped
2 celery stalks, sliced
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dried thyme
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 (10 ounce) can condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 (10 ounce) package frozen peas
1 cup water
6–8 ounces dry egg noodles.
½ cup bread crumbs
½ cup grated cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon melted butter

Cut pork shoulder butt into 1-inch cubes. Heat oil or drippings in frypan; brown pork cubes. Stir in chopped onion, celery slices, salt, thyme, pepper, mushroom soup and water. Cover and simmer for 30 minutes. While pork simmers cook noodles as package directs; drain. Add noodles and peas. Spoon into shallow baking dish. Rub bread crumbs, grated cheese and butter together. Sprinkle over pork mixture. Bake in 350° oven for 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings. Serve with crisp celery and carrot sticks.

Apple-Glazed Roast Pork

4–5 pound fresh pork shoulder butt roast
1 small onion, grated
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ teaspoon ground ginger
1 cup apple juice

Place fresh pork shoulder butt roast fat side up on rack in shallow roasting pan. Score fat layer in diamonds or squares. Insert meat thermometer into centre of meat without touching bone. Roast, uncovered, in 325° oven for 1 hour. While pork roasts prepare apple glaze: Melt butter or margarine in a small saucepan. Sauté shredded onion until soft. Thoroughly mix together cornstarch, brown sugar, soy sauce, ground ginger and apple juice. Pour into onions in pan; cook over low heat, stirring constantly until thick. Brush part of glaze over meat. Continue roasting, brushing pork every 15 minutes, 1 hour longer until glazed sparkling brown and thermometer registers 170° and pork is tender (allow about 35 minutes per pound roasting time). Let roast stand on warm platter 10 to 15 minutes to make carving easier. Makes 5–6 servings. Serve with potatoes au gratin, buttered green beans, celery cabbage salad.

Jasper Auto Parts Musty but Busy

ST. ALBERT, Alta. (CP) — The "showroom" of Jasper Auto Parts Ltd. is a dusty, cluttered place smelling of old car parts where the telephones ring constantly, teletype messages clatter and droves of customers come and go.

Above the showroom is an equally dusty, cluttered office—the domain of Jack Cohen, 36, who owns not only the 17.5-acre yard just outside Edmonton but three other yards as well.

"Nothing in planning, but future expansion always in thought," he said in an interview.

Mr. Cohen followed his father Harry into the business he founded in 1946.

"My dad started with a trainload of Model A rear ends. . . ."

"I come from Belgium. I came after the war. I was adopted in Toronto, came to Edmonton, hated school, loved my father very dearly, wanted to be what he wanted to be—and there, I'm in the auto parts business.

Mr. Cohen said he worked for his father from 1952 to 1959 when he went to Calgary to manage an auto-wrecking yard. When his father died in 1965 he bought the business from the estate and began selling car and truck parts.

In 1970 he bought Windsor Truck Parts Ltd. in Edmonton. In 1971 he added Western Auto and Truck Parts Ltd. in Calgary and in 1973, RFC Auto and Truck Parts Ltd. in Red Deer.

If one yard hasn't a left rear door from a 1952 model, chances are good that one of the other operations can supply it. Mr. Cohen estimates there are more than 10,000 units in his four yards, which together employ about 45 persons.

"We go right back. If a man wants a 1949 fender, we'll have it."

Right back, to the father of two, means about 1945. Beyond that it's dealing with antique car buffs and while he qualifies as one himself, it's not part of his business.

Mr. Cohen drives a late-model Cadillac which he bought as an insurance company writeoff but he also owns a 1935 Ford, a 1961 Mercedes Benz 190 and a 1965 Lincoln limousine equipped with television and he has just bought a 1952 Rolls Royce.

The men who work for Mr. Cohen check each unit as it comes in for legal entanglements and make up cards on the car and those parts which can be salvaged. The rest is sent to the dump.

When time permits, they take the unit apart and put each part on racks where it's easily accessible.

"I used to be 100 per cent. I didn't need racks. I didn't have to have catalogues. I knew everything I had. And if I was with it all the time today, I don't care how many cars there are, you could ask me anything—I'd be 99 per cent sure whether I had it or not. . . .

"It's amazing what the human mind can do when it has to do it, when your living depends on it."

He doesn't bother with scrap metal because it's too much trouble getting the non-metallic material out of the cars.

"You never quit buying, that's the whole trouble. It's difficult to know how many cars you're going to get. It's difficult to know how long you're going to sit with them. Today you might sell it, you might sit two years with it, you don't know.

"You need a large cash flow in this business."

Mr. Cohen said he has paid as much as $7,000 for a car that has been written off and as much as $10,000 for trucks and that insurance companies write off wrecks too easily.

It's true labor costs in body shops often make fixing cars more expensive than the value of the unit but often a car is written off when it could be fixed, especially if insurance adjusters and body shop owners made more use of used parts, he said.

The town of St. Albert has passed along complaints it gets about the look of the place and the province has placed the yard in a greenbelt where expansion is prohibited without special permission but Mr. Cohen said he doesn't think his yard looks bad compared with other businesses which don't maintain their property.

Jack Cohen says he never thinks about how much he is worth—he doesn't even know whether he is well off because he has mortgages to pay and he has never added up the income and outgo.

Full Stock

Jack Cohen, owner of Jasper Auto Parts Ltd., in St. Albert, Alta., claims a full stock of automotive parts which have been salvaged from more than 10,000 units at the four wrecking yards he has in the province. The four are connected by teletype and the stock of parts is catalogued. (CP Photo)

B. C. Minimum Income Plan Meets with Mixed Reaction

VICTORIA (CP) — What about those who tuck their monthly Mincome payments away in healthy bank accounts or use the money to pay for unnecessary frills?

That is one of the questions asked about the British Columbia government's minimum income plan for the elderly and the handicapped, which guarantees monthly income of $234.13 for a single person.

While noting the possible abuses of the program, most elderly persons interviewed seemed to think Mincome is worth while.

"I suppose us old stiffs have earned it," was the way one man put it.

Others were concerned not only that the program might be abused by recipients who don't need the government money but that it might discourage young people from "saving for a rainy day."

"I had to save money; why should others get it free from the government?" asked Fred Tooby, 71, of Victoria. "We were smart enough to put money away."

It was Mr. Tooby, an energetic critic of the Mincome program, who said a friend told him 'my old lady's Mincome cheque is going to pay for my Chinese gardener."

Laura Wicks, 85, also of Victoria, said she felt that once people reach a certain age and are no longer able to work they should be guaranteed a monthly income.

Another 84-year-old woman agreed with the principle of the government giving the elderly a guaranteed income but said she hadn't taken advantage of the government's plan.

She said she lives on $135 a month by "being very careful" and was not aware that she would probaby be eligible for Mincome, boosting her monthly income to $234.

B.C.'s New Democratic Party government began Mincome at $200 a month shortly after it took office in September, 1972. On Dec. 18, 1972, 107,978 cheques were sent out to those 65 years of age and older.

For the first year of operation, the program cost about $55 million. It was expanded in October, 1973, to include the handicapped and those 60 years of age and over.

For those in the latter age category, the government pays the difference between their monthly income and the going Mincome rate.

The same is true for the handicapped, of whatever age. For those 65 and over the government pays the difference between what they receive in old-age security money, pensions and supplements and the Mincome level.

For the 1973-74 fiscal year, the program cost $67.4 million but this reflects the fact that the handicapped and those between the ages of 60 and 64 were only included in the program in October, 1973.

For the 1974-75 fiscal year, the program will cost $103 million.

There are 119,000 persons on Mincome in B.C., 95,000 in the over-65 and handicapped bracket and 24,000 in the 60-to-64 category.

Human Resources Minister Norman Levi said in an interview the government had difficulties getting the program going, not the least of which was a feeling among the elderly that Mincome amounted to charity.

He still gets irate letters, like one 70-year-old who said he would never apply for Mincome and asked instead for a job.

There were some loopholes to be plugged. Immigrants were said to be getting off the plane from another country and immediately applying for Mincome.

Mr. Levi said he knows of no such cases but that some persons who had been in the country only one or two years had been receiving payments.

So the government imposed a requirement that in order to be eligible for Mincome a person had to live in Canada for at least five years.

His staff detected another abuse of the plan by recipients in the 60-to-64 bracket who deposited their cash in non-interest-bearing accounts in order to increase their monthly Mincome payment.

Mr. Levi said the department will issue new application forms requesting information on all assets. Mincome staff will check the forms and if they feel certain assets could be invested at a better rate they will decrease the Mincome payment to reflect that rate.

Aside from such matters, Mr. Levi said he was satisfied with the Mincome program and noted such side benefits as giving parents enough financial independence to move out of their children's homes and live by themselves.

The Mincome rate has increased five times since it began at $200 a month in 1972, tying in with federal quarterly cost-of-living increases in old-age security.

When the plan was first started some observers felt it would lead to B.C. becoming a retirement haven but Mr. Levi said studies have shown that immigration due to Mincome is not significant.

Asked whether he felt every province should set up a Mincome program, Mr. Levi said a better suggestion would be a national policy on minimum income for the elderly.

He said the federal government has enough resources available to direct some money toward such a program.

"I've never been terribly impressed with the enormous amount of money we spend on defence," he said. "There's an opportunity to do some diversion there."

Report Commends Quinte Area for Waterfront Management

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

The city of Belleville has been complimented for doing a 'commendable job of managing its waterfront.

This came out during a report released last month (February) compiling the opinions gathered from a series of six public meetings held in this area between Oct. 30, 1973 to Feb. 18, 1974.

The meetings were held to get public opinions on study being undertaken by the Canadian - Ontario-Rideau-Trent-Severn (CORTS) study committee on the optimum recreational development along a 425-mile waterway corridor in the Quinte-Kingston area.

Referring to the efforts made by Belleville to improve its waterfront the report states: "We indeed applaud all municipalities in the Quinte-Kingston area that are attempting to improve their waterfronts.

All towns and cities along the water can be an important influence on the recreation experience What is done to beautify and make them useful to the recreationist will greatly benefit not only the individual areas but the waterfront corridor."

It was also recommended in the Quinte-Kingston area report that the government wharf at Wellington be designated and maintained as a harbor of refuge.

It was further recommended that a study be made of the engineering and ecological feasibility of maintaining the channel through the sandbar to West Lake. "The access to West Lake at Wellington and the access to Wellers Bay should be kept open," said the report.

Although some mention is made in the study report of the bay bridge in which it is recommended that it be replaced with a bridge comparable to the Quinte Skyway but lower in profile to blend with the landscape, there is no further mention of the subject in the findings.

Other findings in the report:

— Right of way facilities such as highway, hydro and pipelines should be restricted as to height and or width when crossing an area identified as being esthetically important or when excessive disruption could change the character or significance of the area.

— Derelict cars were described as blot on the landscape and it was urged that a recommendation for their remoral he made law. This was not done in the Quinte-Kingston report because of pending legislation by the ministry of the environment.

— In all matters regarding the report, liaison is absolutely necessary between all levels of government and the people.

— Low interest loans should be made available to encourage tourist operators and others to develop facilities that will meet anticipated public demand.

— Assistance should be available to people interested in restoring the facade of an historical house. For instance, an historical architect could be made available on a free consultation basis so private restoration money be well spend.

City Passes Interim Home Standards for Grants

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

City hall can now apply for $104,000 in provincial funds to help Bellevillians with home renewal.

City council Monday night agreed — after much debate and some alterations — with provincial government guidelines for minimum housing standards.

The move means the city can now apply for funding under the Ontario Home Renewal Program (OHRP).

It also solved a dilemma for council — linked to its now controversial proposal for a minimum standards bylaw.

The draft proposal triggered critical reaction from several sources when it was formally tabled in council two weeks ago. Timing of its approval is an unknown factor.

But to quality for OHRP's $104,436 grant the city must have minimum residential standards in force, by the end of the month — before the provincial fiscal year ends.

But OHRP's own guidelines were found to be an alternative after city manager Wilbur Purcell talked with the housing ministry.

The document, however, was not accepted before councillors sought reassurances on its implications.

A main concern was just how mandatory such a move might prove.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey explained the guidelines were only being adopted by resolution — not by bylaw — and carried no penalty clause.

City inspection officials can "suggest" to property owners the terms of the guidelines.

Mr. Purcell said since there is no bylaw involved there is no "enforcement". The guidelines are a statement of what council intended.

He said he believes the ministry set the guidelines as standards it expected householders to meet when applying for the OHRP funds from the city.

Changes made by council in the guidelines included removal of the need for a water-proof basement and that each dwelling have two ground-level exits.

Mayor Jeffrey said it is impossible for all homes to have waterproof foundations — her own home needs a sump pump, she noted.

The National Building Code, which the city officially observes, only calls for one groundfloor exit and many houses in Belleville have only one door.

Meantime, the mayor told council, work must continue on its minimum standards bylaw.

Once that is "approved in its final form, these guidelines are no longer needed," she said.

Latest formal protest to the bylaw came from the Quinte Home Builders Association.

An association letter of protest was on council's agenda with a request for a meeting.

Mayor Jeffrey said she hoped the association would study the bylaw draft and produce suggestions.

Current Voting Date Supported by Council

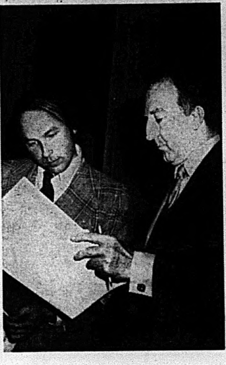
Belleville city council has decided the timing of Ontario municipal elections should remain unchanged.

The opinion was expressed Monday night in answer to a province-wide poll by the Ontario Municipal Association (OMA).

The consensus was sought by the OMA after bad weather hit many areas during local government elections last December — the first Monday of which month is statutory polling municipal polling day.

Councillors agreed voting day, the present two-year term of office and the Jan. 1 inaugurals of new councils should remain the same.

They also decided to leave the municipal fiscal year term the same — ending with the year, compared to March 31 for the provincial government.



Quick Conference

Sherry Akey Symbol For Easter Seal Drive

Sherry Akey had her first artificial limb at little more than a year old.

Monday . . . and six years later—she was chosen to symbolize this year's Belleville-area fund drive to aid crippled youngsters: The Rotary Club's Easter Seals campaign.

The cheery seven-year-old is the 1975 campaign's Tammy — it's Timmy when boys are chosen — who will help promote a drive aiming to prompt 12,000 in donations.

Sherry, daughter of Ron and Barbara Akey, of May Ave. in the city's Parkdale area, was born with one leg. Growing up has meant replacement of the artificial substitute at intervals. Friday, she returned with her third new limb — well ahead of time for the Rotary breakfast — Monday — at the Four Seasons, Hotel where the Easter Seals drive was officially launched.

But, organization of the campaign was already well advanced by then. Last week, Rotarians and others finished packaging 18,000 Easter Seals envelopes.

This week the seals will be mailed out to local households, announced Lloyd Hicks, Rotarian who heads the club's campaign committee.

Last year's funds goal was $10,000 but collected more than $14,000.

Council Briefs

Store Hours Studied

Downtown merchants will be asked for opinions before city council makes any move to adding another exemption to its store hours regulations.

Council Monday night heard a request from Stephen-Licence Ltd., Front St. sports and hobby shop, that bicycle sales and service stores be added to the list of businesses permitted freer hour of operation.

The present store hours ordinance sets closing hours at 6 p.m. except Thursday and Fridays.

Expropriation Awaited

A reconstruction start on East Dundas St., now depends on two property acquisitions, city manager Wilbur Purcell said Monday night.

He told city council the project can't get under way until expropriation processes involved had been settled.

In one instance, action has been taken under law to speed up proceedings.

Fire Protection Debated

City council was asked Monday to set up a committee to examine the economics of Belleville's fire services.

The resolution came from Ald. Stu Meeks, who later said he is worried about what problems increasing costs posed for the city's fire department.

"Right now, we face a situation where we can't buy new equipment," he said.

He said the committee could include a representative of the department along with councillors. It might confer with other municipal fire departments on the economics of modern fire protection.

Earlier, council passed two bylaws confirming new wage settlements reached recently — one with city firemen. The second involved city hall clerical and technical staff.

Land-banking Suggested

City council Monday night was urged to begin residential land-banking as the only alternative to high-price housing.

Making the proposal was Ken Little, who was an unsuccessful first-time candidate in December's city elections.

Mr. Little said industrial land-banking by previous councils now has been recognized as a successful undertaking.

Industrial commissioner Fred Bemis has indicated recently the necessity to buy and service more industrial land, he said.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey said city hall now is awaiting information from the provincial government on funds available for landbanking.

Ting-a-ling

Craig stands beside one of his paintings he's just hung in preparation for the exhibit of his work at the Corby Library art gallery. His highly realistic acrylic paintings of rural scenes and objects are contrasted by the bright designs of his wife Diana's wool wall hangings. The show continues until March 15.

Couple Foregoes Business World for Art Careers

By ISABEL HUGGAN
Staff Reporter

Monday night marked the opening of a new exhibit in the Corby Library art gallery.

The show features paintings by Craig and wall hangings by Diana. Married to each other, Craig and Diana do not disclose their surname, but use "first names only" as artists.

Craig, who paints with acrylics in a highly-realistic style, has focused on buildings and scenes in the Quinte area for this show. Still living in Toronto, he and his wife have spent several weekends in Belleville for the last year, and have decided to make their home here at the end of the coming summer.

Until a little more than three years ago, Craig was a business man who worked too hard and enjoyed it less and less, he says. Completely self-taught, he began painting partly as an alternative to the hectic pace of his job, and since then has been a full-time, self-supporting artist.

"I suppose my realistic style is partly a reaction to abstract art which I don't feel comfortable with," he says. "But it also just seems natural for me to paint this way."

Diana's wool-and-wood hangings have sprung from her long-time enjoyment of corcheting, knitting and weaving. The success that her hangings have met in the past year since she's begun exhibiting them has encouraged her to think of giving up her secretarial career and work only as an artist when the move to Belleville is made.

Diana's distinctive snowflake and kaleidoscope patterns are created in botany wool tops and crocheted wool, which are woven and tied from the centre out before being framed on slender wooden rods.

"I do wall hangings to order for people who want particular colors to harmonize with their rooms," she says. her hangings range in price from $35 to $55. Craig's paintings cost between $90 and $225.

The artists can be reached in Belleville at 962-8223, and will be on hand at the gallery for the first week of the show which runs until March 15.

Rotarians Mark Double Birthday

City Rotarians are celebrating a double birthday this year. It's the 55th anniversary of the club's establishment in Belleville and the 70th anniversary of the club's formation.

Joining in the festivities at the club's weekly meeting at Sun Valley Monday, were Paul Cote, from Quebec City, a Rotary International Director for Canada and Vern Heaslip, from Toronto, district governor of District 707.

In his speech to city Rotarians, Mr. Cote said the club must look to the future in its efforts to serve, and must strive to follow the motto "service above self".

But while dealing with the future, the past was also examined as Mr. Cote told members how the club came into being -- starting from an idea by Paul Harris in 1905 that gradually caught on until now there are 16,000 clubs in 150 countries in the world, involving about 770,000 club members.

"In Canada alone, where the movement was started in 1910, there are 426 clubs with 22,000 members. Winnipeg was the first place to have a club," said Mr. Cote.

He said Canada was instrumental in making the club an international one, helping to establish clubs in such places as Australia, New Zealand and other countries.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call in a 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today.

Monday, March 3, 7:43 p.m. — malfunction of the alarm system at the Mayfair apartment building on the corner of Ann and east Bridge streets.

Third Store Robbed By Man with Knife

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville are investigating the third in a series of area armed robberies of general sotres within a week by a man brandishing a knife.

An OPP spokesman said today a man described as being in his early 20s, about six feet tall, with blonde hair and a moustache, entered Reid's Variety Store in Glen Miller at about 3 p.m.

He said the man, who wore blue jeans and a green jacket, robbed the proprietor, Mrs. Reid, of receipts from the cash register in excess of $100 at knifepoint.

The spokesman said the man escaped on foot.

Last Friday a man robbed Mac's Milk Ltd. at 180 North Front St. of $147 but he dropped the money during pursuit by two witnesses However, the man escaped.

And last Thursday in Trenton, a man stole $80 from Becker's Milk Store.

Keegan Says Province To Study Railway Lines

Provincail government officials will seek first-hand information on relocation of railway lines away from Bay of Quinte waterfront, city council was told Monday night.

Communications and transportation ministry representatives are expected to discuss the situation this week with the Quinte Planning Board, said Ald. Arthur Keegan.

It's a sequel to the city councillor's participation debate on railway relocation in urban areas at the Ontario Traffic Conference in Toronto Monday night.

The councillor — long a proponent of rerouting Canadian Pacific lines away from the Quinte waterfront — told council he sought answers about the province's attitude to the issue after it was suggested major urban centres would be the main beneficiaries of senior government legislation to assist relocation projects.

The issue has taken new life with federal legislation proposing assistance to provincial and local governments.

He emphasized the needs of smaller municipalities to the conference and sought out the attitudes of provincial officials present, said Ald. Keegan.

"They disallowed any idea that Belleville would be left out," he said.

They realized the main east-west Canadian National Railways line ran through the area and that there could be a "possibility" of solving the problem through "amalgamation" of railroad operations in the district, he said.

"So they are coming down here to look at the situation," he told council.

Ald. Keegan said he expects the ministry men at the next meeting of the planning board — scheduled for this Thursday night.

Two Charged In Car Theft

An unidentified man and woman have been charged with car theft and possession of a stolen vehicle following an incident Monday.

City police chief Douglas Crosbie said today a couple drove into Fry Ford Sales at 321 North Front St. in a Datsun and took a 1974 Ford out for a test drive "and they kept on going."

Police checked and discovered the Datsun was also a stolen vehicle, he said.

The second car was recovered in Penetanguishene and the couple arrested and taken to the Ontario Provincial Police detachment in Midland before being returned to Belleville today, said Chief Crosbie.

Names of the suspect and other details were not available.

Even the Best Isn't Bigger Than the League

Even the Ontario Fastball League (OFL) can have its confusing moments. At a League meeting in Burlington on the weekend, the OFL found not only their wires crossed, but nearly their whole fuse-box short-circuited.

Last fall, Niagara Falls (at that time an OFL entry, decided to sign Toronto Global pitcher, Pete Landers. The league's constitution dictates that no team may tamper with another team's players. Thus, the Globals presented their case to the OFL executive and both Landers and Niagara Falls were ejected from the league.

Landers, who has been rated one of the top five fastball pitchers in Canada for the past 10 years, was too big a drawing card to let go. So, the league executive convinced the Globals to drop their charges to allow Landers back into the league.

Naturally Landers would not play for the Globals, so the league gave Hamilton and Oshawa the rights to deal for him. The Globals agreed.

Last Tuesday, Toronto traded the rights to Landers to Hamilton for one of Hamilton's pitchers. This is where the short-circuiting took place.

Last week, the Oshawa Tony's signed Landers to an OFL card reportedly for a large bonus. At the Burlington meeting Hamilton announced they had the rights to Landers and Oshawa announced they had signed him.

The three teams involved — Oshawa, Toronto and Hamilton — were asked to leave the meeting and a vote was taken on the situation.

As it turns out, not even Pete Landers is big enough to be indispensible to the OFL. The league decided that he would be suspended for one year. Hamilton would retain the rights to him, but they could not use him until next season. The Oshawa deal with Landers was over-ruled by the league.

Though things were in a frenzy for a while, the OFL wasn't long in taking a solid stand and straightening them back out.

SLICES — The Belleville McDonald's figured on pretty tough competition in the Ontario Fastball League, but things are getting tougher by the minute.

Hamilton has signed 24-year-old Bill McNellis to share pitching duties. Last season McNellis played for the Reading, Pennsylvania Rising Suns. They were the fourth best team in the United States. The year before he played for the third-ranked team in the U.S.

London announced the signing of Metro Szeryk, a former player in the Atlantic Seabord League. Szeryk will share the mound chores with Dick Haymes and Joe Adams. Last season Szeryk finished up with a 24-4, won-lost record, including six no-hitters and two perfect games. He was also voted the Most Valuable Player in the United States in 1972. Szeryk was a member of the U.S. Fastball champions in 1969, 1970 and 1972.

Pitcher Ed Neudorf has signed with Hamilton. Neudorf played for the Niagara Falls entry last season and came up with a 15-4 record. He also batted .309. Neudorf was given MVP status in the OFL all-star game.

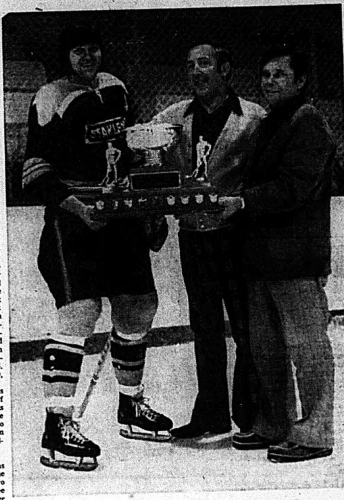
The OFL playoff picture was decided on the weekend. The league will be divided into two divisions and the top three teams in each division, after a 54 game schedule, will make the playoffs.

The West Division consists of Hamilton, Burlington, Newmarket, Belleville, and Woodstock. The East is comprised of London, Kitchener, Oshawa, St. Catharines and Toronto.

The team with the best won-lost record will choose whichever other team in the top six they wish to play. The second winningest team will choose whichever team they wish to play and the third best team in the league will play whichever team is left. This system is used to avoid end of the season jockeying by teams and to allow teams to play first round series as close to home as they desire.

The series with the number one club will be a three-of-five, the series with the number two and three teams will be a best-of-three. The winners of the two and three series will then play off in a best-of-three and that winner will meet the winner of series one in a best-of-five to decide the league champions.



It was trophy presentation time at Memorial Arena last night as Gas House Hockey League president John Trendell presented first place trophy to Stanley Structures assistant captain Wayne Leveque. Team coach Doug Preston was also present for the presentation ceremony.

Gas House Windup

Second Up for Grabs

There's only one game left in the Gas House Hockey League's regular schedule and it will be a deciding one. Monday night four teams completed their schedules and along with the three that finished last week, only Belleville General and Rollins Lumber have any ice-time remaining. It's a single game to be played Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. at the Memorial Arena. The winner of the contest will finish the season in second place.

In Monday's action Rollins collected a 4-3 win from Constellation Carpets. The win gave Rollins 16 wins, five losses and two ties for the season and 34 points. The loss left Constellation in sixth place in the standing with 19 points. They finished one point behind idle Jim's Pizzeria.

Ken Kerik, Greg Bellis and Bill Yull replied for Constellation.

Stanley Structures were awarded the league pennant trophy at last night's game in which they tied with Belleville Generals 3-3. The Doug Preston coached Structures finished off the season with a phenomenal 22 wins, one tie and one loss for 45 points. The tie by the Generals left them tied in the standings with Rollins. The Generals have an identical record to the Lumbermen.

Bob Mulvihill scored two for Stanley and Mike Goegan got the other. Dave Skelton got a pair for the Generals and Bill Minaker added the third.

Chuckwagon finished off their season with 33 points and a 6-2 win over Art's Esso. Grant Sage and Mark Acquafreddo had two goals each and Brown got one goal each. Warren Rushlow scored both Art's goals.

Birt's Wins 6-4 But Loses Coach

WHITBY (Special) — Trenton's Birt's Handy Stand, aiming for three Ontario Minor Hockey association Juvenile AA titles in a row, took the first game in their second round set with Whitby-Brooklin here Monday but lost coach Roger Drake in the process.

Birt's scored a 6-4 win in the opener of the best-of-five set and will hook up with Whitby - Brooklin in Game 2 at home, Sunday, at 7:15 p.m.

Birt's had 12 minors (24 minutes) in penalties in the late going but a misconduct sentence to Phil Gravelle upped the total to 34 minutes. A game misconduct followed, which means Drake will be missing from the bench when the series resumes in Trenton, Sunday.

Assistant coach Frank Chard will take over.

Birt's won Monday's series opener with a three-goal surge in the second period. The teams were all even at 2-2, heading for the second and the visitors outscored athe home side 3-1 in that middle frame. Each team scored once in the third period.

It's Time to Sweat

Training Grind Starts

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

If anybody had walked into the gym of Quinte Secondary School Monday night they might have thought they'd walked onto the set of a Molson's Export commercial. You know. For the last couple of years Bill and the boys ...

All the boys were playing something that basically resembled handball. Their apparel ranged from worn out running shoes to no shoes, old pants to Bermuda shorts and levi shirts to skins.

They were smashing the ball as hard as they could — when they hit it—against the court wall in front of them and generally working up a sweat.

Though it resembled Bill and the boys (and maybe after things were all over they played the part of Bill and the boys) they were actually in training for the upcoming Ontario Fastball League season.

Monday night was the first, open practice for the Belleville McDonald's and Quinte physical education instructor, Rick Locke, was putting the rather nefarious looking group, of about 20 through their paces.

Though the handball excursion didn't appear to be much of a workout — it looked more like fun for everyone — there was method to this training madness.

"It's a good exercise for ball players," said Locke, "it helps develop their eye-to-hand coordination. Gives them more accuracy with their glove hands."

Handball was the main portion of the workout. The training session began with some light exercises aimed at loosening up all the muscles of the body. Though they weren't really strenuous, a few moans were heard between the puffs and pants. There were some red faces when the exercises were finished, but most of the guys felt they were getting off light.

McDonald's coach, Harold Reid, leaned against the wall chuckling to himself. "They think they're getting off easy," he said, "wait 'til they wake up in the morning and try to move a little too quick one way or the other."

Locke assured the group that at least certain parts, if not all the muscles, in their bodies would hurt a little.

The workout ended with about 10 minutes of weightlifting and a shower. It may not sound like much, but all the activities were pointed in the direction of developing the skill and agility of ball players.

"They could run to get themselves in shape," said Locke, "but how much running does a softball player do?"

So Locke has compiled a program whereby the players work themselves into shape and work their necessary skills into shape at the same time.

Division 3 Champ

Tankard Finals For Tweed Rink

TWEED (Special) — Barry Ray skipped his Land O'Lakes Curling Club rink to the championship in the Division 3 finals here on the weekend, edging a Cataraqui Curling Club entry in a best of three showdown.

The final went the three games with Tweed pulling out a 6-5 win in the 10th end. Cataraqui had last rock in the 10th and had only to take out Tweed's lone counter in the four foot circle and count one to win.

Cataraqui's skip delivered what looked like a winning rock but got only a piece of the Twood stone. Tweed's Steve Bennett swept the Cataraqui rock out of play and his rink's rock counted by a narrow margin to win the game and the title.

First game in the playoff went to Cataraqui 10-6 with Tweed bouncing back to even things with a 6-4 win.

Tweed now moves to Ontario Curling Association Junior Tankard finals scheduled for St. Catharines, March 23-24-25.

Twelve rinks participated in the Division 3 playoff. Clubs represented were Quinte of Belleville, Brighton, Picton, Kingston, Kingston Garrison, Cataraqui, CFB Trenton and Tweed.

Members of the championship foursome are Barry Ray, skip; Steven Bennett, vice-skip; Bruce Sullivan, second, and Leslie Martin, lead.

Bennett is a Quinte Club member, playing out of Tweed and Martin replaced Peter Tummon who was unable to take part because of an accident.

The playdowns were held under the sponsorship of the Junior Development Committee, Ontario Curling Association. Murray Johnson of Belleville was in charge of organizing the event and he handled the refereeing.

Habs and Seals In a Waltz

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens defeated California Seals 4-2 Monday night in a National Hockey League game devoid of any marked body contact.

Referee Wally Harris called two minor penalties to California, one for delay of game and the other for tripping, and the 16,461 fans who showed up saw the Canadiens skate to their fifth win in as many meetings against the Seals this season.

The Canadiens fired 42 shots at California goaltender Gilles Meloche while the Seals had 23 at Michel Larocque.

"I don't know of any other goalie in the NHL that could have limited us to only four goals tonight," said Montreal coach Scotty Bowman in praising Meloche's effort. "He was excellent."

Doug Risebrough, Murray Wilson, Jacques Lemaire and Peter Mahovlich scored for the Canadiens with Charlie Simmer and Rick Hampton replying for the Seals.

Risebrough opened the scoring at 4:23 of the first period, beating Meloche to the far side with a shot from the left wing.

Wilson popped his 20th of the year at 8:57, knocking in a rebound from in front of the California net but the Seals cut the margin to one goal when Simmer scored his sixth at 11:47.

Lemaire scored his 27th of the year with 7:41 gone in the second period as a shot from Don Awrey was blocked and the rebound came to Lemaire standing in the slot 25 feet out. The Montreal centre beat Meloche with a slap shot to the far side.

Mahovlich completed the scoring with his 29th goal of the year at 1:43 of the final session.

Tonight, Los Angeles Kings are at home to Kansas City Scouts, Boston Bruins visit Washington Capitals and Minnesota North Stars play host to Vancouver Canucks.

Ice Is the Thing —It's Not Good

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

All around the National Hockey League players are talking about the ice at Madison Square Garden. The things they say aren't very nice.

How bad is the Garden's ice?

"Well," Rod Gilbert of the Rangers said Monday, "it's not the best in the National Hockey League."

That may be an understatement. If you believe some of Gilbert's team-mates and many visiting players, it could very well be the worst.

In the last two weeks, the Rangers have lost two defencemen, all-star Brad Park and veteran Dale Rolfe, in ice-related mishaps. Park bounced off the boards, stepped in a rut in the ice and strained his left knee. He will be out of action until late March.

"It's the ice," he said after being injured. "It's the worst in the league."

Rolfe, skating unmolested out of his own end, lost his balance, crashed to the ice and fractured his left ankle. He will be out until next season after undergoing emergency surgery.

Ranger players denounced the ice again after the Rolfe accident.

"That lousy ice," said Derek Sanderson. "It's full of ruts."

Sanderson is in his first season with the Rangers. Gilbert has been with the club since 1962, skating both in the old Garden until 1968 and the new structure since then.

The problem at the Garden is simple. Ice improves the longer it is allowed to lay undisturbed. But by its very nature, the Garden is a multi-purpose arena that cannot enjoy the luxury of leaving the ice in place.

Don't Forget Bernier

Hull, Lacroix Staging Duel

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Bobby Hull and Andre Lacroix know what it's like to be second best and try harder. They've been in that position at varying times this season in the World Hockey Association's topsy-turvey scoring race.

One week, Winnipeg's Hull has the lead and it's Lacroix of San Diego Mariners who must catch up. The following week, Lacroix has the lead and Hull of the Jets is relegated to second spot. And to make things more interesting, some weeks Serge Bernier of Quebec Nordiques turns it into a three-way battle.

As the league enters its final month of the season, the same familiar faces and goal scorers are there.

Statistics released Monday by the league show Hull with 56 goals and 48 assists for 104 points, two ahead of Lacroix.

Lacroix, who holds the league record for most points in one season, has 30 goals and a league-high 72 assists this season.

The San Diego centre scored 50 goals and 74 assists for 124 points in the 1972-73 season while playing with Philadelphia Blazers. That record appears certain to be broken if Hull and Lacroix keep up their point-getting pace.

Bernier is in third spot with 95 points on 43 goals and 52 assists.

Marcel Dionne on the Move

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Marcel Dionne of Detroit Red Wings still has a long way to go today to catch perennial National Hockey League scoring leaders Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr.

But the Detroit captain has scored 10 points more than Esposito and four more than Orr since the mid-way point of the current schedule.

In 24 games since mid-season, Dionne has 16 goals and 24 assists for 40 points. He now has 95 points for the season—37 ealsg and 58 assists.

Esposito and Orr currently are tied for first place in the scoring race with 111 points, with Esposito's 54 goals and Orr's 75 assists giving them the leadership in those respective departments.

But Esposito ranks ninth in second-half scoring and Orr third, behind Dionne. Peter Mahovlich of Montreal Canadiens is runner-up to Dionne with 37 second-half points, including 26 assists, the most by any player this half.

MARCEL DIONNE

Despite the fact he has been injured since Feb. 12, Guy Lafleur of Montreal remains fourth behind Orr. The Boston defenceman has picked up 36 second-half points while Lafleur, who will not return to action before next Sunday, has 34 points in the 16 games he played. Rene Robert has the same number of points in 2[illegible] games.

Dionne, Detroit's first choice and second over-all in the 1971 amateur draft, has collected 340 points in his first four seasons in the NHL, the most by any player over that period of time in NHL history.

The player closest to Dionne over the four-year span is Rick Martin of Buffalo, the Sabres first choice and fifth over-all in the same amateur draft. Martin has 310 points including 173 goals, in 283 games.

Dionne's total is for 293 games and his average of 85 points per season is only bettered by Esposito's 96-point average over 12 seasons and Orr's 94-point average for nine seasons.

In the goaltending race, the Los Angeles Kings duo of Rogatien Vachon and Gary Edwards maintained their lead with a combined goals-against average of 2.19. Second is Philadelphia Flyers, led by Bernie Parent, at 2.30.

Parent leads in shutouts with nine.

Mazinke Rink Is Undefeated

FREDERICTON (CP) — Harvey Mazinke and his Saskatchewan rink took advantage of some questionable shotmaking by Northern Ontario's Bill Tetley to remain the only undefeated rink after the third round of the Canadian men's curling championship.

The Regina rink, which won the championship in 1973, scored three in the eighth end and stole another three in the ninth to defeat the Thunder Bay entry 10-6.

Mazinke said the Northern Ontario club didn't curl badly in the eighth, but the Tetley crew was outmanoeuvred and failed to recover, allowing Saskatchewan the big steal in the following end.

"We had a rock at the back of the 12-foot and they kept trying to freeze to it and the freezes weren't exactly right," said Mazinke. "We started hitting and rolling to the other side.

"When you're committed to that game, the one thing you can't do is miss your last shot. Unfortunately, that's what happened to Bill. He was looking at four counters and he threw just three or four feet more weight than he had with his first draw which stopped right on the four foot."

At 1-1 after early byes were Northern Ontario and the host New Brunswick rink skipped by John Clark of Fredericton.

Ontario's Alex Clark of Kingston, along with Quebec's Jim Ursel from St. Lambert and Prince Edward Island's John Fortier from Charlottetown followed with 1-2 marks. Trailing were Frank Beutel of Penticton, B.C., and Bob Cole's St. John's, Nfld., entry.

Saskatchewan put its undefeated mark on the line today at 9 a.m. AST against Prince Edward Island. Making up the rest of the morning draw were Newfoundland and Ontario, Nova Scotia and British Columbia, Manitoba and New Brunswick, Alberta and northern Ontario.

The Territories and Quebec draw the morning byes.

In other Monday night games, Manitoba handed Nova Scotia its first loss, 7-5 while moving into a commanding situation with three in the second; Alberta downed P.E.I. 8-4; Quebec beat Newfoundland 11-5 and the Territories downed Ontario 11-4.

In the second round, divided into morning and afternoon sections, Alberta defeated Ontario 12-4, New Brunswick edged the Territories 8-6, Nova Scotia beat Newfoundland 7-6, Saskatchewan edged Quebec 4-3, Northern Ontario beat Manitoba 9-8 and P.E.I. defeated British Columbia 11-10.

"It was just one of those things," said Mazinke of the skip shots by Tetley. "I think he wanted to make sure that he wasn't light in that situation.

"I wouldn't say that he threw a bad rock. He just had a little more weight than he really needed."

Gray in Charge

CALGARY (CP) — Canadian welterweight boxing champion Clyde Gray battered Marc Gervais of Hull, Que., for a technical knockout at 1:42 of the fifth round Monday night to highlight a card of three Canadian championship matches.

Light heavyweight champion Gary Summerhays of Brantford, Ont., decked Dennis Cochrane of Toronto four times in the third round before referee Hal Wilson stopped the successful title defence at 2:42.

And Johnny Summerhays drew boos from a crowd of 3,209 by clutching and grabbing his way to a unanimous 12-round decision in a lightweight title defence against Barry Sponagle of New Glasgow, N.S.

After the scheduled 12-round fight, Gray told reporters he is concerned that a cut or an injury might force him to lose his scheduled $30,000 bout April 5 with Angel Espada in Puerto Rico or "an almost certain" world title shot a month or so later against Jose Napoles.

Gray, 27, is considered the top contender for Naploes' crown.

Landreth Aiming To Be No. 2

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (CP) — Larry Landreth may be the only player at Montreal Expos' spring training camp who is trying as hard as he can to be No. 2.

Landreth, who wil be 20 on March 11, fully expects to be playing home games somewhere other than Montreal in 1975, but his goal is to become the second Canadian-born baseball player to play for the Expos in regular-season National League play.

"It's good to deal with a Canadian club," said the right-handed pitcher who learned the trade in his native Stratford, Ont. "It would be kind of nice to make it."

If he does make it—and everyone agrees it will not be this season—he will follow reliever Claude Raymond into the ranks of Canadian Expos.

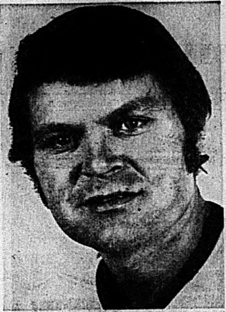
Raymond fashioned an 8-16 won-lost record and a 4.81 earned run average in just more than two seasons as a reliever with the Expos from 1969 to 1971. He racked up 24 saves, 23 of them in 1970, his best season.

Landreth, the youngest player at the Expos' major league camp, blossomed into a top starter in 1974 for West Palm Beach Expos of the Class A Florida State League.

He boasted a 15-7 record for the championship club and went on to lead Florida Instructional league pitchers with a 0.61 ERA, walking seven batters and striking out 40 in 44 innings.

He has been accorded "top prospect" status by the Expos organization, a fact demonstrated by his invitation to the major league camp as a non-roster player.

"I don't think we're really looking for anything from him this year," said general manager Jim Fanning. "Te think he's a fine, fine young prospect and without question he's farther advanced in his pitching knowledge than in his pitching experience."



Gerry Desjardins

Shuffles Off To Buffalo

BUFFALO (AP) — If team organizational charts are any indication, Buffalo Sabres are about to sign league-jumping goalie Gerry Desjardins.

The National Hockey League club announced Monday that it had acquired the NHL rights to Desjardins from New York Islanders.

Desjardins jumped from the Islanders to the World Hockey Association Michigan Stags in the off-season. That team became the Baltimore Blades, now last in the WHA.

As the announcement of the acquisition rights was being made, Desjardins was on the way to Toronto with the Blades for a game tonight with the Toros. But Blades' coach Johnny Wilson said the goalie climbed into a car at the Toronto airport and headed for Buffalo.

Wilson indicated that financial problems and having to face 40 to 50 shots on goal a night might have prompted Desjardins' interest in jumping again.

"He's been talking about it for a while," Wilson said in a telephone interview. "Now, I think he's vetoed our game with the Toros and pointed his car in the Sabre direction. His signing with the Sabres would be no surprise to me."

The Sabres gave up cash and "future considerations" to the Islanders for the negotiating rights to Desjardins.

Will History Repeat for Us?

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (CP) — The venerable Broadmoor Arena, site of the 1975 world figure skating championships, has been a lucky spot for Canadian skaters and they're hoping history repeats itself this year.

This is the fifth time the world competition has been held at this Colorado mountain resort and Canadians have left with gold medals three of the four previous times.

Barbara Wagner and Bob Paul won the pairs here in 1957 and 1959 and Petra Burka won the women's singles gold medal in 1965.

Canadians were shut out of the golds when the championships were staged at the Broadmoor in 1969 but they figure there's a good chance to get back on the track this year.

Toller Cranston, 25, five-time Canadian champion from Toronto, came from sixth in the compulsory figures in Munich last year to finish third with a spectacular free-skating performance.

Cranston, who has put together a completely new free-skating program and has worked hard on his figures, is everyone's favorite to win the gold medal this year but he will have to skate his best to do it.

Jan Hoffman of East Germany is not here to defend his men's crown. He underwent a knee operation in December and will miss all of this year's competitions.

Vladimir Kovalev, a 21-year-old Moscow student, became the first Soviet skater ever to win the European championship in January and is expected to be Cranston's main challenger along with European silver medalist John Curry of Britain and United States champion Gordon Mckellen Jr.

Cranston's improvement in compulsory figures, which count for 40 per cent of total marks was tested early. The men's figures were the first event on the program as the championships opened today.

Ron Shaver, 23, of Cambridge, Ont., was fifth in the world last year and second only to Cranston in the free skating. But he suffered a groin injury in January, had to miss the Canadian championships in Quebec City and is skating in pain.

Bob Rubens, 22, of Toronto, runner-up to Cranston at Quebec City, is also skating with an injury—a pinched cartilage in his left knee and has had no trouble with the flying sit-spin, one of the manoeuvres in the compulsory free-skating program scheduled for Wednesday.

The compulsory free skating accounts for 20 per cent of marks and the free skating the remaining 40 per cent.

Canada has two teams competing in the pairs which start tonight with the compulsory program, worth 50 per cent, and wind up Wednesday night with the free skating for the remaining 50.

They are Candy Jones, 19, of Toronto and Don Fraser, 19, of Richmond Hill, Ont., the Canadian champions, and Cathy Hutchinson, 15, and Jamie McGrigor, 19, both of Cambridge, Ont., who finished second.

Missing will be Sandra and Val Bezic, brother-and sister pair from Toronto who were fifth in the world last year. Sandra, 18, is suffering from an ankle injury and she has decided to have the ankle put in a cast for a month to let it heal properly.

MURRAY — Kerri Ann is pleased to announce the safe and happy arrival of her 8 lb., 6 oz. brother, Donald Charles Richard, born Friday, Feb. 21, 1975 at 2.45 a.m. at the Belleville General Hospital. Proud parents are David and Donna Murray of Trenton.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to sincerely thank my friends, relatives and neighbors for cards, flowers and visits while I was a patient in Belleville General Hospital. Also to many neighbors who brought food to our home for family. Special thanks to doctors, nurses and staff on 3rd floor physiotherapy.

Marg Rivers, Tweed.

My sons and I cannot express in words our most heartfelt thanks to all our wonderful friends, neighbors and relatives for their many kindnesses, floral tributes, Mass cards and donations to the heart fund in our recent loss of a dear husband and loving father Fiori. We would expressly like to thank Dr. C. Kuebler, Dr. J. Loynes, Dr. B. Allore and Father John Grainger of St. Michael's Church and the Stanley Structure team members.

Sincerely, Mrs. Fiori Goegan.

The family of the late Beverley Thompson would like to express their sincere appreciation for the many acts of kindness extended to them at their time of sorrow. To the nurses at the Belleville General Hospital, Drs. Birchard and MacIntosh for their care. To the many friends and relatives for their expressions of sympathy, the numerous floral tributes, cards, donations to the Cancer Society and for those who sent in food. A special thank you to the Belleville City Police Department. Rev. P. Beaudrie and Rev. J. O. Moore and the Whattam Funeral Home.

IN MEMORIAM

CANNONS — In loving memory of a dear daughter and sister, Bessie who passed away five years ago, March 4th, 1970.

No farewells were spoken,
No time to say goodbye.
You were gone before we knew,
And only God knows why.
Our hearts still ache with sadness,
And secret tears still flow,
What it meant to lose you,
No one will ever know.
Each time we see your photo,
You smile and seem to say,
"Don't cry, I'm only sleeping,
We'll meet again some day."
Always so good, unselfish and kind,
Few on this earth her equal we find,
Honorable and upright in all her ways,
Loyal and true to the end of her days.

—Lovingly remembered by mother, sister Irene and brother-in-law Frank.

CANNONS — Mrs. Bessie Cannons. In loving memory of a dear mother, who passed away March 4, 1970.

We do not need a special day,
To bring you to our minds.
For the days we do not think of you,
Are very hard to find.
If all this world were ours to give,
We'd give it, yes, and more,
To see the face of mother, dear,
Come smiling through the door.

—Ever loved by daughter Karen and family.

ETHIER — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather Edward, who passed away March 4, 1962.

Though his smile is gone forever,
And his hand we cannot touch,
Still I have so many memories,
Of the one I loved so much.
His memory is my keepsake,
With which I'll never part,
God has him in His keeping,
I have him in my heart.

—Lovingly remembered by daughter Theresa, son-in-law Al and grandsons Jack and Harry.

WOOD — In loving memory of a dear mother, Nancy Wood, who passed away March 4, 1973.

Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all,
And though the years be many or few,
They are filled with remembrance of you.

—Never forgotten by daughter Olive and son-in-law Isaac Smith.

WOOD — In loving memory of a dear father, George Wood who passed away March 4th, 1966.

Till memory fades and life departs,
You live forever in our hearts.

—Always remembered by daughter Olive and son-in-law Isaac Smith.

Guild's Newest Production Really Play Within Play

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

The curtain goes up Wednesday night on what could be one of the Belleville Theatre Guild's most ambitious efforts, The Knight of the Burning Pestle.

For this production — running Mar. 5 to 8 and from Mar. 12-15 at the Pinnacle Playhouse—the Guild has enlisted the services of professional director Daniel Walsh.

Mr. Walsh, a graduate of the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Art is with Theatre Ontario and has directed and given workshops in such places as Oakville, Burlington and Deep River.

Rehearsals for the two-act play which he describes as a bawdy farce, began on Jan. 14. The cast of 35 covers a wide range of ages from a 17-year-old youth to actors in their 50s.

The play is rich in spectacle and sound. The costumes are reminiscent of Elizabethan times although the period is Jacobean, that is from the time of King James who succeeded Queen Elizabeth.

The effect of the difference in time is that during King James' era, the theatre was given more freedom and scope as that form of entertainment was a favorite of the English king.

The play, written by Francis Beaumont, is hard to define in that it is a play within a play. As the play starts we notice two spectators on the side of the stage in turn watching a separate play.

In time the two, played by Flo Yanover and Peter Kitcher intrude on the acting and soon take part in some of the activity going on.

Eventually, they become just as important to us the audience as the other actors are that they are supposed to be watching.

"You could say the story is based on Don Quizote, the story of a Knight Errant out to rescue a fair maiden whether she wanted to be rescued or not," he said.

"It's the story of young love and has a combination of ingredients from the Elizabethan and Jacobean theatre," said Mr Walsh.

Relating to the bawdiness and free-wheeling spirit of the play as it was originally written, Mr. Walsh said he had to tone down some of the language and references. But even with that he said the play can be said to be lewd but not offensive, dealing as it does with everyday events in the manner of that period.

"The play was written in the 1600s when there was great licence given to actors under King James I. "It was the time when theatres were springing up everywhere. It was when there was a suddent unbirdled zest for theatre," said Mr. Walsh.

The play boasts a fine assortment of theatre guild veterans such as Flo Yanover, Peter Kitcher, Maurice Sykes, Bill Culp and Steve Forrester but there are also new faces working with the cast such as Terry Brown, and Liz Anderson, Centennial Secondary students Lesley Forrester and Andy Wright all making their debut with the guild.

Mr. Wright playing the part of Venturewell is with the Royal Air Force in Great Britain and is in the area doing a tour of duty with the Armed Forces here in Canada.

While there is feast for the eyes with the luxurious costumes, there are also delights for the ear besides that of the spoken word. A harpsichord, two recorders and a guitar will be played at certain points in the play and the cast sings as well.

Keep you eye tuned for the grand finale which features the quaint custom of dancing around the maypole. The lively spirit is infectious and the happy ending leaves everyone in a good mood.

The play is the Belleville Theatre Guild's entry in the Eastern Ontario Drama League taking place in Peterborough in April.

CRAIGMONT (AP) — Sixteen Indians walked off a movie set near this Idaho community during the weekend saying they should be paid $20 more than extras.

Mike Green, a spokesman for the unhappy Nez Perce Indians hired for the filming of Breakheart Pass, said the Indians are asking for wages of $50 a day instead of the current rate of 30 a day for extras.

Don Guest, the production crew chief for the movie starring Charles Bronson, said the Indians are mistaken if they believe non-Indian extras are paid more than $30. a day.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Linda McCartney, wife of former Beatle Paul McCartney, was booked Monday for investigation of marijuana possession.

Police said Mrs. McCartney, 33, was with her husband and three children—two girls and a boy—when their 1974 Lincoln Continental was stopped by officers shortly after midnight Sunday night for not stopping at a red light.

While officers talked to Paul McCartney, who was driving, they said they noticed "a strong smell of burning marijuana" emanating from the car.

A search turned up six to eight grams of marijuana in Mrs. McCartney's purse, police said.

BUFFALO (AP) — Young pianists from northeastern states and parts of Canada will have an opportunity to participate this year in the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra Society's young artists competition.

The competition, limited this year to pianists, will be held May 17 through 19 at the State University here.

Eligible will be pianists aged 18 through 25 who live or study in the New England states, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio as well as from Ontario and Quebec.

MEMPHIS, enn. (AP) — Memphis soul music star Isaac Hayes has announced formation of his own record label, Hot Buttered Soul Records.

He said Monday that AC Records of Los Angeles will distribute the products.

Hostesses Plan Protest

LONDON (AP) — Hostesses of British Airways, the British airline, are going to welcome passengers at London airport in civilian clothing to protest against what they consider an inadequate clothing allowance, one of their trade union representatives said. She said that since the merger of British Overseas Airways Corporation (BOAC) and British European Airways (BEA), hostesses had lost their right to 24 pairs of tights a year and free shoes. The company now gives them two blouses a year when they need about six.

CALLED FIRST STATE

Delaware is called the first state of the United States union because it was the first of the 13 original to join.

Liverpool Gets Grant

LIVERPOOL (CP) — The Wolfson Foundation has granted more than £60,000 ($138,000) to University of Liverpool to further its research into ways of reclaiming plastics from waste. It means the university's department of metallurgy and materials science and department of industrial studies can do a three-year study into the technical and economical aspects of plastics reclamation, a subject which is given impetus by the need to conserve oil-based materials.

Manufactures Unhappy

LONDON (AFP) — The British chocolate and confectionery manufacturers are discontented with Common Market regulations. Their association, the Cocoa, Chocolate and Confectionery Alliance, believes that the regulations harm their exports and threaten them with unemployment. One member has been forced to place his workers on short time. The alliance explains that the Common Market in November imposed a levy of £100 ($230) a ton on sugar used in Britain.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL
Wednesday, March 5

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Key people essential to your plans are likely to let you down today. Bank more upon yourself, less upon others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You will not gain as many advantages as you should from a situation where you share an interest because you're overly complacent.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It will be easier for you to give your word than to keep it later on. A friend could be lost through a broken promise.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You have a lot of big ideas. It doesn't appear you're prepared to roll up your sleeves and do something about them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It would be unwise at this time to count on funds or resources that you hope will be coming in. Be realistic. Work with what's at hand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You won't be as careful as you usually are about household matters today. Something that should be attended to will be neglected.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Doublecheck anything important that you put in writing or sign your name to. If you make an error, it will be a big one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If you're sharing something socially with another, let her share the expense, too. There's no reason you should pick up the entire tab.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have little regard for the opinions of others now. It's likely you'll pull off a few stunts that will raise some eyebrows.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll pass on some information solely because it makes interesting listening though you know your source isn't reliable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't ask something of another that you refused to do when you had the opportunity. Her answer will be the same as yours.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There is opportunity about you today, but it's the type type you can't take for granted. You must act promptly on it.

Thyroid Tablets Influence Weight

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For about a year and a half I was on three thyroid tablets a day, and my doctor told me I would probably have to take them always. I lost weight and felt good. I had lots of energy.

My doctor died, and my new doctor told me after some tests that one tablet a day was enough. Now I have gained my weight back, and I feel tired all the time. I am 55, and I'm all through having my periods.

Could this have anything to do with my weight problems?—Mrs. A.

Your former doctor told you you probably have to take thyroid medicine always, but did he say how much? This could be the cause of your confusion.

Under your former thyroid program of three tablets a day, you were probably more active. For, as you say, you had "lots of energy." You were literally "burning off" the excess fat. Under the lower dosage, you do not feel so fit, are tired. The chances are, too, that you have reduced your physical activity, so have quite naturally put on weight.

You should report your sluggishness to your doctor. Perhaps some middle ground can be found in the thyroid dosage that will keep your glandular problem under control and at the same time solve the tiredness problem.

Do not interpret what I've said as suggesting the use of thyroid medicine for reducing. The thyroid gland is too delicate a biological mechanism to be tinkered with for such reasons.

Dear Doctor: I have had bladder repair done, but I get bladder infections every winter. I am 52 years old. The doctor gave me hormones, which helped.

But after a year or two of taking the hormones I began to get lumps (non-malignant) in my breast. The doctor said to stop taking them. Now the fear of bladder infection has me upset. Are there any vitamins I can take to replace the hormones?—Mrs. C.D.

Vitamins are entirely different from hormones, so one cannot be substituted for the other.

A thought about your recurring infections, though. You would be better off finding the cause of tham so that appropriate antibiotics could be prescribed.

Yes, bladder problems can occur in post-menopausal woman, and hormone treatment has been effective.

The bladder is a kind of "holding sac" for urine excreted by the kidneys between urinations. This makes the bladder a sitting duck for many infections carried through the urinary tract. In fact, a bladder infection often indicates infection elsewhere along the tract, in the kidney, etc.

A winter cold or a flu attack can set off a bladder infection. The cause of your bladder infections might be detected by a study of your urine. I would also suggest that you get an influenza shot before the next flu season.

Keep Zulu Story Alive

BULAWAYO, Rhodesia (CP) — The history of the African people, in peace and war, is being kept alive here. The age-old skills of painting, sculpture, basketry, weaving and music are being carefully nurtured.

The Matabele story in Rhodesia started when Mzilikazi, a Zulu general, fled from the wrath of Tshaka, his king. After many years of harassment by pursuing Zulu raiders, he crossed the Limpopo River and settled in what now is Rhodesia.

Mzilikazi's successor, Lobengula, built himself a city on his accession and called it Bulawayo. This site was on the edge of the Matopos Hills, about 20 miles from here, and the present city is the fifth to bear the name. Tshaka had previously given the name to a small kraal in Natal.

The arts and crafts of those times are kept alive today through the vivid imagery of the skills of crafts workers. The Jairos Jiri Craft Shop here is a shop window of the nation's traditional and modern African arts.

In this venture the nationally renowned Mzilikazi pottery and the weaving and batiks of the Home Industries Centre both feature prominently.

A second centre of collated indigenous crafts is the African village south of Bulawayo with its site museum and displays in a traditional setting.

Four tribes are represented—the Ndebele, the Kalanga, the Sotho and the Tongo. The village has typical cattle herds, grain-drying structures and winnowing floors that take the visitor on a journey into Africa's past.

In the Cyrene Mission near here are carvings and paintings produced by the students. Attractive murals and richly-carved furniture decorate the church, and the craftsmen can be seen at work.

There is also the Kwanongoma College of the Rhodesian Academy of Music with performances of the students' orchestra, using indigenous instruments. It was not long ago that only one competent marimba African xylophone player could be found in the African townships of Bulawayo. Through the work of the college there are today many exponents of this traditional African instrument.

Opening lead — Q ♦

Four hearts is a mighty fine contract. Against any opening lead but a diamond, it is practically a law down. But as is so frequently the case, West is unkind enough to lead the queen of diamonds.

You decide to duck the first diamond on general principles. Sometimes your opponents shift, but West continues with the jack and you are in dummy with the ace.

You toy with the idea of leading a club. If the man with the ace of clubs started with just two diamonds, you will be able to discard dummy's last diamond on your third club. But you abandon this idea because you have decided that diamonds are going to break 4-3.

So you lead the 10 of trumps from dummy. East follows low.

Should you take the trump finesse now? If it works you are home; if it loses you are going to be one down.

If you refuse the trump finesse and go up with the ace you may drop the singleton king from West. If you don't you can try the spade finesse. If that loses, you will be two down but the combination play is still worth while.

The reason is that you have a 13-per-cent chance to drop that singleton king, which is just too much extra percentage to be wasted.

After Tumbu Fly Lice Are Nice

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Keith Ronald has discovered a way to turn polar bears and harp seal pups black without going near them.

He uses a special camera that records reflected ultra-violet radiation—the hair of the animals absorbs radiation while the surrounding ice does not.

Dr. Ronald, dean of the College of Biological Sciences at University of Guelph, said this technique will allow scientists to make more-accurate counts of polar animals.

He and his university colleagues D. M. Lavigne and N. A. Oritsland took pictures of the animals which showed white where the ice reflected the rays and black where the animals' coats absorbed them.

Dr. Ronald said traditional photography taken while flying over herds missed up to half the harp seal pups because it photographed white on white.

He said the ultra-violet photography still is experimental. He took two flights last year and hopes to check this year's seal pups in March.

STUDIES SEALS

Dr. Ronald studies seals as well as counting them. He has room to keep about 25 specimens at a time for biological studies.

He said he is addicted to seals.

"Some people like marijuana, I like seals," he said. "Once you work with them you can't help it."

He discourages assistants and colleagues from naming the specimens to avoid emotional involvement interfering with scientific objectivity.

Most of his work is aimed at a better understanding of the physiology of the animals and their remarkable adaptation for diving.

Dr. Ronald has also studied the harp seals' hearing, vision and 15-sound vocabulary. He is still working on the meanings of the 15 sounds.

Seals are able to change their heart beats almost instantaneously.

"They can go to two beats a minute from 120 beats a minute in a matter of seconds," Dr. Ronald said.

The reduced rate is vital during the seal's dive.

With the slower rate "the blood is sitting in the tissues longer," Dr. Ronald said.

"There is more chance for the tissues to draw the oxygen."

Seals have more oxygen in their blood than humans. During a dive, they supply oxygen to the brain and heart and shut down parts of the circulatory system leading to extremities.

Dr. Ronald said that when a seal does this in the laboratory, researchers cannot draw blood from its flippers.

Seals also exhale before entering the water to allow a dive to greater depths without being affected by increasing water pressure

Cameras To Record Drug Study

OTTAWA (CP) — Television goes on trial today in the railway committee room of the Parliament buildings as cameras invade a parliamentary committee hearing for the first time.

Technical crews toiled all day Monday preparing the room with wiring linking 24 microphones to a sound control centre and with four banks of lights near the ceiling.

Today there are expected to be three fixed-position film cameras to record the sights and sounds as the Senate legal and constitutional affairs committee hears submissions about a bill to lighten penalties for possession of cannabis drugs—marijuana, hashish and liquid hashish.

There will also be one or two hand-held portable cameras unable to record sound.

But the television coverage has been authorized only on an experimental basis and only for the cannabis hearings of this particular committee, which will continue once or twice a week for several more weeks.

Afterward, senators and other MPs will be assessing the results: Was the presence of cameras, lights and television crews disruptive? Did it have an inhibiting effect on witnesses or on the senators themselves?

And how did it all turn out on the TV screen at home?

The senators are particularly concerned that television give a realistic representation of their work, says Ross Tweedale, administrative assistant to Senate government leader Ray Perrault.

They fear that bits and pieces selected by television news editors may distort the work they are doing and might even ridicule it.

"They've been kicked in the teeth before—or think they have—by the media," Mr. Twedale said.

Extend Program

OTTAWA (CP) — A rent subsidy program for low-income people will be extended to include non-profit and co-operative projects, Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson announced Monday.

Mr. Danson said in a news release that the government expects to spend about $3.6 million on the shared-cost programs with the provinces this year.

The tab came to $1,000.

Skipper from Cobourg Missing in Atlantic

TORONTO (CP) — The United States Coast Guard has reported a Cobourg, Ont., skipper and two Toronto crew members missing in the Atlantic Ocean in a 41-foot catamaran.

William Lelliott, 40, and crew members, Ronald McGuire and George Shkauryki, are more than four weeks overdue at Grand Abaco Island in The Bahamas.

John Simpson of Toronto, Mr. Lelliott's brother-in-law, said Monday that he and his family were in almost hourly contact with the coast guard in New York until active search was called off Feb. 20.

He said Mr. Lelliott, president of Community Antenna Television, bought the boat to take his wife and four daughters on an around-the-world cruise. He said Mr. Lelliott is an experienced sailor with five years in the navy.

Mr. Simpson added that the catamaran is supposed to be unsinkable.

He said the coast guard informed the family Feb. 20 that the active search had been called off, but the vessel would be placed in an active unsolved file, which meant all-ships alerts would still go out.

16 Sites OK

TORONTO (CP) — Health officials have found no radiation hazard in 16 of 50 possible sites in Ontario where radium luminous paint was used in wartime aircraft dial construction, health ministry officials said Monday.

Black Player's Appeal Is Heard

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal Monday reserved judgment on the appeal of the case Paul Douglas Smithers, a 18-year-old black hockey player convicted of manslaughter last June after the beating death of another teen-age player.

Smithers, of nearby Mississauga, was convicted on the lesser charged reduced from a charge of murder punishable by life imprisonment. Barry Ross Cobby, 17, also of Mississauga, died from injuries he received in a fight with Smithers following a hockey game.

Smithers said at his trial that during the game he was subjected to such slurs as "nigger," "coon" and "dirty black bastard" by Cobby, who was white.

He was sentenced to six months in an adult retraining centre in Brampton, Ont.

Smithers was released Monday on $1,000 bail after surrendering himself to the court Sunday for his appeal hearing. He was released from the training centre on bail pending appeal.

Arthur Maloney, Smithers' lawyer, said there was reasonable doubt that Mr. Cobby died from injuries suffered when kicked by Smithers.

Several doctors testified at the trial that the kick probably caused Mr. Cobby to vomit and choke, but none would call it a certainty.

Archie Campbell argued for the Crown that it was beyond a coincidence that Mr. Cobby vomited and choked to death moments after being kicked in the stomach.

Real Estate Prices Stable

OTTAWA (CP) — Prices for real estate will remain fairly stable for the balance of this year "in preparation for a new boom in 1976," the outgoing president of the Ontario Real Estate Association predicts.

George Walker told delegates to the association's annual meeting Monday that there "will be no dramatic increases in price in 1975." A text of his speech was released in advance of delivery.

Resort Grading Urged

TORONTO (CP) — Claude Bennett, Ontario minister of industry and tourism, said Monday his ministry plans to encourage the province's tourist operators to set up a grading system for accommodation.

He told the annual convention of the Association of Tourist Resorts of Ontario that such a system—which he said would improve accommodation — would be administered by an agency separate from the government.

Transit Fare Freeze Is Lifted by Rhodes

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has lifted a one-year freeze on public transit fares, John Rhodes, minister of transportation and communications said Monday.

Mr. Rhodes said in an interview lifting of the freeze, effective immediately, would enable municipal transit authorities across the province to set their own fares and reduce growing deficits.

The decision came after a meeting at Queen's Park between provincial officials and representatives of the Toronto Transit Commission who also asked that the province increase its share in subsidies to transit systems.

The minister said it was decided not to increase provincial subsidies now set at 50 per cent of operating deficits and 75 per cent of capital costs.

He said whether fares would increase now would be "up to the municipalities."

Fourteen Takeovers Are Given Approval

OTTAWA (CP) — The foreign investment review agency's usual curtain of secrecy was lifted slightly Monday when Industry Minister Gillespie announced approval for 14 foreign takeovers of Canadian companies and the refusal of one application.

For the first time the minister went beyond the usual bland statement that a particular takeover bid was, or was not, "of significant benefit to Canada" and spelled out reasons for certain decisions.

The review agency screens proposed foreign takeovers, negotiating with would-be buyers for commitments on new jobs, more capital investment and assurances of opportunities for Canadians in the acquired companies.

But the decision to permit a transaction is made by cabinet on the advice of the industry minister.

Mr. Gillespie still did not reveal any of the financial terms of the takeover proposals, nor did he give reasons for turning down one acquisition bid. All the review agency's deliberations are secret. Some of the decisions were announced earlier without details.

The rejected proposal was for a takeover by Bestpipe Ltd. of Kitchener, a subsidiary of Rocla Concrete Pipes Ltd. of Australia, of Vibrapipe Concrete Products Ltd. in Ste. Therese de Blainville, Que. Vibrapipe makes concrete drainage and sewage pipes.

Tax Cut Asked

Bottles in Cab Of Death Train

CP and Staff

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian transport commission report expresses "grave concern" about evidence of alcoholic beverages in the locomotive cab of a freight train which collided with a passenger train last Dec. 20 near Kingston, Ont., killing three persons.

Commission investigators say in the report, issued Tuesday, that broken pieces of a still-capped beer bottle and a 12-ounce vodka bottle were found in the cab of the Canadian national Railways freight when it was dismantled.

The report urges that railways be required to establish "standard surveillance procedures to monitor the fitness of train employees reporting for duty."

A commission spokesman said the commission has already written CN urging the railway to carry out this recommendation. A coroner's inquest is scheduled for Tuesday in Napanee.

The freight engineer Keith Boyle, Belleville, passenger train engineman Ray Mortimore, Belleville and a passenger, Joanne Feeney, Quezensboro, were killed in the crash Nine others were injured.

Last week, tail-end crew of the freight train were "disciplined", says Robert Burns, Rideau area manager for Canadian National, based in Belleville.

Train conductor Gerry Grose and tail-end brakeman Edward Beatty, "have both been suspended from mainline duty", said Mr. Burns. A Toronto CN spokesman said the discipline action "came as a result of the accident".

He said the disciplinary action would extend for an "indefinite" period of time.

CN sources confided that the union representing the two men was considering lodging official grievance regarding the action. It was said there was a possibility of a walkout Tuesday night, but this walkout did not materialize.

"I know there's some unrest about this," said Mr. Burns.

Union officials were not available for comment.

The investigators were also critical of the training of one crewman with five months experience who was head-end brakeman on the freight locomotive.

The commission said the railway safety advisory committee—which includes representatives from the railways, unions and the commission—is being asked to study training for newly-hired trainmen emphasizing brake and radio operation.

In addition, the commission said the railways will be asked to assign the senior brakeman to the locomotive whenever a crew includes a brakeman with less than six months service.

The eastbound freight train ran past a red stop signal and collided with the oncoming Ottawa-Toronto passenger train which was approaching a switch point to cross over to another track, the commission said.

Tests showed the braking equipment and the automatic signal systems were operating properly, the report said.

The investigators said blood tests were taken during an autopsy on the body of the freight train engineer. The results are not yet known.

Brutality Condoned

TORONTO (CP) — A former Toronto jail prisoner told a royal commission inquiry Tuesday that jail officers condone guard brutality

Hugh Sutherland, a mining engineer who was held in the jail last spring after being convicted of conspiracy to defraud, said a guard told him of beating up a child molester and another man suspected of smuggling drugs into the jail.

He told the inquiry into alleged guard brutality at the jail that "it would take a superman to put up with the things the guards have to put up with."

Mr. Sutherland said prisoners make a game of baiting jail staff with bad language.

Letter Carriers To Honor Pickets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A spokesman for the Letter Carriers Union said members will honor picket lines planned by postal maintenance workers in Calgary today—an example of the increasing involvement of other workers across Canada in the rotating strikes by federal blue-collar workers.

Mail and airport services in the country continue to be hampered by rotating strikes of the 18,600-member Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC). The strike entered its 18th day today.

PSAC spokesman Bill Doherty said in Ottawa Tuesday he will ask the Canadian Labor Congress and regional federation of labor leaders to persuade more unions to honor picket lines set up by federal labor and trades workers.

He said at a news conference that the government is illegally interfering in union activities. It is attempting to layoff workers in some places and designate others as essential employees who are forbidden to strike, he said.

Between 6,000 and 10,000 PSAC members have been on strike each day since Feb. 10 to support union demands for pay increases. The government has offered a wage increase of 26.1 per cent in a two-year contract while the union wants 37 per cent.

At CFB Downsview, a suburb of Toronto, garbagemen and drivers of oil trucks have refused to cross picket lines set up by about 250 civilian employees. A military official said a tanker trailer was leased and driven b ya military person when oil supplies ran short. Armed forces personnel removed garbage.

Truck drivers with supplies for the Canadian Armed Forces in Halifax were escorted by military personnel and civilian policemen Tuesday through picket lines set up by PSAC members.

Dance for Dollars for Disabled

A marathon square-dance is planned for Belleville March 22 to raise money for the Disability Fund — an organization for aid to the handicapped. Bruce Bean hopes the event can also prove the area can have a wheel-chair dance club, and talks over the marathon with its organizer, Enid Williams, of Single Beau-Knots Square Dance Club. Hydro To Ask Higher Rates

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro will seek substantial rate increases this year to finance capital expansion and to offset higher inflation costs, Hydro Chairman Robert Taylor said Tuesday.

"The total sum required by Hydro between 1974 and 1982 has been pushed by inflation from the $16.7 billion estimated last year to $23.8 billion," Mr. Taylor told the annual meeting of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association and the Association of Municipal Electrical Utilities.

Hydro's construction of new generating stations to meet increasing energy demands means the public utility "must borrow unprecedented amounts of money."

"But we can't borrow it all," Mr. Taylor said.

A projected deficit this year of $74 million also contributes to the need for rate increases, he added.

"This is largely a result of our inability when establishing rates for 1975 to anticipate the continuing high rate of inflation," he said. "We just didn't raise rates enough."

He said the proposed rate increases will be considered next month by the Hydro board

Berlin Politician Is Freed Unharmed

BERLIN (AP) — West Berlin politician Peter Lorenz was freed unharmed during the night, and police began a massive manhunt for eight persons suspected of having a part in his kidnapping.

The 52-year-old head of West Berlins Christian Democratic party was released after Pastor Heinrich Albertz returned from Aden and broadcast a message to the kidnappers.

Albertz, a former mayor of Berlin who had voluntarily accompanied the anarchists on their flight to Aden, said the government of South Yemen had given unrestricted asylum to five anarchist convicts released from prisons in West Germany and West Berlin.

Lorenz, who had been threatened with death, was freed at midnight in the Wilmersdorf district and telephoned his wife from a public booth. Police Chief Klaus Huebner said Lorenz was exhausted but apparently in good condition otherwise.

Lorenz was confined for six days after two men and a woman made off with him last Thursday.

Dredging Contract Probe Widened

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP investigation into dredging contracts has gone beyond Hamilton and Quebec City, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said in the Commons Tuesday.

However, he refused to say where the investigation had spread.

Mr. Allmand told reporters outside the House that the inquiry into Hamilton harbor dredging contracts "led them (the RCMP) to Quebec and now there is evidence that leads them to suspect other areas."

He ruled out the possibility that Ottawa will order a public inquiry into dredging operations. The RCMP investigation, which started in Hamilton, was going well. He did not know when the investigation would be completed.

Marchand Playful

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons resembled a laugh-in Tuesday as Transport Minister Jean Marchand played comedian during some tough questioning about the Hamilton harbor dredging scandal.

Mr. Marchand, his reading glasses perched mischievously near the tip of his nose, toyed with the opposition questions, sending parts of the House and the galleries into gales of laughter.

At one point, Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp left his seat to speak with Mr. Marchand, but it could not be determined whether he was encouraging the transport minister or telling him to cool his performance.

Man Guilty

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — Donald Harry Everingham, 28, of Toronto was convicted Tuesday by an Ontario Supreme Court jury of raping and attempting to murder an eight-year-old Craigleith, Ont., girl last August.

Davey Charges Globe Has Interest Conflict

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Keith Davey (L—Ontario) said Tuesday night that newspapers should be required to publicize "their real owners" so readers know about any conflicts of interest.

He said in the Senate that The Globe and Mail of Toronto had such an undeclared conflict in connection with government plans to impose content rules on Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest.

Specifically, he said the newspaper deleted a sentence from a letter to the editor he wrote last week. The sentence raised the question of a possible conflict of interest involving the publisher

"The Globe and Mail is, of course, an FP publication, whose publisher, R. S. Malone, is also president of FP Publications. But neither this fact, nor, indeed, the fact that The Globe and Mail is an FP publication is even mentioned on The Globe and Mail editorial page masthead."

Senator Davey's letter, published last Saturday, accused the newspaper of having changed its opinion in the Feb. 24 editorial from a previous stand favoring withdrawal of special treatment for the magazines, a charge the newspaper disputed in a note published with the letter.

In the Senate Tuesday night, Sen. Davey said the newspaper omitted a final sentence from his letter, which said:

"Perhaps your about-face on the issue may have some connection with the arrival of Globe Publisher Brig. Richard Malone, who announced earlier this week that FP Publications had abandoned its attempt to negotiate a deal with Time."

Labor Wants Time Off For Municipal Voting

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The Quinte and District Labor Council passed a resolution Tuesday asking the province to "make it easier for the blue collar worker to vote in municipal elections".

Currently, in provincial and federal elections, employers are required to provide employers with four free hours during the polling period. The employee receives pay for the additional time off needed to vote.

The Labor Council's motion, forwarded by council vice president Ian Reilly, calls for identical treatment for municipal elections.

Mr. Reilly said the action could lead to increased voter turnout in municipal elections.

A copy of the resolution will be sent to provincial authorities.

Mounties Get Ready to Seize Answer Again

OTTAWA (CP) — A force of about 20 RCMP men was prepared early today to take over the fugitive salvage ship Answer for a second time, as it sat in thick ice in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

RCMP and transport ministry officials said the police were crowded on board the coast guard icebreaker John A. Macdonald in sight of the Answer.

They said they did not know when the officers would be transferring to the Answer, which has been in and out of police hands since the weekend.

Presumably the transfer would be by helicopter.

At last report the two ships were about 40 miles off the north end of the Magdalen Islands

In the confusing and sometimes dramatic events of Tuesday the ship had travelled less than 50 miles.

The RCMP put its large boarding party together because of tension that grew up between Capt. Brian Erb and an eight-man boarding party which inexplicably left the Answer Tuesday morning.

Ten men were flown from Charlottetown, P.E.I., to the Macdonald by a defence department helicopter earlier today. More were brought from Gaspe.

Officials here said the plan was for the new additions to the police force to pick up federal court warrants in the hands of RCMP on the Macdonald and then proceed to the Answer.

Farmer Meets Consultant

Northumberland County task force consulting team member Earl Berger (right) punctuates a point in a brief discussion Tuesday with Murray Township's Vagn Lang, a farmer who runs about 60 horses on his 300-acre Grandview Farms. Mr. Lang says he supports some form of amalgamation of Murray with Trenton in the future. He made his opinion known to the consulting team during the public meeting aimed at eventually establishing a growth strategy for the county.

Murray Residents Question Need For Concentrated Population Growth

TRENTON — Some Murray Township residents are worried that good farm land will be-gobbled up by urban development and that a lack of growth in this area may force its residents to go further from their rural homes to find jobs.

The two concerns were among several expressed at Murray Centennial School, Tuesday during the seventh in a series of public meetings held by the Northumberland County Task Force.

It was conducted by the consulting team of the task force that aims to eventually produce a policy to guide population, urban and industrial growth in the county over the next 25 years.

At the school west of Trenton Tuesday, a portion of about 90 Murray township residents said they wanted their township to remain close to its present 6,000 population.

But a definite consensus was not formed as other concerns also emerged.

Township reeve Harry Lafferty said he'd like to see the area grow, but not into a city: "We can live with a little bit of growth," he said.

On the other hand, a six-month resident of the township, Maureen Chung of RR 1 Frankford. said she has sensed that its residents are satisfied with the status quo. But she said this is not possible and a compromise must be reached

Lack of growth, as study team director Peter Walker and several individuals pointed out, could force area residents to travel either to the other end of Northumberland or into Hastings County to jobs.

Northumberland as a dormitory or bedroom municipality is not being looked upon favorably by the task force, said Mr. Walker.

Vagn Lange, co-owner of Lange and Fetter Motors Ltd. in Trenton, said location of industry in the county's west end — around Port Hope-Cobourg — doesn't make sense: "I'm in the business of selling cars and I'd like to see people going up and down the roads but I'd like to see people at home too."

The team has been asking county residents over the past month if they want the municipality to grow to 77,000 or 125,000, or a maximum of 200,000 people. Whatever the increase in population, currently at 60,000 it would be concentrated either in one or two major centres, in a new community, or dispersed throughout the county.

Tuesday's meeting, requested by Murray council after a poor showing of township residents in Brighton in mid-February, was aimed at getting public reaction to the main interim proposals.

Several farmers expressed both concern over what they see is a potential freeze on their land and the possibility additional growth will mean the disappearance of their farms.

Team member Earl Berger offered no solutions to their questions. He said that far too many alternative solutions to the farmer's economic plight now are being offered to make any meaningful comments.

Area Pipers Part Of Florida Games

TRENTON — Twelve residents from the Belleville-Brighton area will be among members of the Cobourg Royal Canadian Legion Pipe Band who will participate in the Dunedin, Florida Highland Games and Festival later this month.

Glenn Stinson of RR 4, Trenton, band secretary, said Monday band members, families and friends will leave on a 47-passenger bus March 19 and return March 26.

He said the festival is a three-day annual event and the band worked for the past year raising money.

Trenton area representatives will be Mr. Stinson, bass drummer, drum sergeant John Weese of 23 Crown St., piper Murray Martin of RR 4, Trenton and piping teacher Linda Wilson.

The drum major is Fred Furmidge of 9 Linton Park Rd. in Belleville.

From Bancroft will be Karen Martin, a piper, and also a teacher at Quinte Secondary School.

Smithfield will be represented by well-known Scottish vocalist Gordon Tocher, piper Susan Taft and her brother Clayton, a drummer and drummer Roger Macdonald.

Attending from Brighton will be drummer Andrew Hope and piper Barbara Stillman.

While in Dunedin, band members will be the guests of Legion branch 144 of Tampa at its annual picnic, said Mr. Stinson.

Cabinet Shuffle Delays Approval Of Trenton's Request for Funds

TRENTON — A provincial housing ministry official in Toronto says he "fully expects" Trenton will know the fate of its application for $800,000 in Neighborhood Improvement Program (NIP) funds this week.

John Brown, the director of the community renewal branch, said Tuesday he anticipates "letters will be going out to the appropriate places" this week.

But whether Trenton is one "place" that has received federal and provincial government money, he declined to reveal.

In a telephone interview, Mr. Brown said the 1975 allocations have been "okayed" by the provincial municipal liaison committee, whose responsibility it is to distribute the $13-million available for the residential-area upgrading program in Ontario.

Approval of allocations came late in February, but announcements have been held up because Queen's Park has failed to receive a master agreement covering NIP from the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC), in Ottawa.

The master agreement due the first week of February, is now expected at any time and "you can appreciate that money will not flow until an agreement has been signed," said Mr. Brown.

The delay is the second faced by Trenton and other Ontario municipalities that applied for funds prior to the Dec. 1, 1974, deadline.

Originally, an announcement was expected at Queens Park Feb. 7 this year. However, the provincial cabinet shuffle by Premier Bill Davis Jan. 14 forced cancellation of a meeting at which NIP approvals were to be made.

The latest delay, said Mr. Brown, is due to changes in the criteria for NIP grants. No drastic changes are expected, merely refinements.

"I'm sure that they won't affect any 1975 allocations," he said.

Trenton's request falls in among applications from other Ontario municipalities that total $33-million, $20-million more than is available this year. Allocations are made according to comparative need.

Mr. Brown said "Some requests we looked at, and thought maybe, they would be better off in some other program." Others, he said, were refused because the municipal applicants had failed to do enough homework and did not fulfill the NIP criteria.

He would not say whether Trenton's request had fallen into either category.

ATHOL — A former Prince Edward County warden and past reeve of Athol Township, Earl Brummell of Cherry Valley, died suddenly Sunday night at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital.

A life-long resident of Athol, Mr. Brummell, 82, was active in municipal politics for a number of years.

He also served two terms as provincial returning officer for Prince Edward-Lennox riding and acted as campaign manager for Norris Whitney during two elections in the riding.

Mr. Brummell was a past secretary of the Prince Edward-Lennox Conservative Association.

He was also a prominent supporter of hockey and softball in Prince Edward County and was interested in progressive agricultural methods.

Snider Named Head Of County Orangemen

PICTON — Floyd Snider was elected county master of the Prince Edward County Orange Lodge at its recent annual meeting here.

Other members of the 1975 executive are Curtis Spence, deputy county master; Edward Rolston, secretary; Kenneth Wood, treasurer; James Colton, chaplain; Tim Halloran, first lecturer; Curtis Spence, second lecturer; Harry Wasmund, third lecturer; and Fred Williams, marshal. Past county master is Fred Newcombe.

James Breen of Ontario East in Kingston, a past provincial grand master, spoke to the gathering on Unity and Brotherly Love.

He noted there are attempts to lessen the influence of the British connection in Canada and mentioned such things as the flag, the national anthem, the monarchy and other symbols of British traditions.

Mr. Breen added Canada's first prime minister, Sir John A. Macdonald, was an enthusiastic Orangeman and believer in the British connection.

It was announced the annual July commemoration will be held in Belleville this year. Plans for the annual county church parade and the commemoration's date and other details will be decided at the May semi-annual meeting.

Picton Council Balks At Pool Site Selection

PICTON — Picton town council has refused at this time to recommend a site for Prince Edward's proposed community swimming pool in view of the protests of residents living near the fairgrounds, one suggested location.

This week, council received a petition signed by 27 area residents who declared they are "srongly opposed" to construction of a pool at the rear of the fairgrounds grandstand.

Councillors agreed no site recommendations should be made at this time because of the protests of homeowners near the fairgrounds.

Ed Rae, chairman of the swimming pool committee, has stated committee members have decided to request Prince Edward county council's property and supply committee to propose a site.

Three locations, the county fairgrounds, property adjoining the county home for the aged, and land owned by the county adjacent to the county museum have been suggested by the pool committee.

Picton deputy-reeve Larry Richardson, chairman of town council's recreation and parks committee observed that support of the pool project may be withdrawn if sites are steadily protested.

"If our council and the county don't come up with something, it's going to die and if it dies this time, it'll die forever," he remarked.

Three Youths Charged In Post Office Theft

AMELIASBURG — Three Quinte area youths were charged Tuesday with robbery following the theft of $42 from the post office here.

Ontario Provincial Police said one youth entered the hamlet's post office and held a hunting knife to the chest of clerk, Ida Sills, while two others waited outside in a car.

Picton OPP were alerted and Constable Ronald Jeffery apprehended a car on Highway 33 about 20 minutes after the incident.

Constable Jeffrey said a hunting knife with a six-inch blade was found unsheathed in the back seat of the car.

Charged are Philip Vince, 17, of Trenton, Jack Tripp, 17, of Hillier township and Steve Archer, 16, of Trenton.

The Ameliasburg incident was the fourth in less than a week in the district in which the person in charge of a store had been threatened at knifepoint before the thief made off with the store's receipts.

Picton Reeve In Hospital

PICTON — Reeve of Picton, Ross Cronkwright, is a patient in Kingston General Hospital where he is expected to remain for several weeks.

Mayor Donald King this week told town council of Reeve Cronkwright's illness and councillors were appointed temporarily to fill his seat in upcoming committee sessions.

Reeve Cronkwright was unable to attend the February sessions of both town and county councils.

Exercise Anyone?

Table-tennis anyone? No, not the tame "ping-pong" variety which is about all most of us can summon in our lethargic, sedentary society — if we play at all — but the fast highly-skilled game so long beloved of Europeans and, in more recent years, Orientals.

Indeed the game has long been dominated by Chinese and Japanese players, but a Hungarian, Istvan Jonyer has just broken this cycle by winning the men's world title in Calcutta.

Shades of the great Victor Barna, a Hungarian who was top dog back in the forties. Jonyer, only the second European to win the men's title since 1953 (the last was Stellan Bengtsson who won in 1971) defeated Yugoslavia's Anton Stipancic. The women's title was won by Yung Sun Kim, described as a tiny 18-year-old North Korean girl.

So table tennis takes a lot of stamina, as well as finesse and it's a pity there isn't more of it played at the local level. It could help correct the image of Canadians as a people who increasingly are "sitting" themselves into poor physical and mental health. This, from a recent survey of 1,000 Toronto men and women, showed that their hearts and lungs were in poorer condition than those of 1,200 tested in Saskatoon two years ago — and that the latter themselves are below average fitness!

It's a variation on an old Canadian story. There are not many of us playing table tennis, let alone jogging, regularly. Isn't it time we were?

Touched Many Lives

The tragic-happy saga of Heidi Biggs of Belleville, Illinois, is over. Tragic because she was taken so early in life. Happy because in her last days she touched the hearts of so many others who responded to her courage.

Millions have come to know of Heidi, from the day she appeared — a dark-haired and beautiful youngster of 14 — in news pictures last year. She was seen reading a Bible to her small brother. Heidi was not expected to survive beyond Christmas, but thanks to the efforts of a Sudbury businessman, Russell Penny, and public contributions to a fund he started, she was able to have a holiday in Hawaii.

Contemplating such circumstances it may be easier for the rest of us to pursue our lives in a more optimistic light, eschewing the bitter word, or the ready complaint, or the show of superiority that come so easily in community life, either as individuals or as a group.

War and Poverty

Beyond the story of Heidi Biggs, on the wider world stage, there is the continuing tragedy of Vietnam and Cambodia, and of the civilian population there.

In the latter country in particular — and in the beleagured capital of Phnom Penh in particular — women and children are in the path of deadly rocket fire as much as the defence forces.

Newspaper pictures show shattered and pain-wracked bodies of women and children in the streets just after the rockets strike. And as if this were not harrowing enough, there are the reports — as from the New York Times' Sydney C. Schanberg — of growing starvation, of kids "dying who should not die . . . dying in our arms," as a World Vision doctor in the city put it.

The hunger that has been affecting parts of Africa is a terrible thing, but in Cambodia there is the added horror of children exposed from birth onward to the obscenities of war and the depredations of a merciless enemy. There are reports for example of the massacre by insurgents of about 1000 refugees in northwest Cambodia.

These days more than ever, and despite the ravages of inflation at home, there is a need to contribute money to the agencies which seek to bring relief to these starving and oppressed people overseas.

In Cambodia, Marie-Eloise Charet 23, and her 20-year-old sister Anna 20, of Montreal, operate a centre for abandoned and orphaned children numbering more than 400. They deserve our admiration and whatever assistance may be extended from here at home, and not forgetting the difficulties faced by people in various other regions of the world.

Pipeline Hearing

Americans Might Share in Gas from Canadian Arctic

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The Berger hearing on Canadian Arctic Gas Ltd's application for a 2,200-mile natural gas pipeline has many implications, not the least being an international one, how it will affect our relations with the United States.

The assumption in that remarks is that ultimately the Canadian government, whether it heeds Judge Berger's final recommendations or not, could approve the pipeline proposal and set in motion a scheme which promises American users some of the gas throughput from the finished pipeline.

The Berger hearing in Yellowknife, capital of the Northwest Territories where much of the proposed pipeline would be situated, began with an overview of the history, culture and geographical structure of the Canadian North. This technique is unique in the history of public hearings over huge developmental projects.

And while it concentrated on national issues of ownership, native peoples' land rights, environmental hazards, it also emphasized the long term international implications of the pipeline scheme.

Already there are many Canadians who are suspicious of the scheme on international basis, not only because they do not like the predominance of American companies in the 27-member Canadian Arctic Gas study consortium, but because they don't know what their Canadian gas export estimates are going to be.

This is because the consortium, which has spent $70 million on its huge submission to the National Energy Board has not yet released figures on its estimate of the amount of gas which would go to the U.S. and equally important at what price?

Everyone knows of course that the big Canada gas pipeline is planned to link up with one building in Alaska and would therefore be used to move American gas through Canada to U.S. outlets.

But I think we should be disturbed about the extent of this arrangement and more crucially to what extent the ultimate domestic price of gas will be influenced by how much we think we can charge the Americans.

We should also be disturbed by the assuring statements from Messrs. William Wilder and Vernon Horte, chairman and president respectively of the Canadian Arctic Gas group, about the effect of the staggering investment required to build the pipeline, on our balance of payments in the late '70s.

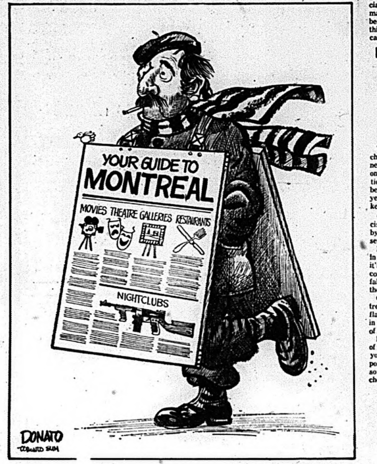
Even if a lot of this ends up as debt financing as Mr. Horte indicates, a scheme once estimated at $5 billion, now said to cost $7 billion, a figure which could easily reach $10 billion by the time an approval is obtained, could still upset money markets here.

Moreover there will be the tremendous pressures on certain industries, especially the primary steel mills, to supply the huge needs of the pipeline under construction. Mr. Horte says our steel industry could probably supply about 50 per cent of the 48-inch pipe planned for 2,200 miles.

The rest of it presumably would come from the United States. But what of the other very substantial future Canadian requirements for steel mill output and other products going to the Arctic pipeline?

How much of these would it sop up, adding to the present chronic lag in construction and home-building during the late 70s?

We should think about future economic balance as much as we do about the ecological one.



PM's Retinue of 90 at $1½ Million Compares with Dief's 12 at $50,000

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — In his six years as Prime Minister, John Diefenbaker made it a point of pride and now 12 years later insists on the accuracy of the figures — to run his office with a staff of only 12 and an annual cost of $50,000.

He recalls — and he had a keen personal interest in it — that Prime Minister Lester Pearson, who followed him into power and the East Block, increased the staff to about 15 and the annual payroll to $75,000.

Prime Minister Trudeau's office has reported to the Commons — in reply to Opposition questions — that the staff now numbers 90, and the payroll runs around an annual $1,500,000.

The increase has been staggering, up 50 per cent from some $900,000 in only the last three years.

The big build-up was almost instant from the day Pierre Trudeau took over in 1968.

He assembled a whole new power structure in his office — it became known, familiarly, as it still is, as the "PMO" — and costly as it was, it failed him perilously close to the point of defeat in the 1972 election.

It was a "power elite," warned Opposition House Leader Ged Baldwin at the time, and he saw it as a "real and present danger" to the parliamentary system.

But as it turned out, it did the Prime Minister more damage than it did Parliament.

The power brokers in the inner sanctum of the "PMO," overbearing in their supremacy of authority, isolated the Prime Minister from the Cabinet, insulated him from the mandarins of the senior public service, and went, as far as they dared to cut him off from the Liberal caucus and party organization.

The political advice he got from his elitists in the "PMO" was disastrously, outrageously bad, and after his near-defeat three years ago, he dismantled the staff.

Now it is happening all over again — a re-run of the 1968-1972 "Era of the Palace Guard" — and it is even more expensive, up that 50 per cent in cost to a million and a half.

It is causing comment, concern, and resentment among the Liberal parliamentarians, including some members of Cabinet.

It is provoking expressions of indignation and outrage in the Opposition ranks, paralyzed as both parties are by their lame-duck leadership.

And only the next election — it could be sooner than you think — will tell how the tax-and-inflation victimized taxpayers feel about it.

The building of the new "power-train PMO" began with the appointment last year of Jack Austin as the Prime Minister's principal secretary and chief-of-staff.

Austin, a former West Coast mining promoter and one-time Liberal candidate, was Deputy Minister of Energy Mines and Resources when he was drafted to restructure the "PMO" at $1,000 a week.

In turn, he recruited his officers from $40,000 down to $25,000.

The sergeants and corporals came at around $20,000.

And the troops, the rank and file secretaries, clerks and stenographers, rate the average $6,000 to $10,000 in the public service.

But this time there are some fancy touches, consultants that come, like economist Joel Bell, at $200 a day.

He, along with the new "Group of Six" economists who seem to be crowding out Finance Minister Turner and his department as key financial advisers, guide the Prime Minister — says his office in a report to Parliament — "from time to time on economic policy."

While the pay range is wide — from Jack Austin's $1,000 a week and Joel Bell's $200 a day, down to the $6,000 to $10,000 for the hired help — it's pretty rich.

It averages out, across the whole span of the new super staff of 90, to $320 a week, or $16,600 a year.

So what? you murmur as a taxpayer.

So nothing, except that Dief did it with 12 people and $50,000 a year, and Pearson for not much more.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

The Moira River Conservation Authority plans to plant 100,000 trees on its property this year — which will cover most of the 2,540 acres of land the Authority has purchased to date.

The Belleville Public Utilities Commission will be asked to review the present street lighting with the view of improving lighting conditions on certain streets and in poorly lighted areas.

30 YEARS AGO

March 5, 1945.

Inactive for the past three years because of the enlistment of a large number of its members into the armed services, the Belleville Y's Men's club will again become active — it has been announced through Mr. J. Shortt, "Y" secretary.

At yesterday's blood donor clinic held by the Kiwanis Club, there were 161 donors, 145 of them from outside points. Only 27 city donors were present, the greater majority being women.

40 YEARS AGO

March 5, 1935.

Members of the Belleville Young Canada Club, at their first open assembly held last evening completed preliminary arrangements for the immediate organization of the club in various wards of the city. The meeting also unanimously favored the holding of a convention of Conservatives of the riding at the earliest possible date to name a candidate to represent South Hastings at the coming Federal election.

Well over 5 million tiny insects which will be used by Canada during the coming summer to combat the ravages of the destructive kind are quartered at the present time at the Dominion Entomological Laboratory on East Dundas Street. More such insects are being received weekly from abroad.

50 YEARS AGO

March 5, 1925.

While other cities rocked with seismic tremors on Saturday night at nine twenty o'clock, Belleville was saved from extreme fibration by the limestone foundation underlying this part of the province. The origin of the earthquake is now declared to be in Logan's Fault, a restless rock formation extending from St. Lawrence Basin to Alabama. Eastern Quebec experienced tremors for more than twelve hours.

Mayor Hanna, M.P. for West Hastings has announced that the Retail Merchants Association of Canada, 400 strong, will hold a convention in Belleville in June.

Era of Older Cars and New Tires

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

When the time comes to choose between buying a shiny new car or sticking with the old one, an unusually high proportion of Canadian motorists have been deciding to get another year or two out of the old clunker.

Chances are that this first decision is followed immediately by a second—to invest in a new set of tires.

Even if the thought of trading in has never crossed your mind, it's a good idea to check the condition of your tires—and it's false economy to try to squeeze the last mile out of them.

Old tires with little or no tread are prone to blow-outs, flats and skids that could result in damage exceeding the price of four new tires.

If you decide that the course of prudence would be to replace your tires, there are a few basic points in tire-buying to be absorbed before you make your choice.

The tire has two components. There is the tread, the part with the wiggly lines that comes in contact with the road—and with the snow, ice, slush, rain, grease and so on.

The carcass is everything except the tread. It can be classified by the type of ply (a ply is a layer of rubber-coated parallel cords, generally of rayon, nylon or polyester). The tire is made up of two, four or even more layers of plies.

Here are the three types of ply that you will have to choose among:

—Bias ply. The cords run on a bias or angle of 35 degrees to the centre line, with the successive layers criss-crossing one another.

Bias-ply tires have the lowest initial cost, and are usually recommended for cars used chiefly for around town driving.

—Bias belted tires are similar, but with the addition of stabilizing belts (of such materials as steel, fibreglass, polyester or rayon) as wide as the tread, to reduce friction with the road and provide better traction and support.

These are recommended for mixed city-highway driving and their price is relatively moderate.

—Radial ply. Here the cords run from rim to rim, at right angles to the centre line. They, too, have belts to stabilize the tread and increase gas mileage.

The initial price is highest on radial tires, but for the motorist who drives long distances at high speeds, they are probably best and also cheapest on a per-mile basis.

Tire sizes are identified by such figures as 78-14. The 78—or 70, 60 or 50—represents the ratio of tire height to tire width. The 14—or 13 or 15—represents the size of the wheel's rim, in inches.

Tires are also described in terms such as four plus two—which simply means that the tire has four plies and two belts.

It is usually worthwhile to compare prices before buying. In your comparison, remember to include the extra costs—installation, valves, wheel-balancing.

Economics of The Day Force Some Politicians Back into Business

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The Liberals are ending up in a strange situation.

Apparently from opinion polls and other indications they are on a crest.

Yet at the same time they are losing some of their best members.

Jim Bullbrook of Sarnia confirmed some time ago that he wouldn't be running in another election.

Then word got out that Donald Patterson, the 10-year veteran from Essex South would be retiring with the next vote.

And now Donald Deacon, member for York Centre, deputy leader of the party and leadership candidate against Bob Nixon, has said that he also will be dropping out with the next election.

The 54-year-old Deacon could be the biggest loss of all.

Patterson is an intelligent man who has steadily done his home work.

Bullbrook has had moments of brilliance.

But Deacon has probably been the most dedicated man in the entire Liberal caucus.

He has travelled the province constantly, has dug up candidates and generally has worked, worked and worked.

Oddly the same reason—money—appears to be behind the retirement of these three outstanding members.

Patterson is a merchant who runs general stores and who probably has spent more on representing his constituency than he ever took out of his job as an MPP.

Bullbrook has such a successful law practice, together with a growing family, that he simply can't afford to be a member any longer.

Deacon was a member of his family's brokerage firm and immediately gave up his partnership on becoming elected.

Since then he has been living on his capital and with inflation, plus the substantial chunk of money he put into his leadership campaign, this has shrunk.

His case is simple. He just has to go back to the business world and make some money.

It is a shame. These are three of the best members in the house.

Visit of Cabinet Members

Did They Pay Only LIP Service?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Ontario citizens should all be very enthusiastic over the recent Provincial Secretary of Resources Development's hearing of some 60 or more briefs on tourism and environment in the Eastern Ontario area before the eight (8) Ministers of the Resources Group in Belleville on February 17 and 18, and in fact we compliment the Ontario Government for this obvious move to receive what should be valued input to the Government from the citizens of this area.

However, if instead of having "a listening Government" and if all briefs receive the same real treatment as was obvious by the closed eye and ear reply by the Minister of Natural Resources to the Papineau Lake Cottagers Association presentation of their brief, then in fact only lip service and all its implications at this time, is all that is really being paid to the eastern Ontario citizens. You may wish to publish the attached letter to the Provincial Secretary of Resources and Development of February 26 in your letters to the editor column.

D. K. RIVERS,
Vice President,
Papineau Lake Cottagers Association,
Cambridge (Galt).

LETTERS

Cottagers and Park Development

The following is the text of a letter which has been addressed to Allan Grossman, provincial secretary of Resources and Development, concerning the proposed park at Papineau Lake.

I would like to refute the Honorable Mr. Bernier's statement made during the presentation of our brief in Belleville on February 18, to the effect that Mrs. Davis was recently in his office seeking a settlement, which left the impression at the meeting that the Davis family wished to sell the property to the Dept. of Natural Resources, being directly opposite to the statements in our brief.

Enclosed is a copy of Mrs. Myrtle Davis' letter to the Honorable Mr. Bernier dated January 20, as published in the Bancroft Times on February 12, and a copy of an article in The Belleville Intelligencer of February 11, quoting various sections of this same letter which is most emphatic that they (the Davis family) do not wish to sell the farm, but only wish to sell some of the beach property for cottage development, all as outlined in our brief. Therefore, expropriation will mean a very high cost to the Ontario taxpayer for an aesthetically inferior crowded and restricted location on Papineau Lake compared to the no cost crown land surrounding the adjacent, undeveloped Bark Lake and the very superior site at our suggested location on Sand Bay.

We find it extremely difficult to understand this attitude and can only assume considerable political pressure is being applied by the local MLA, Mr. Clarke Rollins, to have this park located within Hastings County whatever the extreme cost to the taxpayer, directly opposing the local council's wishes, and completely ignoring the facts regarding alternate locations such as, in our opinion, the near perfect low cost, expandable, wide open, natural setting of the suggested Sand Bay location, a site that could provide a park facility second to none in Ontario and one that every Ontario citizen and camper could point to with pride.

We also trust and hope that the other 60 or more briefs presented at Belleville on February 17 and 18 will receive some consideration, rather than the closed ear turn down we received at the meeting from Mr. Bernier stating he had not read our brief and obviously without any consultation with the other member Ministers of your Resources Group that were present, defeating the advertised purpose of the Belleville presentations.

We would appreciate a reply from you, after your review as promised, regarding the points raised in our presentation.

Women's Year 'Valid'- But for Other Nations

HALIFAX (CP) — Canada does not need an international women's year for itself, says Sylva Gelber, director of the Women's Bureau, a federal agency connected to the labor department.

However, Miss Gelber said the concept is valid internationally. There was a direct relationship between the status of women and economic prosperity. In countries where there is starvation and high population growth, women are "in virtual slavery."

These basic problems made discrimination in employment and social treatment of women in Canada of little importance by comparison.

Miss Gelber said her agency will have no special International Women's Year projects except expansion of existing programs.

She said the bureau was set up to promote a change in attitude toward the status of women in the work force and provide analytical information.

Miss Gelber, in Halifax for a symposium on women in education, said declaring 1975 International Women's Year, provides a pretext for countries to upgrade the role of women in their societies.

She said she hopes the last quarter of the 20th century will bring great social change in economic, social, political and cultural fields.

Universities have a crucial role to play in changing public attitudes towards women and to persuade female students "to follow educational goals more consistent with their talents and ambitions rather than be guided, as women still are, by social limitations.

The response from business to the bureau's aims had been encouraging. "This is an area I didn't expect a response from so soon."

The federal civil service harbors the same attitudes as the rest of Canadian society and change has been as difficult, she said. Middle management remained the greatest obstacle to career aspirations of women in the civil service.

Those who arrived at that level had done so with hard work. Men felt threatened by the added competition of women.

For that reason, few women had reached the upper levels of management and only one had risen to the deputy-minister level—Sylvia Ostry of Statistics Canada.

Dr. Morton Shulman, NDP member of the Ontario Legislature for Toronto High Park, takes a back seat as his wife, Gloria, does a little belly-dancing. (CP Photo)

'I'm Really Such a Boring Person'

TORONTO (CP) — Gloria Shulman is unhappy about the pistol her husband carries around with him in response to threats against his life. It spoils the lines of his well-cut suits.

The turbulent public life of Dr. Morton Shulmann crusading New Democratic Party member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto High Park, ends at the front door of the Shulman home. Mrs. Shulman loses no sleep worrying about sinister Mafia figures, hostile union leaders or angry government officials.

"A long time ago, we decided that if Morty was hurt it would be by some isolated nut," she said. "And I think people are really beginning to appreciate his contribution."

She said her goal has always been to make their home as happy and pleasant a refuge as possible for her husband and their two children. She spends much of her time alone, looking after the house and garden.

"I have not sacrificed anything. You choose. You choose your goals and live by them. You cannot grow as much in my kind of marriage as you would if you struck out on your own but I like being a comfort."

Their son Geoffrey is studying medicine at the University of Toronto and their daughter Dianne is articling with a Toronto law firm.

Outside her home, Mrs. Shulman appears before the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board to represent claimants living in her husband's High Park constituency. And recently she graduated from a Toronto belly-dancing school. But such achievements leave her unimpressed.

"I'm really such a boring person, very ordinary," she said. "The whole thing is quite amazing. It never quite sinks in that Morty is a public figure."

Share Facilities

EDMONTON (CP) — Subject to approval by the Alberta education department, the Roman Catholic archdiocese of Edmonton and the city's separate school board have agreed to build the city's first church within a school. The $32,000 addition to St. Hilda's separate school will be the third shared facility in the province.

Ann Landers

Booze Makes Hubby a Lecher

Dear Ann Landers: I am just now recovering from the "party season." The depression lasted five weeks. Please tell me what to do.

My husband and I have been married 11 years. We have two beautiful children. I love him very much, and I believe he loves me. But whenever we go where liquor is served, he becomes one of those obnoxious lecherous drunks who can't keep his hands off other women. They can be 15 years older than he is, ugly as sin, and still he makes overt, outrageous passes. I am humiliated to death.

I know it's the booze. He never behaves like such a fool when he's sober. I've tried to talk to him about it but he never remembers a thing—says I'm exaggerating or making things up. Any help?—Dying Inside

Dear Dying: Of course it's the booze and there isn't anything you can do about it. The guy should never touch a drop.

One of these days an irate husband might give Romeo a fat lip or open his head with a bottle. That may hasten him on his way to permanent sobriety, which would solve his problem—and yours.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you printed a letter from a woman who was reluctant to have her teeth extracted because she was afraid it would interfere with her love life. Her letter was followed by several readers who urged her to go ahead and do it — "better to have dentures than rotten teeth," etc.

I dare you to print the other side. There is one, you know. Haven't you read the ads or been in a drugstore lately? How could you fail to see the dozens of adhesive agents—powders, pastes, and liners for sale—all promising to help make dentures stick?

Sure, some dentures are fine, but a great many are not. I've spent over $3,000 trying to get dentures I can eat with and I'm not exactly rolling in money. I had to go without necessities to pay those dental bills. I finally gave up last year after consulting a professor of dentistry at a well-known university.

I don't have much to laugh about these days, but when I do laugh, my uppers fall down. I'd give my right arm to have my own teeth back again. A good dentist can do a lot to save natural teeth. Mine didn't even try. He said "You'll be better off with dentures. They're cheaper, too."

Funny how people hate to spend money on their teeth—until it's too late. Then they'll spend a fortune on plastic ones that slide around, make sores and cause nothing but trouble.—Another Witness

Dear A.W.: Dr. Paul Goldhaber, dean of dental medicine and professor of periodontology at Harvard, says:

"Don't give up. Try another dentist. It's worth the effort."

Dr. Goldhaber also said people should insist that their dentist make every effort to save as many natural teeth as possible.

One of the principal problems with extractions is that the bone sometimes continues to resorb and the dentures then loosen. Another problem is that certain patients have a psychological hang-up about their dentures and they cannot adjust to them—no matter what. Good luck to you.

Doris Clark

For Every Child of Her Own Mother Adopts Two in India

Dear Doris: I am a happy expectant mother, but have had comments made to me that I was not helping the world overpopulation. I wouldn't mind if these people took the money they saved on having one or no children, and supported four or five hungry children, but no! They spend it on themselves.

Nothing seems so ridiculous to me as seeing a woman on TV, in a $200 dress, with a $50 hairdo, and sipping an expensive alcoholic beverage, with soft, manicured hands (that never dug in the dirt in their lives) saying how great she was because she had no children to help solve overpopulation.

Children take a lot of care and time. The only person she was thinking of was herself. If they really want to help, I suggest they adopt a hungry child in a desolate country, for every child they do not have themselves.

We are not rich, but for every child we have, we adopt two in India. Perhaps that's not much, but it's a start. I know that overpopulation is a problem, but having fewer children is not the answer, if we only turn the money right back to ourselves. Sharing is the answer.

Just a Mother.

Dear Just: You certainly have a point there. There are people who make a virtue of their own look at life, regardless of the underlying motive. This is commonly called rationalization.

If you have studied the situation with regard to the world's population, there is no need for me to tell you how many children to have. And if you are contributing to the needs of less fortunate children than yours, you are indeed sharing in a real way.

Dear Doris: I am still trying to get the rest of my readers (school books) from the period of about 1920 to 1945.

I need Mary, John and Peter (grade one), Garden of Stories (grade two), and the grade five and six readers which were Book One and Book Two of the same name. Something like "Pathways of Learning" was the title. I have several others of the same vintage.

There are many beautiful poems in these books which they don't have in today's readers. I read them to my children and they love them.

Barbara C.

Dear Barbara: Readers will let us know what they have for you, and I will let you know when they do..

(Write to Doris for help with that puzzling decision.)

30-Minute Meals: Economical and Nutritious

Many publications offer advice on how to prepare quick meals. The trouble is, from our point of view, you are asked to use expensive — and often tasteless — convenience foods. The ones, of course, with little nutrition.

It's our contention, on the other hand, that there are many 30-minute meals you can prepare which are not only fast but cheap and nutritious.

DINNER 1

Menu: Potatoes and eggs, spinach, celery with cheese, bread and butter or margarine.

Shopping list: eggs, fresh spinach, cream cheese (four oz.) celery, whole wheat bread. Have on hand: potatoes, onion, parsley, processed or cheddar cheese.

In the morning: leave cream cheese out of refrigerator to soften.

Potatoes and Eggs

1 ¼ cups diced raw potatoes
two tbsp. margarine
¼ cup diced onion
¼ cup parsley, chopped
thyme, salt and pepper to taste six eggs, beaten
three tbsp. water

Saute onion and potatoes in margarine. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over potatoes. Cook slowly. When nearly set, place under hot broiler for one minute.

Celery and Cheese

¼ cup grated cheddar cheese four ounces cream cheese salt, pepper
paprika
celery

Mix grated cheese with cream cheese; add salt and pepper to taste. Fill celery sticks with mixture, sprinkle with paprika.

* * *

This dinner, for four, costs about 42 cents per person to make at current prices.

DINNER II

Menu: Beef and mushrooms, salad, french bread with butter or margarine.

Shopping list: small can whole tomatoes, ½ lb. ground beef, ¼ lb. small whole mushrooms, one can red kidney beans, frozen green beans, french bread. Have on hand: bread crumbs, oil, vinegar onions, celery.

Beef and Mushrooms

½ lb ground beef
¼ lb mushrooms kidney beans with juice
one cup quartered onions one cup celery, chopped
one small can tomatoes

Saute ground beef with onions and celery for two minutes. Add remaining ingredients with salt and pepper to taste. Simmer 20 minutes.

Bean Salad

Boil green beans for two minutes; drain and chill in refrigerator. Just before serving, toss with oil, vinegar, a pinch of sugar and favourite seasonings.

* * *

This nutritious dinner serves four to five persons generously and costs just over 60 cents each.

DINNER III

Menu: Tuna croquettes with parsley sauce; peas; cheesed noodles; sliced tomatoes.

Shopping list: large can tuna, frozen peas, tomatoes. Have on hand: breadcrumbs, onion, celery, carrot, parsley.

Tuna Croquettes.

one cup dry breadcrumbs
½ cup milk
one large can tuna
one tbsp. minced onion
½ cup finely chopped celery
one cup finely shredded carrot
salt and pepper to taste

Heat oven to 400 degrees Soften bread crumbs in milk or use fresh crumbs. Add undrained tuna and remaining ingredients. Mix well. Shape into eight small croquettes. Place on greased baking sheet. Bake 15 minutes. Meanwhile, make sauce: Combine two tbsp margarine, two tbsp flour and one cup milk to make white sauce. Add ¼ cup finely minced parsley.

* * *

Serve with noodles with butter and sprinkled with parmesan; boiled green peas and sliced fresh tomatoes.

This meal costs about 62 cents per person and serves four.

DINNER IV

Menu: Veal chops; rice and peas; oregano, tomatoes.

Shopping list: 1½ lbs. shoulder veal chops, frozen peas, fresh tomatoes. Have on hand: carrots, rice, thyme, basil, onion or chicken boullion, oil, wine vinegar, garlic, onion, parsley.

In the morning: Combine diced onion, chopped garlic bud, and boil in wine vinegar to make about ½ cup of marinade. Place chops on large piece of aluminum foil and pour marinade over. Turn chops to coat and wrap tightly in foil. Refrigerate all day.

Broiled Veal Chops.

Remove chops from marinade and pat to dry. Broil under preheated broiler for about five minutes on each side, about seven inches from source of heat. Do not salt meat before broiling.

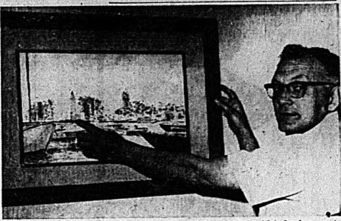
Peppered Lamb Chops with New Potatoes



Sam Artt points out city hall in his painting of Belleville's harbor.

Artist's Sales Go to Charity

Showing his work for the first time since he began painting a year ago, Samuel Artt has an exhibit hanging in the upstairs foyer outside the main art gallery at the Corby Library.

Continuing for two weeks, the show is entirely made up of oil paintings, two of which are immediately recognizable as Quinte scenes.

A native of Belfast, Ireland, who has lived in Belleville for the past seven years working for the Children's Aid Society, Mr. Artt is a self-taught artist who paints largely from his imagination and memory.

"I like trying different combinations of color," he says of his work. "I also particularly enjoy painting sea scapes."

What makes Mr. Artt's hobby unique is his purpose in selling his work.

"I charge between $35 and $95 for the paintings," he explains, "but I just keep what I need to pay for supplies out of that. The rest of the money is sent to an organization that helps needy children, called World Vision."

There is also an exhibit of Mr. Artt's painting currently being displayed in the Plaza Hobby Centre at the Belleville Plaza.

Vitamin Source

VICTORIA (CP) — Frozen or canned orange juice, vitaminized apple juice, canned tomatoes, tomato juice, raw cabbage and raw turnip are among the least expensive food sources of vitamin C, says the nutrition service of the British Columbia department of health. Cabbage and turnip are good sources only when eaten raw because cooking greatly destroys their vitamin C content.

Joan Fielden tells how:

Joan Fielden,
Dominion Home Economist Consultant
Don Nichol, Meat Manager

One of the most popular meats we can buy is ground beef. It's delicious, economical and nutritious. And there are endless ways to serve it. Like beef loaves, patties, meat balls, pies, spaghetti with meat sauce, chilli con carne and lasagne, to name a few of the favourites. There are also different types of ground beef that you can buy. For instance, regular ground beef or hamburg is generally the most economical. It's good for patties, hamburgers, meat balls. Meat that's labelled "Lean Ground Meat" is more expensive. And that's because it contains no more than 15% fat, whereas regular ground beef contains no more than 30% fat. Lean ground meat makes excellent meat loaves and casseroles. For this week's recipe, I'd like to show you how to make meat balls with a difference.

Curried Meat Balls

(Serves 6)

1 pound ground beef
¾ cup finely chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
¾ cup soft bread crumbs
1 beaten egg
¼ cup tomato juice
2 tablespoons fat

1. Mix beef, onion and seasonings. Add egg and tomato juice.
2. Form into 1-inch balls.
3. Brown meat balls in fat until done (about 10 minutes).
4. Remove from fat and drain.

Sauce
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
1½ cups peeled diced apples
1 tablespoon curry powder
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 10-ounce can beef consomme
¾ cup water
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon lemon rind
1 tablespoon lemon juice

1. Drain all but 1 tablespoon fat from pan.
2. Sauté onion, celery and apple in fat until onion is transparent. Add curry powder and cook 1 minute.
3. Stir in flour, salt and pepper. Gradually add consommé and water.
4. Stir and cook until smooth and thick.
5. Add remaining ingredients. Cover and simmer 1 hour. Add meat balls and simmer 30 minutes more. Serve with hot rice.

The following chart will serve as a guideline to keeping ground beef.

MY GUIDE TO KEEPING GROUND BEEF

DO	DON'T
DO keep ground beef refrigerated.	DON'T thaw ground beef at room temperature, thaw overnight in the refrigerator.
DO rewrap ground beef before freezing in freezer paper, plastic or foil to prevent any loss of moisture or change in flavour.	DON'T refreeze thawed raw ground beef—if it is absolutely necessary to refreeze, cook it and then freeze it. Remember if meat has been frozen once it is better to cook it and then freeze it, rather than refreeze it.
DO use fresh ground beef within 1-3 days of purchase.
DO store raw ground beef no longer than 3-months in the freezer at 0°F.
DO store cooked beef dishes such as chili, meat loaves and sauces no more than 3-months in the freezer—this will guarantee best flavour and appearance.	DON'T serve ground beef raw. Cook to the medium, will-done stage until the pink colour has almost disappeared to ensure that all harmful bacteria is destroyed.

CP News Roundup

Paupers' Meal Urged For Prince

OTTAWA (CP) — Royalty would be treated to a pauper's meal if city alderman Georges Bedard had his way.

Mr. Bedard suggested Monday that the city cancel a planned $15,000 luncheon for Prince Charles when he visits here April 21 and plan instead a meal of soup and crackers.

Ald. Bedard introduced the motion, narrowly defeated by an eight-to-six vote, citing people "suffering starvation in some of the world's developing countries."

Ald. Joe Quinn termed the proposal a speech against the Royal Family.

"It's despicable to speak against the Royal Family . . . We in this country are part of the British Empire."

"We should be glad to contribute to a visit by the Queen or the Prince," he said. "The $15,000 amounts to a nickel apiece for each citizen."

Plants Close

MONTREAL (CP) — Microsystems International Ltd. announced Tuesday its two plants in Ottawa and Penang, Malaysia will be closed following financial difficulties which have plagued the company since its formation in 1969.

A review is underway to investigate future areas of activity for the corporation, 88-per-cent controlled by Northern Electric Co. Ltd.

Plan TV Forum

TORONTO (CP) —Metropolitan Toronto residents will have a chance to participate in a type of home and school meeting Thursday night—in their own living rooms.

The 33,000-member Ontario Seconday School Teachers Federation (OSSTF), in conjunction with Channel 19, the Toronto station of the Ontario Educational Communications Authority, is sponsoring jointly a television special devoted entirely to the future of secondary school education.

The program follows up on a series of community forums OSSTF sponsored in five Ontario cities—Sudbury, Windsor, London Ottawa and Thunder Bay.

Auto Sales Record

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Record vehicle sales for February were reported Tuesday by General Motors of Canada and Chrysler Canada and record car sales by Ford of Canada and American Motors (Canada).

General Motors said in Oshawa, Ont., it sold 34,414 vehicles last month.

New car sales of 26,326 were 10.3 per cent higher than February sales in 1974 and 4.9 per cent higher than the record of 25,092 in 1968. Truck sales of 8,088 were down 8.6 per cent from 1974 but were the second highest ever.

Last Body Removed

LONDON (AP) — Recovery crews removed the mutilated body of the engineer from his crushed driver's cab during the night, bringing the final death toll in London's worst subway disaster to 41, London Transport officials said.

Fifteen other bodies were removed from the train earlier Tuesday. The first three coaches of the train were telescoped when it ran past a station in the financial district last Friday and slammed into a stone wall.

Remanded for Month

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peter Ian Wood, 22, of Lindsay, Ont. was remanded for a month for psychiatric assessment when he appeared in court Tuesday on five charges of attempted murder.

Wood is accused of seeking to kill Richard Smith, 22, of North Bay, Ont.; Christopher Dilly, 22, of Toronto; Arthur Skolnik, 21, of Sillery, Que.; Paul Alexander Visosky, 20, of Toronto, and Yves Dion of Moncton, N.B.

He is also charged with breaking into a gunshop and illegal possession of a semi-automatic rifle.

Niagara Falls Ban On Building Opposed

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — A city official said Tuesday that a temporary ban on new construction in the vicinity of the famed waterfalls here would prove "a death to the hopes and aspirations of the city."

Harvey Albond, director of planning and development for the city, noted that Niagara Falls is in the midst of an ambitious urban-renewal program to modernize the downtown section.

Higher Pay Asked

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) has embarked on a course that will probably lead to newsprint price increases for both domestic customers and the much larger United States market.

Already union members in Quebec and the Atlantic provinces have asked for a $2-an-hour wage increase this spring. Their Ontario and British Columbia counterparts are expected to make a similar demand because of a recent union policy to strive for national wage parity.

Rare Gull Seen

SALISBURY BEACH, Mass. (Reuter) — A rare bird alert Tuesday drew flocks of bird watchers and ornithologists from around the United States to the marshes and beaches of this seacoast town.

At dawn, watchers already had unlimbered long-range cameras, telescopes and binoculars to view a Ross's gull, a Siberian seagull never reported seen on the east coast of North America.

Blind Woman Saved

TORONTO (CP) — Muriel Swayze, a 52-year-old blind woman, escaped death Tuesday when she was pulled from in front of a subway train by a 19-year-old youth.

"The train just missed her," said Dave Herrett, as he told how he yanked the woman from the track well to the subway platform

Limit Liquor Ads

TORONTO (CP) — The Liquor Control Board of Ontario (LCBO) has announced regulations limiting broadcast advertising within the province by any distillery, brewery or winery to 52 hours a year, down from the previous maximum of 78 hours.

Medicine Delayed

TORONTO (CP) — A local doctor said Tuesday night that a replacement order of a baby's medicine is on its way from New Haven, Conn., after the initial shipment was tied up in the backlog of mail at Toronto International Airport.

The medicine—sent originally 10 days ago by special-delivery air mail from Yale University—is not available anywhere else in North America, said Dr. J. W. Balfe, a kidney specialist who is treating six-month-old James Bastone for a rare metabolic disease.

TTC Fares Rise

TORONTO (CP) — A rise in the cost of adult public transit fares to 40 cents or three tickets for $1 was approved Tuesday by the Metropolitan Toronto executive committee. The move came in face of a Toronto Transit Commission (TTC) 1976 deficit of $56 million. Without the fare increase, the deficit is estimated at $92 million.

Patricia's Sister Charged

Hearst Girl, 19, Held at Border

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Anne Randolph Hearst, a younger sister of fugitive newspaper heiress Patricia, has pleaded not guilty to a misdemeanor drug charge following her arrest at the U.S.-Canadian border.

Miss Hearst, 19, was arrested Tuesday at Niagara Falls, N.Y., along with one of two passengers in the car she was driving, when the trio entered the United States at the Rainbow Bridge, U.S customs said.

U.S. Attorney Richard Arcara said that in a routine search of the car and its occupants, a customs agent found 1.2 grams of crystallized amphetamine, popularly known as "speed," in a sock worn by Donald Moffett, 21, of Denver, Colo.

Both Miss Hearst and Moffett were charged with misdemeanor possession of a controlled substance.

In an affidavit filed in connection with the arrest, the customs agent who made the search and a Drug Enforcement Administration agent who was present said both Moffett and Miss Hearst told them the amphetamine belonged to her.

The third person in the car, George Boomer, 21, of Grosse Pointe, Mich., was not charged.

Moffett and Miss Hearst were arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Edmund Maxwell in Buffalo within four hours of their arrest. Both pleaded not guilty. Maxwell released them on a $1,000 recognizance bond each.

He scheduled a preliminary hearing for March 19.

Miss Hearst's arrest followed recent unconfirmed rumors that her sister Patricia would soon attempt to cross from Canada into the United States in the Buffalo area.

Officials declined to comment on where Anne Hearst had been while in Canada. Arcara said he had "no way of knowing" if she had intended to reach her fugitive sister.

Patricia Hearst was kidnapped from her apartment at Berkeley Calif., Feb. 4, 1974, by the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army.

She subsequently renounced her family and said she was joining her abductors. She now faces a variety of state and federal charges. If she should be convicted, they could bring her life in prison.

Boy, 13, Is Killed Trying to Save Tot

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Thirteen-year-old Gordon Lapointe died under the wheels of a runaway van Tuesday while attempting to push a four-year-old from the path of the vehicle.

The van hit both boys and Tommy Fraboni is in serious condition in hospital.

The driver of the truck, Laine Poulin, 60, died of a heart attack at the wheel and only the fast action of Rheal Renaud 15, prevented further tragedy.

As the van careered across the icy schoolyard, Renaud ran along beside it as children scrambled to get out of the way. He managed to get the door open and stop the ven by putting his foot on the brake.

Two other boys also were injured, neither seriously.

Lapointe's two younger brothers, Michel, 12, and Ronald, 9, were in the schoolyard at the time of the accident. They were sent home in shock.

Field Workers Research Eskimo Land Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — "It's a battle all the way, right from the beginning," says Tagak Curley of the struggle to resolve Eskimo land claims in the North. Research is playing a large part in preparation for the final outcome.

The 30-year-old former president of Inuit Tapirisat of Canada, now director of the Eskimo organization's land-claims project, said traditional hunting, fishing and trapping rights are non-negotable since these activities are the basis of the Eskimos' culture, regardless of their choice of employment in the modern, technological North.

More than $500,000 has been spent so far to document the organization's claim on behalf of the 13,000 Eskimos of the Northwest Territories.

Nearly 50 field workers conducted 2,000 double-checked interviews with hunters and trappers in northern communities. On the basis of information collected in these interviews, reports were written and maps drawn showing the territory in which each hunter and trapper operated.

All the maps will be gathered together to produce one giant map showing the use and occupancy of the land, both at present and within living memory.

The researchers are also looking into old records and accounts as well as anthropological and archeological reports to establish an Eskimo presence on the land back to "time immemorial."

Mr. Curley expressed concern over the effect on Eskimo negotiations of a recent statement by Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan describing the James Bay native land-claims settlement as a benchmark for settlements elsewhere.

While the Quebec settlement still is only an agreement in principle, Mr. Curley said it has faults that he hopes can be avoided in the Northwest Territories.

He cited a clause in the Quebec agreement defining hunting rights as a form of government compensation and added that the Eskimos will seek more control and participation in economic development.

Eskimo hunters have always ranged over hundreds of square miles of territory and any study will necessarily show huge areas under Eskimo use and occupancy.

Claims can be expected to cover all of this territory with agreements being sought on consultation and participation in development of the land.

Mr. Curley said outright ownership will be an issue on some pieces of land although qualifications have not yet been established. Rules would be drawn up to determine who is entitled to a share of the land claim.

He said he expects final negotiations with the government will begin within two or three months. How long would they last?

"It's hard to tell," he said. "Maybe forever."

OUR NEW GROUND MEAT ANALYZER
will make sure you're getting your money's worth

The Loblaws Ground Meat Analyzer is now in all Loblaws Meat Departments. What it does is simply provide you with an accurate reading of the fat content in our ground meat. Each time a fresh amount of hamburger or ground beef is made, a check is made to determine the proper content of fat.

Loblaws ground beef comes under three classifications. Hamburger, with a fat content of 27% or less. Ground beef, with a fat content of 20% or less, and Lean Ground Beef, with a fat content of 15% or less. Loblaws labels every package of ground beef with the percentage of fat content.

1885 Cartage Bylaw Still on City Books

Belleville's bylaw regulating cartage — the transport of goods in the city — may not be as old as the wheel.

But, if its really as creaky with age as the document with which the Ontario Traffic Conference merrily confronted Ald. Arthur Keegan, the city councillor thinks the city could improve its image by framing it for a museum.

What happened was this, Ald. Keegan told his city hall colleagues this week.

The ordinance which had them laughing at the Toronto convention he found to his "embarrassment" was passed in his own city — in 1885. Admittedly, it was updated, he said — in 1893.

Its 25 regulations include some now-seeming eccentricities.

For instance: The rate for transport anywhere in the city can't exceed 20 cents. Licences cost $3 for a one-horse vehicle, $6 for two horses.

The cartage licence number has to be painted on the vehicle; the carter must post a $100 bond to pay for any fine or damage assessed against him; every driver should be ready to produce a copy of the bylaw on demand; when requested he must help authorities use his vehicle in the arrest and conveyance to jail of any one charged with an offence.

"If this bylaw has not been withdrawn ... do so soon, urged Ald. Keegan.

Since the conference "it's the laughing stock of the whole province of Ontario," he said, and as a "collectors item" should be "framed and hanging on the wall at Glanmore House (Hastings County museum)," he suggested.

City clerk Earl Dafoe agreed wih Mayor Robin Jeffrey to take the matter "under advisement."

Sidney Endorses Rural-use Study

Sidney Township council this week approved in principle study undertaken by the Quinte Planning Board which concluded residential growth is destroying rural character.

The councils of Belleville, Sidney and Thurlow townships met last Thursday to acquaint themselves with the study which then was referred until this Thursday. In the interim, each council is expected to draw conclusions and make a motion accepting or opposing the 70-page document.

In brief, the document, compiled by planning board staff, states much of the residential development in the rural area is carrying on in a haphazard, uncontrolled fashion.

The report also states that growth is "destroying the rural character."

While council was sceptical of passing a document that might excessively limit township growth, Reeve Gordon Wilman described the document as a "general policy statement — the critical document will be an official plan and zoning bylaw."

Each od these papers will go before public meetings.

"I don't think we're going to hurt anyone by passing this document," said Reeve Wilman.

The residential impact study is one of four volumes created on the townships and all will form the basis for official plans now in the drawing board stage with consultants.

Health Care Aides Ready

Loyalist College will be the scene today for the fourth health care aide graduation under the college's extension division.

Exercises will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Room 3N4 of Kente Building followed by a reception for both graduates and friends at the Four Seasons sponsored by the joint managers of both nursing home, Mr. and Mrs. James Clegg and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Freeman.

The 18 women to be feted are all employees of both nursing home who have taken the course to augment their experience, say June Rickard, allied health chairwoman in the Loyalist school of health science and community studies.

She explained the course is "on which is on-the-job upgrading." The student received psychology training at the college and participated in other classes and were supervised by instructors at the homes, she added.

Certificates will be presented by Nora Robitaille, health care aide coordinator, and pins will be handed out by Charlotte Parsons and Jeans Woods, both health care aide instructors.

Farm Seminar Planned

An all-day youth seminar, beginning at 10 a.m., will be held by District Three of the National Farmers Union at the Brighton Agricultural Centre Saturday, March 8.

District director Paul Windatt encourages all youth, rural and urban to attend the seminar and bring a lunch. Age limis are 14 to 24.

National NFU vice-president Walter Miller will lead a discussion on the NFU purpose and philosophy and district youth director Linda Hamilton will show slides on Australia with a report on this year's youth exchange program.

The regular district monthly meeting will be held Wednesday, March 12 at 8 p.m. in the home of Lyle Bright, Campbellford.

Funeral

JOHN A. LAPUM
Edmonton

Funeral service was held Saturday in Edmonton, for John A. Lapum, a former resident of Belleville, who died Thursday at his Edmonton home in his 45th year.

Son of James Lapum and the former Ruth Snell, Mr. Lapum is survived by his wife, Francis, a son, David, and a daughter, Kathy, all from Edmonton. He is also survived by a brother, Robert Lapum, Peterborough, and an [illegible] Miss Bessie Snell, Preston Springs.

A committal service took place at the Belleville Cemetery on Monday from the Thompson's Funeral Chapel. Canon R. B. D. Wright officiated.

A Glimpse of Yesterday

18-month-old Tammy Lynn took time out from Quinte Mall shopping to take a closer look at an 1885 vintage Vis A Vis carriage. The carriage is part of the Carlsberg collection recently on display at the mall and managed by Tammy Lynn's father Paul Ruttan.

BGH Parking Proposal Delayed for One Month

The brakes have temporarily been put to the preliminary process of building a new parking lot at Belleville General hospital.

City council this week delayed for a month any action on rezoning needed to launch the new 200-car park. To create the project, the hospital has been acquiring residential properties on its east side.

The delaying action came after council heard a neighboring home-owner complain the hospital is seeking piecemeal rezoning which would deflate adjacent property values.

A side affect of the debate — sparked by Mayor Robin Jeffrey's suggestion that rezoning be delayed — saw Ald. Ben Corke quit as chairman of the meeting after he queried the procedural propriety of the mayor's move.

The rezoning application, involving two lots on First St., was approved last week by the Subordinate Planning Advisory Committee (SPAC) and sent to council for the formal amending bylaw.

The hospital already has acquired three home on the street needed to expand its property for the lot.

Long-range plans include acquisition by the hospital of more property in the neighborhood — which the city's official plan has sanctioned by designating an area east to Second St. for community use.

Meantime, three more houses still remain on the west side of First St., adjacent to the properties newly-acquired for parking, said one of the householders, Roly Belanger.

Since property purchases in the area was part of an overall long-range hospital plan, Mr. Belanger suggested half a street should be rezoned at a time.

But in just rezoning two lots now, hospital authorities "are really creating more of a pressure play on the remaining residents" and affecting adjacent property values.

He asked council postpone rezoning until hospital officials make a "serious attempt" to negotiate with the remaining residents on the west of First St.

Mayor Jeffrey said she believes he has a valid complaint that what was involved was "spot rezoning" and "we are tying the hands" of the remaining three neighboring home owners.

She proposed the rezoning be delayed a month and hospital authorities "make every effort" to acquire the other three properties.

Ald. Ben Corke, chairman of the meeting, questioned whether the mayor's motion was in order and permissible under parliamentary procedure.

After council approved the resolution, Ald. Corke suddenly vacated the chairman's desk.

"I feel I can no longer continue as your chairman and I would like you to vote for somebody else (as chairman)," he told his colleagues.

Residents Protest Sidewalk Charge

The costs of growth patterns which are of community-wide benefit should not be paid by local-improvements taxation, city council was told this week.

John Miller, former city solicitor now in private practice, called the Local Improvements Act "an iniquitous piece of legislation."

Mr. Miller was representing Mr. and Mrs. Barry Parsons, protested the cost of installing sidewalks on a stretch of Sidney St., in the Parkdale area.

The lawyer said Sidney St. was due to become a major traffic artery.

In major constructions projects which benefit the entire community the cost of installations from roads to sewers should not be paid for only by adjacent property owners.

His clients are protesting the high rate to be billed for the sidewalk — on the west side of Sidney — estimated at $19.95 a foot. Further away, on city-owned property on the east side of the street, sidewalk construction is estimated at $8 a foot, said Mr. Miller. A major reason for the cost difference, he admitted, was the cost of property acquisition. But the contrast "seems a dramatic difference."

Emergency Treatment Applauded

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP)— — Hospital emergency departments don't usually receive complimentary phone calls.

But then emergency departments don't usually serve free coffee and have a registered nurse on hand to comfort patients and relatives.

Dr. W. J. Corbett, medical co-ordinator, said the Lion's Gate Hospital employs 17 family physicians, which helps maintain the atmosphere of a smaller, more personal hospital.

One of the staff, Dr. E. C. Levine, said patients get better follow-up care because all the doctors are family physicians who practise in the community.

He also finds it a welcome change from the routine of a family doctor.

But Dr. Corbett cautioned that quality of service is directly related to volume of business. On an average winter day, when the department is packed with broken-limbed skiers and motorists, waits may be longer and service more abrupt than usual.

But still the word is spreading.

"Build a better mousetrap and the world beats a path to your door," he said. "In July and August, there were 850 more emergency patients than the same period last year."

Although he attributed part of this to general population increase, Dr. Corbett said patients are coming in from a greater radius around the hospital.

He said this kind of business may jeopardize the quality of service.

The hospital is already feeling the strain. Construction has begun on a $23-million expansion devoted mainly to ambulatory care and treatment.

City Told It Has Top Credit Rating for Loan

Belleville's fiscal credit rating as local government corporation is in sound shape, city council was told this week.

The word came from an expert in debenture financing as three financial groups bid for the assignment as the city's fiscal agent in the sale of debentures which help underwrite city projects.

The city "enjoys an excellent credit rating — and your debentures should always sell alongside the top municipalities in Canada," said Bill Backus.

Mr. Backus was spokesman for a group composed of Bell, Gouinlock and Co. and Walwyn, Stodgell and Gardner.

Mr. Backus said his group feels "very strongly" about developing debenture sales locally which would broaden the market base.

Leslie White also said his group would "be very pleased" to make Belleville's municipal bond issues available in the area.

Mr. White spoke for a group that has been the city's fiscal agent for more than a decade — Midland Doherty Ltd in association with Wood-Gundy and the Bank of Montreal.

The third bidder was A.E. Ames Co., represented by vice-president M.I. Binnington.

City debentures are sold by an agent on commission — one quote given council last night was ½ per cent for short-term bond issues up to 10 years and one per cent for longer debentures.

Last year, the city sold $2,000,000 in debentures.

Three Firms Get Contracts

From the Ottawa Bureau Of The Intelligencer

OTTAWA — Three Belleville and area firms have been awarded federal contracts worth more than $100,000 the Department of Supply and Services announced Monday.

Town and Country Rug Sales and Services Ltd. of Trenton, was given the largest contract, worth $50,000 to repair floor tile at CFB Trenton.

A $38,500 contract was given to Parsons Cleaners to provide laundry service to CFB Trenton, while a third defence department contract was given to AOCO Ltd. of Belleville for optical service valued at $13,000.

They were among 216 unclassified contracts worth $10,000 or more that were awarded by the Supply and Services Department to Canadian companies during thbe week ended Feb 21. Total value of the contracts amounted to $19,717,729.

May Pool Knowledge

LONDON (CP) — Britain and the Soviet Union may pool their knowledge and research on the peaceful use of nuclear power, Prime Minister Harold Wilson says. The Russians have initiated the proposal and there will be "an early exchange of industrial missions," Wilson told a meeting of the Russo-British Chamber of Commerce.

Lawyers Oppose Onus On Accused in Drug Cases

OTTAWA (CP) — Provisions requiring defendants in drug cases to prove they did not intend to traffic in the drugs—contrary to the tradition that they are innocent until proven guilty—came under attack from two quarters in a Senate committee Tuesday.

Representatives of the Quebec Bar Association and a private group of Toronto defence lawyers both said the provisions violate traditional rights of accused persons and should not remain in a bill reducing penalties for possession of cannabis drugs—marijuana, hashish and hashish oil.

Michel Robert, president of the Quebec Bar Association, said that throwing the burden of proof on the accused, as occurs in charges of trafficking in cannabis under the Narcotics Control Act, opens the way to errors that could send innocent persons to jail for trafficking.

PC Voices Dislike Of TV Programs

OTTAWA (CP) — Stanley Korchinski took a sharp stab at broadcasting Tuesday night in the Commons, condemning what he called the smut and violence on television.

The Progressive Conservative MP for the mainly rural Saskatchewan riding of Mackenzie gestured angrily throughout his speech and his voice was hoarse with emotion as he called on the government to clean up TV.

Mr. Korchinski was armed with a bill that would set up the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTTC), which would replace the existing Canadian Radio - Television Commission (CRTC), broadcasting's regulatory agency. The new organization also would assume responsibilities held by other government groups, such as the transport commission, which approves Bell Canada Telephone rate changes.

Mr. Korchinski said the government, because most television viewers are concentrated regions, treat rural viewers as second-class citizens.

He said the new commission should be more responsive to not only rural viewers, but also the native populations and many ethnic goups.

But the main thust of his criticism was against a "little group" of television executives who, he said, by not censoring themselves, can undo the guidance of parents and undermine the few government controls that are imposed on broadcast content.

Mr. Korchinski, a farmer from Invermay, Sask., said he is not [illegible] government censorship; he just wanted good taste to prevail—and not necessarily the tastes of urban TV viewers.

". . . I do not think it is necessary to exploit sex on television or to use vulgar language. It is not that I am self-righteous, but I do want to speak for all those who cannot speak for themselves on this question. The message must get through to those who are charged with responsibility for our broadcasting system."

Mr. Korchinski said that if Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier was unable to do anything through the CRTC or its successor, then perhaps Parliament should give him the power.

While he attacked television programming in general, he slammed the CBC in particular, saying it had become overly permissive.

"These people in television know they have a great impact on society and they continue to corrupt our people. I suggest they know what they are doing; I do not consider them stupid, but they think that everyone else in society is."

The proposed legislation, which eventually received second reading and now goes to the Commons broadcasting committee for detailed study and possible amendment, would give the new federal agency far-reaching power over all forms of telecommunication.

One contentious area, brought up by several Quebec MPs Tuesday is the jurisdictional dispute between Ottawa and some provinces over cable television.

Quebec, for one, feels strongly that it should have control over its own cable TV as a way to ensure the province's cultural and educational heritage is preserved.

Roche LaSalle, one of three Quebec Conservatives, seemed to agree with this view, saying "it's unthinkable to aim for national unity if we don't respect the wishes of the provinces."

Senators Pleased With TV

OTTAWA (CP) — Television coverage came to a parliamentary committee for the first time in Canadian history Tuesday and despite extra noise and bustle the senators involved seemed pleased.

"Up to now, Im not disappointed," said Senator Carl Goldenberg (L-Quebec), chairman of the committee. He added that he found "no undue disturbance" of the proceedings.

The senate legal and constitutional affairs committee was holding hearings on a bill to reduce penalties for possession of marijuana and hashish.

Store Managers May Join Shoe Union

The Boot and Shoe Workers Union is in the process of organizing Bata Shoe Store managers and staff, it was learned at a meeting of the Quinte and District Labor Council Tuesday.

Ian Reilly, vice-president of the council and chief union executive for boot and shoe workers in Canada, said "the company has been reasonable with us in the past but intend fighting all the way on this one."

Store managers have been contacted in all 64 Ontario outlets and their replies are expected by mail in the near future, "depending on how long our brothers in the post office stay out," said Mr. Reilly.

Further steps are being taken to organize approximately 130 managers across Canada, he said.

"Managers are making from $150 to $200 for a 70-hour week, — they approached us to be organized."

"If anyone needs organizing, the store managers do," he said.

Mr. Reilly said as a final effort in the event the company blocks organization, "we're going to ask for a nationwide boycott of Bata stores."

"If the company refuses to recognize the rights of managers to earn a decent living, we'll have to put pressure on Mr. (Tom) Bata's salary," said Mr. Reilly.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5, 1975

Bemis Stresses City's Need To Control Inevitable Growth

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

City industrial commissioner Fred Bemis says Belleville will emerge as a growth nucleus along lines similar to growth patterns in the Toronto area.

"Belleville will grow in spite of us," said the industrial commissioner. "We might as well accept it and get into a position where we can mould and control the growth."

Mr. Bemis made the comments during two Tuesday speaking engagements at the Belleville Kiwanis Club and at an industrial seminar held at Loyalist College.

He termed Belleville as a "megalopic bubble" capable of growing to a population of 100,000 during the next 25 years.

Mr. Bemis pointed to brisk residential development in Sidney and Thurlow townships and the announcements of eight new Belleville industries during 1974 as indicators of the city's growth curve.

"We must be in a position to accept this growth . . . but on our own terms so it is compatible with the existing community," he said.

"Though it is a controversial point, you just cannot stop or stand still," he said. "There's nothing you can do about growth other than shape it."

In spite of this optimistic summary of city growth patterns, Mr. Bemis hedged his predictions at the college when he said the province's 10,000-acre Spencerville industrial park in Prescott will draw industry away from the city.

The province has stated repeatedly that the park will not be geared to attracting small industry but will concentrate on large consumers of land such as chemical plants needing large areas for tank storage.

Mr. Bemis said "I don't feel the provincial government can hold to its large site policy."

"That policy will break down and industry large and small will be drawn to the park," he said.

Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey said she had been assured by provincial government spokesmen that "no way would businesses requiring less than 1,000 aces be admitted."

She said it is not likely Belleville will feel any benefits from the industrial park because it lies so far away.

"It is more likely that surrounding municipalities will house spin off industries locating near the park to supply raw materials," she said.

Bemis Speaks

City industrial commissioner Fred Bemis has been on the luncheon meeting trail for the past week — speaking to three Belleville groups. Mr. Bemis, here at the Belleville Kiwanis Club, said "it is very important that the commission be open and frank about its operation wherever possible." We have an obligation to let the community know "what directions we're moving in," he said.

Young Praises Labor For Education Efforts

The formation of an advisory committee on labor at Loyalist College is due to the efforts of the Quinte District Labor Council, says Herb Young, college president.

In a recent speech to a labor studies institute at Loyalist, Mr. Young related how council representatives approached the college in May, 1974, with a proposal which resulted in the formation of the labor studies action committee, composed of labor movement people in the area served by the college.

He said the Quinte-area labor movement "has a long history of participation in the field of education."

Mr. Young also cited labor's achievement in the 1940s, convincing the former Trenton Board of Education the economic feasibility of introducing free textbooks at the elementary school level.

"The Trenton board was one of the early implementers of this policy which is now Ontario-wide," he commented.

Mr. Young noted Reg Loader, vice-president and Canadian head of the International Jewelry Workers Union, is also a member of the college board of governors.

Newsmakers

Outing Date Suggested

The annual Moira River Conservation Authority senior citizen one-day outing, normally held in June, will probably be held in September this year. This was the recommendation of the board's information and education advisory board. June, it was stated, is already packed with organized activities for senior citizens, while a September date would provide them with another event to look forward to.

Sunday School Started

A non-denominational Sunday school will get under way Sunday, March 9 in the Deloro Community Centre. Boys and girls from four to 13 are asked to come to the centre at 10.30 a.m. where three adult teachers and a group of teenage volunteers will assist Mrs. Dorothy Armstrong who is organizing the school. Donations of toys for the smaller children to play with would be appreciated.

Chairman Named

Ted Kelly has been elected chairman of the Belleville committee of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society. Area vice-chairman Gord Jefferson conducted the election on behalf of the region council.

Play Opens

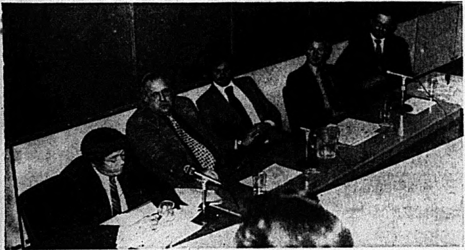
The curtain goes up tonight at 8 p.m. for the premiere of The Knight of The Burning Pestle presented by the Belleville Theatre Guild. The play runs until Saturday night of this week and from Wednesday to Saturday of next week. For tickets call 967-1442. General admission is $3 with senior citizens and students paying $1.50.

Art at Library

From now until Mar. 15 visitors to the Corby Public Library have an opportunity to see two unique and distinctive art exhibitions. On display will be art by a married couple who go by the name of Craig and Diana, currently living in Toronto but familiar with this area. Craig has his realistic acrylic paintings on show while Diana has wool-and-wood wall hangings in intricate patterns.

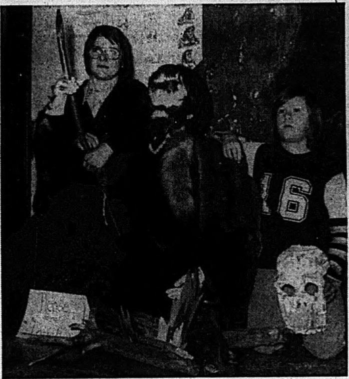
Audit Brings Tax Refund

Belleville's local government coffers are a little richer because of a city treasury review of federal and provincial sales taxes report city treasurer Frank Morrell. Consultants hired to check records, for possible refunds, has brought a refund of $25,000 from the federal government alone — a net gain of $17,565 after fees paid out to the consultants hired to minutely check all records back as far as 1962.



Industrial Role Discussed

At a Loyalist College seminar Tuesday, representatives from three major Belleville firms and the city's industrial commissioner Fred Bemis (left) discussed the importance of industrial participation in the community. Panelists were Ron Moon of Corby Distilleries, Dave Miller of Procter and Gamble and Milt Duffey of Northern Electric. Panel moderator was Loyalist teacher Ray Michol.



Living the Past

Jamie Parsons (left) and Jeffrey Soule, both Grade 7 students at St. Michael's Academy sit with the prehistoric man they constructed for the annual two-day Science Fair and Hobby Show. The show, with more than 250 exhibits, continues until 9 p.m. this evening and is open to the public.

Youth Held On Theft Charge

A 19-year-old Belleville youth, Paul Jones of 71 South Herchimer Ave., has been charged by city police with one count of break, enter and theft and two counts of car theft following an incident early today.

A police spokesman said while on cruiser patrol, Sgt. Tom Davidson and Constable Maurille Roy discovered a window broken at Budget Rent-A-Car on Dundas St. E. at about 12.45 a.m.

Investigation revealed a truck had been stolen from the lot which was found abandoned on College St. a short time later.

The spokesman said city police later were notified a suspect had been apprehended near Cobourg driving a stolen Vega at about 3 a.m.

It was determined this car had been taken from the rental company also, he said.

Child Abuse Reported

Three cases of child abuse have been reported to the Children's Aid Society since the public symposium on child battering a week ago.

Scott Orfald, head of the CAS family services department, says that the response is extraordinary.

"We only had nine cases reported for all of 1974," he said, "I think the community should be commended for this new sense of responsibility."

Dr. Cyril Greenland, widely-respected authority on child abuse in Ontario, visited Belleville last Wednesday. In addition to his scheduled seminar with the emergency ward nurses at Belleville General Hospital, he joined Dr. E. B. Conn, Dr. James Nelles and Jude Robert Walmsley in a panel discussion about abuse that was open to the public.

Wheelchair No Handicap In Square-dance Marathon

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A wheelchair is no handicap to having a square-dance.

In fact, energetic Bruce Bean may publicly prove the point soon in Belleville.

A square-dance marathon is being organized March 22 in the city. The endurance of its sponsored dancers is expected to raise more than $1,500 for the Ability Fund — the organization which aids the handicapped.

There is where Bruce wheels into the scene.

A crusader in convincing the handicapped that physical problems are no barriers to enjoying normal pursuits, he hopes to have a group of wheelchair square-dancers at the event to plug his message.

The 52-year-old civil servant has been promoting his philosophy in the area since he was assigned to CFB Trenton two years ago.

From the wheelchair to which a back injury has confined him for 26 years, he started the Quinte Easy Rollers — an organization that has provided a social-recreation focus for the handicapped in the Belleville-Trenton-Picton area.

The potential of the idea won it a $12,000 Local Initiatives Program grant last year and $500 from the ability fund to finance projects from handcrafts to bowling.

"The whole idea is to get people realizing they don't have to hide in a wheelchair," said Bruce Wednesday night, in Belleville to meet with the marathon dance organizers. "A wheelchair is no handicap."

The marathon set for Centennial Secondary School March 22 from 8 a.m. to midnight, is being organized by the Single Beau-Knots Square Dance Club.

Enid Williams, young Point Anne member who is organizing the event says the 16 hours will use 10 callers, retained from Ontario and Quebec. Participants are securing sponsors who pay them money for the hours they dance.

Vera Morphy, Belleville and district Ability Fund chairman, expects the big dance may add at least another $1,500 to donations already ahead of last year's $3,600 total.

In swing since 1961, the club is for single people and one of several square-dance organizations in the Belleville area.

Bruce Bean says he sees no reason why a club for wheelchair dancers couldn't be added.

There are such clubs in Hamilton and Kitchener. From them "we hope to get a set of wheelers down for the marathon," he said.

Stolen Goods Recovered

BANCROFT — Ontario Provincial Police here have charged Boyd Bruce, a 21-year-old from Bancroft, with three counts of possession of stolen goods.

The charges for the possession of goods valued at $549 follow the recovery of property stolen during a series of break-ins to cars and residences in the north Hastings area during the early hours of Sunday.

The incidents have also involved vandalism and break and entries, however, no charges have been laid.

Three guns, which were taken from MacGillivray Lake's residence, have also been recovered.

Metric Conversion Easy By Using Simple Chart

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

A 13 year-old Belleville student has developed a remedy for those who feel the government's force-feeding metric plan is not for them.

Brigitte Fryters, a Grade 7 student at King George Public School, has devised a simple chart that can be used for transposing metric measurements within its own system.

The chart, based on simply shifting the decimal point, uses the numbers one and zero as basic components. It can easily determine the number of decimetres in a kilometre by changing the decimal position.

Brigitte, who was born in Belgium, said she has not seen a similar chart in either European or North American schools.

The young math student, who is taught by King George teacher Shelley Furukawa, said she uses the chart for a variety of mathematical problems. The chart principle can also apply to metric weight transposing.

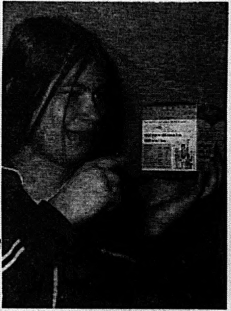
Dave Snedden, math co-ordinator for the Hastings county board of education, confirmed there are several methods by which charts can be used for metric system.

"The metric system is a process of shifting decimals . . . this is why it is easy to learn," explained Mr. Snedden.

He also said it was exceptional a Grade 7 student would develop a chart to be used for learning the metric system. The chart is not used for converting the imperial system to the metric system.

Most educators discourage students from trying to convert the imperial system to the metric system.

Brigitte, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs John Fryters, 19 Pringle Drive, said the chart method could help many people who otherwise are having difficulty learning the new system.



Metric Made Easy

Brigitte Fryters, a Grade 7 student at King George Public School, has developed a simple chart for converting metric measurements. Here, she holds another handy device developed by the Canadian Metric Commission to be used in the teaching of the metric system. Brigitte is the daughter of Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. John Fryters, 19 Pringle Drive.

Books Popular

Bellevillians borrowed almost the same number of books from the downtown Corby libraby during the past two ytars, a report to city hall from the city's chief librarian shows. In 1974, 170,187 books circulated from the branch compared with 169,039 in 1973.

83-year-old Found Dead

Inquest Suggests More Night Nurses

By ROBIN HASE
Staff Reporter

A five-man coroner's jury has recommended nursing staff at Belleville General Hospital "be increased during the early evening hours to ensure that adequate patient care is provided at all times."

It was the only recommendation out of the inquest Tuesday at the courthouse into the death of 83-year-old Della Chambers of Ameliasburg who was found beside her bed the evening of Nov. 15 on the fourth floor of the hospital's rehabilitation building.

Testimony showed Mrs. Chambers had been put to bed at about 6.20 p.m., strapped in with a posi-restrainer to ensure she would not attempt to get out of bed on her own.

However, she was found at about 6.55 p.m held at the side her bed by the restrainer close to the floor.

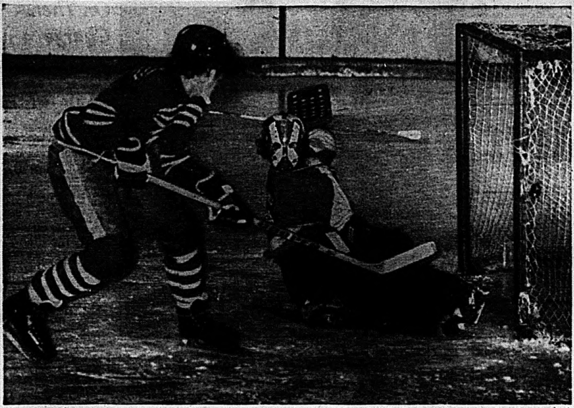
One side rail on the bed was found down although both rails had been up and locked into position when Mrs. Chambers was placed on the bed, the inquest was told.

The jury found cause of death was the inhalation of vomitus and a fracture of the skull base and the cervical spine following a fall to the floor.

"A contributing factor ... was the release of the bed side rail by some undetermined means," said the report.

Nursing witnesses testified the evening staff of six is reduced to three between 6 and 7 p.m. during the staggered supper beraks to supervise about 50 patients.

Testimony also revealed there are problems with some mobile patients interfering with those in bed by helping them in or out of bed without authorization.



Belleville Yardmen minor midget goalie, Bruce Hamilton, had no chance on this scoring drive by Oshawa Kiwanis forward, Barry McQuaid. The Oshawa attacker picked up the puck at his own blue line, weaved his way to centre ice, split the Belleville defence and walked in on Hamilton all alone. He then faked Hamilton to the left and back handed the puck over top of him as the goalie fell to the ice. The goal, scored early in the third period, was the fourth of the game for Oshawa and proved to be the winner. The Kiwanis Club edged the Yardmen 4-3 to win their best-of-five playoff series 3-1.

Nipped 4-3 by Oshawa

Yardmen Squeezed Out

By MIKE BRADSHAW

Sports Staff

The only ray of light in Belleville's dark trek through the Ontario Minor Hockey Association AAA playoffs went out Tuesday night as Oshawa Kiwanis came back from a two-goal deficit to edge Belleville yardmen 4-3 and win their best-of-five OMHA minor midget series 3-1, at the Memorial Arena.

After a scoreless first period, Belleville took a 2-0 lead early in the second. Oshawa fired three goals within a two minute and five second span late in the third, to take the lead.

"They did us proud," said Belleville coach, Floyd Crawford, after the game.

The Yardmen did the whole city proud. They are the only team to get past the opening round of AAA OMHA playoffs since Belleville joined the triple grouping two years ago.

The locals beat out Peterborough in the first series and won the first game of the Oshawa series, in Oshawa. They lost two games on the weekend however, and found themselves with their backs to the wall for Tuesday's encounter.

"We were glad we had to play Belleville and not Peterborough," said Oshawa manager, Bob Amos. "We had some bad experiences with Peterborough through the regular season and we weren't really looking forward to meeting them in the playoffs.

"This was a good, clean, fast series with Belleville," said Amos, "and we came out of it with no injuries."

"They have a good team," said Crawford. "I think they'll go a long way."

Oshawa now meets Bay Ridges in a best-of-five divisional championship.

Belleville got off to a slow start, but the goaltending of Bruce Hamilton kept them in the running. Hamilton robbed several Oshawa attackers from point-blank range in the early going.

Both teams killed off two-man disadvantages with hustling, heads-up defensive work in the first frame.

The Yardmen drew first blood at 5:24 of the second period when Paul Hipkin scored from John Jianopolis and Howie Coons.

Three minutes later Bob Crawford put the locals two up with a strong individual effort while Belleville was a man short. The short-hand marker appeared to knock some of the wind out of the Oshawa sails, for a few minutes anyway.

At 12:22 Oshawa got on the scoreboard on Brian McGill's goal. Carson Campbell evened things up at 14:18 and 10 seconds later Rob Zameic put the visitors in front 3-2.

Oshawa came out flying in the third period and jumped in front 4-2 at 4:40 when Barry McQaid potted what proved to be the winner.

From that point on, Belleville took control. Though the locals were in the driver's seat they only managed to beat Oshawa netminder, John Parish, once, over the remainder of the game.

Paul Hipkin tallied the final goal of the season for Belleville with Randy Bell assisting at 8:53.

Coach Crawford pulled his goalie in the final minutes of the contest, but it didn't work. The Oshawa defencemen kept the six Belleville attackers outside their end.

Belleville took 15 of the game's 27 minor penalties. Included in Oshawa's total was a 10-minute misconduct.

McDonald's Workout Tonight

The Belleville McDonald's announced yesterday the Ontario Fastball League team has acquired the use of the Belleville Police Department gym on Campbell Street.

Practice sessions now are scheduled for Mondays at Quinte Secondary School at 7 p.m. and Wednesdays at the BPD gym at 7 p.m.

All practices and training sessions are still open, so any seriously interested ball player may come out.

The first Wednesday night practice is tonight.

Question Marks Cloud Quinte League's Future

As recently as l-- when one described the Quinte Fastball Leag [illegible] glowing descriptions would end with an exclamation mark. It was a premier grouping, rated near the top of the class in the province.

Today, the QFLs future is clouded with question marks.

Rollins Construction, a perennial top dog in the league, won't be back, since many of the key players with that squad are expected to catch on with the city's Ontario Fastball League entry, the McDonald's.

The Ellis Juniors have not been represented at either of the two meetings the league has held to date.

Trenton Auger's Men's Wear has also been conspicuous by the absence of a spokesman at these sessions.

Nothing confirmed from Trenton as yet, but it doesn't sound good.

Word is, pitcher George Ferguson will not be spending the National Hockey League off-season in Trenton this year.

There is some doubt catcher Larry Mavety will be available for duty when the World Hockey Association season is over.

And to cap things, Al Ferguson and Wayne Drake won't be back.

Team manager Larry Moran is not available for comment. He's battling influenza.

On the positive side, there's the assurance that Howard and Robert Printing and Devolin Motors, both established regulars over the years, will field teams.

The Bardon Supplies squad is expected back and a Picton representative is definitely interested.

Teams from Cold Springs and Cobourg were represented at the loop's March 2 meeting. But neither team is committed to play here. They're waiting to see if they will be accepted back in a Peterborough league in which they operated last year.

All the questions should be answered March 16 when the league holds a meeting to decide where it's going.

What the loop needs, of course, is the return of the always popular Ellis Juniors.

That would bring the number of entries to five.

Trenton, Cobourg or Cold Springs would round out the list in great style.

There are many talented players in the city and district. They can't all play for the McDonald's team. The QFL's disappearance from the sports scene would be bad news for a lot of us.

SLICES — How about that turnout for Monday night's Belleville Minor Hockey Association annual meeting?

An overflow crowd at the Centennial Secondary School lecture theatre, which, they tell me, seats 100, was a welcome sight.

That kind of response has to be heartening for everyone concerned. And it's displays of enthusiastic support like that one which are a credit to the city.

I've long been a Cliff Belch fan. I thought the city's recreation director chaired the meeting in his usual capable manner. But they tell me I gave him some trouble, inadvertently, of course.

Sorry, Cliff.

Back to George Ferguson for a moment. He and linemates Errol Thompson and Lanny McDonald are in high gear again. Injuries split the line up for a while.

Fergie is fourth in the list producers with 16 goals and 23 assists. Five of those goals have been game winners and he's tops on the club in that department.

Bill Mosienko who holds the National Hockey League record for scoring the three fastest goals, heads the list of players on the Manitoba Oldtimers who will be in Trenton tonight for a match with Orval (Red) Gravelle's Pioneers.

Playing for Chicago Black Hawks, Mosienko potted three goals within the space of 21 seconds during a 7-6 win over New York Rangers, at New York, March 23, 1952.

Game time at Trenton Community Gardens for tonight's exhibition game is 8.30 p.m.

Help Wanted: Coach

Belleville Olympics of the Premier Soccer League are in the market for a coach.

Bob Watson, coach of the club in its first season in the Premier loop, has decided to concentrate on playing this time around. Applications for the position of coach with the club are now being taken and may be forwarded to the team, in care of Golden Mile Restaurant, North Front St., Belleville.

Olympics plan to put the accent on youth as they rebuild for the 1975 season.

The team will hold indoor training at the Loyalist College gym on Tuesday nights, beginning March 11. The two hour sessions will run from 9-11 p.m.

Olympics have entered upcoming indoor tournaments at CFB Trenton, March 22, and in Ottawa in April.

Cosy Grill blanked John's Variety Store 2-0 in the other match.

Dave Langman and Brian Stevenson were the goal scorers.

Seven Teams Set for BQSA

TRENTON — The Bay of Quinte Soccer Association (BQSA), a 10-team grouping last year, has seven definite starters ready for league action in the new season.

At a regular league meeting at Royal Canadian Legion Branch 110 here last night, it was learned that Warkworth Institution, Cobourg Tony's, Brighton, Trenton Spartacus, CFB Trenton, Citizens Finance of Trenton, and an Italo-Canadian squad made up of players from Trenton and Belleville, are ready for the opening kickoff.

Belleville Olympics of the Premier Soccer League have also requested permission to join the BQSA and Belleville Parsons, long-time association member, is a possible starter.

An ban on Premier League Olympics players was lifted at last night's meeting and according to a spokesman of the Olympics' team, "This is a big step in sorting out the difficulties between the two organizations and will help soccer improve in the area."

Ron Cannons, BQSA publicity director emphasized that Olympics have not been accepted by the association as a team. A decision on that matter is expected to be made at an April meeting which is also the deadline for entries.

Bruin Stars Battle for Lead

Esposito and Orr Fight It Out

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston's Bobby Orr figures the Bruins have little chance of winning their divisional race, so he can concentrate on his battle with team-mate Phil Esposito for the National Hockey League scoring title.

Esposito scored three points Tuesday night as the Bruins trounced Washington Capitals 8-0 and took a 114-113 lead over Orr, who added two points to his total.

PHIL ESPOSITO

"If he doesn't win it, I'd like to win it," Orr said of the scoring championship, "and if I don't win it, I hope he wins it."

The Bruins trail first-place Buffalo Sabres by 10 points in the Adams Division Race with just over a month to play.

"We only have 15 games left, so it's going to be tough to catch them," Orr said. "If they win one, we have to win two. And, they're playing well, too."

In Tuesday's other games, Los Angeles Kings downed Kansas City Scouts 7-4 and Minnesota North Stars surprised Vancouver Canucks 6-4.

With Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens in third place with 96 points, and the season drawing to a close, it seems certain that one of the Bruins will take the title and the $1,000 which goes to the leader.

Esposito, who earned $500 for being on top at the halfway point of the season, said he now feels rejuvenated and out of a recent slump.

"Everybody goes through this in the middle of the season—it's such a long year," Esposito said. "For three weeks I felt tired, and I couldn't even get out of bed."

Esposito, who had scored only two goals in nine previous games, pumped his 55th goal past Ron Low for Boston's only third-period score. He had an assist in each of the first two periods.

Orr, who needs one more goal to tie his own record of 37 by a defenceman, had two assists as Boston bombed Washington's starting goalie John Adams for a 5-0 first period lead.

Boston's first two goals were scored by Ken Hodge, who was shifdet from right wing to left wing as a replacement for the injured John Bucyk.

Although tied by the lowly Capitals in their last visit, the Bruins have outscored Washington's expansion team 33-8 in five games this season.

At Bloomington, Minn., Minnesota blew a three-goal lead, then rallied on Dennis Hextall's goal in the second period for a 6-4 win over Vancouver.

Bill Goldsworthy added two goals for the North Stars while Andre Boudrias scored twice for the Canucks. Henry Boucha scored his first goal for the North Stars since returning to action following an eye injury he suffered when he was butt-ended Jan. 4 by Boston's Dave Forbes.

Whitey Widing scored three goals and Mike Murphy chipped in with four assists for the Kings, who moved within two points of the first-place Canadiens in the Norris Divison race.

Wding's three goals gave him a six-year total of 301 points, most in Kings' history. Wilf Paiement scored twice for the Scouts.

Philadelphia Flyers will start backup goalie Wayne Stephenson again tonight at Minnesota. Regular Bernie Parent is still nursing a thigh muscle he pulled in a Feb. 26 game with Atlanta Flames.

In other games tonight, Buffalo visits New York Rangers, Montreal is at Atlanta, Pittsburgh Penguins are at Kansas City, Detroit Red Wings at Toronto Maple Leafs, Vancouver at St. Louis Blues and Chicago Black Hawks at California Golden Seals.

Nordiques, Oilers Lose

Toros Gain Ground

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Toros used a minimum of effort Tuesday to improve their position in the World Hockey Association Canadian Division.

The Toros took on the financially - troubled Baltimore Blades, the sad-sack club owned by the league, and played just hard enough to beat them 6-4.

At the same time, Quebec Nordiques and Edmonton Oilers, the two clubs immediately ahead of and behind the Toros in the standings, lost their games to allow Toronto to advance.

Edmonton dropped a 3-1 decision to Cleveland Crusaders while San Diego Mariners whipped Quebec 8-2.

Quebec now has 78 points atop the Canadian Division, Toronto has moved up with 70 and Edmonton remains third with 63.

"We're tight and not playing fluid hockey," said Toros defenceman Jim Dorey who scored once in the Toronto victory. "Our poor passing and disorganized play is causing the chippy hockey."

Centre Vaclav Nedomansky scored twice and set up Frank Mahovlich on another goal to lead the Toros scoring.

The Blades, badly understaffed and playing under the threat that the club may be disbanded at the end of the season, had numerous good chances and almost tied the score at 3-3 in the third period but were held off by goalie Les Binkley.

"They shouldn't be underestimated or taken for granted," Toros coach Bob Leduc said of the Blades.

"If money isn't raised or an owner found for next season, their players will be looking for jobs. They're working hard because they know there are scouts watching them."

The Blades were without goalie Gerry Desjardins who left for Buffalo on Tuesday where he signed with the National Hockey League Sabres.

The WHA has cut the Blades player salaries in half and this apparently gave Desjardins cause to assume the WHA was in default on his contract, leaving him free to go back to the NHL where he played the last two seasons with New York Islanders. The Islanders dealt his NHL rights to Buffalo on Monday.

Blades coach Johnny Wilson said the departure of Desjardins didn't surprise him. "Well, nothing about our team surprises me at this point. I expect anything at this stage."

In Edmonton, the Oilers outshot Cleveland 35-20 but Crusaders goalie Gerry Cheevers had an outstanding game while Al McDonough, Ron Ward and Gerry Pinder provided the scoring.

Pinder's goal into an empty net ended a last-minute Edmonton attempt to tie the game.

Napier Question

Executive Tosses Ball to Trustees

TORONO (CP) — The World Hockey Association executive committee decided Tuesday to let the league trustees decide later this month on the acceptability of oronto Toros signing of 18-year-old Mark Napier.

Bud Poile, WHA vice-president, said Toros president John F. Bassett explained the circumstances of the Napier signing to the executive committtee, "and nothing will be decided until the league's board of trustees meeting March 24."

The Toros have signed Napier, a forward with Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association, to a three-year contract starting next year despite the fact the WHA has not yet held a draft and had earlier promised the Canadian (CAHA) that it would not sign players under 20 years old this year.

However, Poile said Tuesday: "We feel no rules have been broken because no (written) agreement has been made with Association."

A meeting with the CAHA to discuss the signing of under-20 players will not be granted until after the WHA trustees meeting, Poile said.

The executive committee also discussed the troubled Baltimore Blades and Chicago Cougars franchises. The league is operating the Baltimore Club and has subsidized the Cougars.

Poile said the league has had three offers to purchase the Blades but he would not identify the prospective buyers.

"The only problem with Chicago is that they need a new arena," said Poile. "If it can be worked out that one can be built, the Cougars will remain in Chicago. Otherwise, the franchise will have to be moved."

Meanwhile in Peterborough, Ont., owners of the OHA franchise said Tuesday they will withdraw the Major Junior A Petes unless there is "a bona fide legal agreement" between the professional leagues not to sign under-age juniors.

Club president Ed Redmond said the action will be taken at a March 12 meeting of the club's executive. He said the signing of under-age juniors is ruining junior hockey and will eventually destroy professional hockey because the apprenticeship system is being eroded.

"It is our opinion that more signings at the 18-year-old level will destroy the availability of talent."

Redmond said if his club is yithdrawn, it will be for a year's duration.

Cool Sam Does Job For Kings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Pressure? It didn't bother me," said Sam Lacey. "Why should it? There's nobody on you."

Sam was talking about something most National Basketball Association players do best—taking foul shots.

And Lacey disposed of two free throws with 13 seconds left as easily as he answered the question aout pressbure, snapping a tie to send Kansas City-Omaha Kings to a 103-99 victory over Phoenix Suns Tuesday night.

Other scores in NBA action were: Milwaukee 101, Detroit 83; Buffalo 104, Seattle 97; Boston 126, New York 111; Atlanta 109, Los Angeles 97; Golden State 117, Chicago 102, and Portland 117, Cleveland 98.

In the American Basketball Association, New York beat St. Louis 110-106, Utah whipped San Diego 118-99 and Denver beat Memphis 133-116.

Fourth in Compulsory Figures, Cranston Still the Favorite

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (CP) — A two-minute compulsory free-skating program today may identify the next world men's figure skating champion.

Toller Cranston, the 25-year-old five times Canadian champion from Toronto, still occupies the favorite's role after his fourth-place finish in Tuesday's compulsory figures.

But experts say he will face a strong challenge from John Curry, 25-year-old Englishman who was second after the school figures here.

Sheldon Galbraith, the veteran Toronto skating coach, said Curry may be the most truly artistic skater in the championships although most attention is focused on Cranston whose daring ballet-like style has made great changes in mens skating.

Galbraith, who coached Barbara Ann Scott to world and Olympic gold medals in the late 1940's, said the compulsory free-skating program is important because it can make the most dynamic impression of any part of the competition.

"The men have the opportunity to put power for two minutes into it which they cannot do in the long program. And they can make a very, very strong impression that lasts even into the long program.

"I would say this is a very great opportunity for Toller who makes a big impact with his style and also his ability to sell himself to an audience."

Sergei Volkov, 25, of the Soviet Union, who barely edged Cranston for second place in last year's world championship in Munich, was the leader after the compulsory figures, being placed first by all nine judges. But he is skating with a knee injury and, although the Soviet officials are closed-mouthed, there is some talk Volkov might not take part in today's compulsory free skating. In any case he is not in the free-skating class of either Cranston or Curry.

Vladimir Kovalev, 22, the new European champion, was third in the school figures but Galbraith said he is not in the class of the better free-skater here.

Gordon McKllen Jr., the U.S. champion, was fifth in th figures, followed by Ron Shaver of Cambridge, Ont.

Bob Rubens, 22, of Dollard des Ormeaux, Que., was 18th in the field of 22.

Although Shaver is skating with a groin injury, Galbraith said it is not beyond the realm of possibility that he could win a medal.

Shaver was fifth in Munich in 1974, having moved up from seventh on the strength of a brilliant free-skating program that was ranked second only to Cranston's. Even more remarkable was the fact that Cranston, eighth after the compulsory figures last year, moved up to fifth after the compulsory free skating and then jumped to a third-place bronze with his five-minute free skating.

Curry, the British champion, said he is skating better than ever. He received a perfect mark of six from one of the judges in the free skating in the European championship in Copenhagen. Cranston also received one six for his performance at the Canadian championship in Quebec City.

Today's compulsory free skating counts for 20 per cent of the total marks in the competition, with 40 per cent each awarded to school figures and the free skating.

The free skating is scheduled for Thursday night and one thing is certain—there will be a new champion. Jan Hoffman of East Germany was the 1974 winner but he has undergone knee surgery and is not here to defend his crown.

The pairs competition started as expected Tuesday night with defending champions Irina Rodnina and Alexander Zaitsev of the Soviet Union taking the lead in the short program.

Romy Kermer and Rolf Osterreich of East Germany were second.

Canadian champions Candy Jones of Toronto and Don Fraser of Richmond Hill, Ont., placed 11th while Kathy Hutchinson and Jamie McGrigor of Cambridge, Ont., were 14th.

Val and Sandra Bezic of Toronto, five times former Canadian champs, watched from the sidelines with Sandra recovering from an ankle injury.

The pairs short program counts for 25 per cent of total marks. The free skating program tonight counts the remaining 75 per cent.

The women's singles start today with the school figures, and Christine Errath of East Germany is favored to retain her title.

But one expert ranks the two Canadians—Lynn Nightingale, 18-year-old Canadian champion, and Kim Alletson, 16-year-old runner-up both from Ottawa—along with Americans Dorothy Hamill and Wendy Burge—as the best free skaters among all women here.

Scott's Ontario Rink Knocks Off Mazinke

FREDERICTON (CP) — With a last rock delivery that may mean the difference between winning and losing, the furthest thing from a sweeper's mind at the Canadian men's curling championship is to hold off slamming his broom into the ice in front of the advancing stone.

Tom Miller and Mike Boyd faced that situation Tuesday afternoon when Ontario's Alex Scott, the general practioner from Kingston, made his last-rock delivery in the 12th end of their game with Saskatchewan's Harvey Mazinke.

"We weren't all that eager (to get on the rock)," Mike said later. "We knew he (Scott) wasn't heavy on it and it was just a matter of keeping the thing clean until we got part way down the ice and got a better idea of how far into the rings he was going. . . .

"He had perfect weight by himself. . . ."

The Scott shot stopped on the four-foot circle to the right of the T-line. It cut out a Saskatchewan stone guarded on the left side of the house and pulled out a 7-6 Ontario win over Mazinke's previously undefeated foursome from Regina.

The loss after four earlier wins left Saskatchewan's grip on first place in the 12-rink somewhat tenuous.

Don Twa's Territories rink from Whitehorse, Northern Ontario's Bill Tetley from Thunder Bay and the host New Brunswick crew skipped by John Clark of Fredericton, all with earlier byes in the championship, were right behind with three victories and a loss.

They were followed by Nova Scotia's Dick Boyce from Dartmouth, Ontario and Tom Reed's St. Albert, Alta., rink—all at 3-2.

Pre-tournament favorite Rod Hunter and his Manitoba four from Winnipeg was at 2-2 followed by Jim Ursel's Quebec rink from Montreal and the Prince Edward Island entry skipped by John Fortier of Charlottetown at 1-3.

Yet to win are Frank Beutel of Penticton, B.C., and Bob Cole of St. John's, Nfld., both with 0-4 records.

In today's 2 p.m. draw, New Brunswick goes against Alberta, Northern Ontario against the Territories, British Columbia against Quebec, Newfoundland against P.E.I. and Ontario against Manitoba. Saskatchewan and Nova Scotia draw the bye.

At 7:30 p.m., it's Ontario vs. Nova Scotia, Manitoba vs. Newfoundland, New Brunswick vs. P.E.I., Saskatchewan vs. the Territories and British Columbia vs. Alberta. The byes go to Northern Ontario and Quebec.

Marlboros Upended

Petes' Approach Works

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto was just getting used to having the opposition play under protest when Peterborough Petes decided Tuesday to take a different approach and hand the Marlboros a 7-4 Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A defeat.

The Marlboros' previous three opponents had protested the appearance in the Toronto lineup of Mark Napier, who recently signed a professional contract, effective Sept. 1, with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association.

However, the opposition's protest policy had little effect on the Marlboros. They downed St. Catharines Black Hawks 14-0, Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 7-2 and London Knights 5-4.

Commissioner Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz and league governors will determine today the 18-year-old's future with Toronto.

In the game Tuesday, the Petes built up period leads of 2-1 and 5-3 to earn their first home-ice win this season over league-leading Marlboros.

Red Laurence paced the third-plac Petes with two goals. Paul Evans, Doug Jarvis, Stan Jonathan, Gary McMonagle and Tony Cassolato got the others.

Napier, Bruce Boudreau, Mike Kaszycki and Ron Wilson replied for Toronto, outshot 39-28.

In other games, Hamilton Fincups dumped Kingston Canadians 5-1, Ottawa '67s downed Kitchener Rangers 6-1, Oshawa Generals edged St. Catharines 5-4 and Sudbury Wolves defeated Sault Ste. Marie 3-2.

WON'T FACE STARS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia goalie Bernie Parent is still nursing a pulled thigh muscle and will miss Wednesday night's National Hockey League game with Minnesota North Stars, the Flyers said Tuesday. Parent suffered the injury in a Feb. 26 game with Atlanta Flames. Wayne Stephenson is expected to play for the Flyers in Wednesday's game.

The Business World Appeals to Players

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today's lesson in business administration comes to you courtesy of Ken Holtzman, Bill Russell and Bill Campbell.

As it happens, Holtzman majored in business at the University of Illinois before turning to pitching major league baseball for Chicago Cubs and later Oakland A's. In his years with Oakland and owner Charles O. Finley, Holtzman's business schooling has continued with almost yearly salary squabbles, and the left-hander isn't sure he can stand that type of education much longer.

"If a business opportunity I have works and everything is conducive to leaving at mid-season, I'd quit baseball then," the 29-year-old Holtzman said Tuesday.

"If the general condition of the economy was better, I probably wouldn't be here right now," he added at Oakland's Mesa, Ariz., training base.

"I'd like to let him (Finley) go out and find another 19-game winner."

Considering the fact that Finley already has lost a certain 24-game winner named Catfish Hunter, the fiery A's owner may not be pleased with the prospect. But a good businessman never tips his hand.

Russell, the Los Angeles Dodgers shortstop, got his business education while holding out for $75,000 this season. He signed his contract Monday—for less money than he had wanted—but admitted no feelings of malice for club vice-president Al Campanis, who did the negotiating.

When it was over, Russell said: "Campanis and I shook hands, knowing business is business."

But all businesses have their eccentricities. Minnesota Twins hurler Campbell found that out.

Twins' owner Calvin Griffith set a club rule against beards, so Campbell's carefully cultivated shrubbery had to go by workout time Tuesday. The 26-year-old right-hander, Minnesota's top reliever last season with an 8-7 record and a 2.63 earned-run average, appeared despondent with the loss.

"I am disappointed," he said at the twins' training base in Orlando, Fla. "But the ball club's policy says I can't have the beard, and this is one of those times when you can't fight city hall."

Griffith offered another side of the story. "In any business, the board of directors sets the policy and if the people want to work for that company they follow the policy.

"We're no different," Griffith said.

Meanwhile, the number of unsigned players was reduced further when Baltimore signed outfielder Don Baylor; New York Yankees signed outfielder Walt Williams and first baseman Otto Velez; Cleveland Indians signed outfielder Oscar Gamble; infielder Mario Guerrero ended the first Boston Red Sox holdout in 18 years and the Dodgers agreed to terms with outfielder Bill Buckner.

The Dodgers also invited free-agent pitcher Juan Marichal to their camp. Marichal, cut at the end of last season by Boston Red Sox, did not sign with the A's as had been reported.

KEN HOLTZMAN

Mauch Boosts Lintz

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (CP)—The blossoming of Larry Lintz last season injected an exciting new weapon into Montreal Expos' hitherto meagre offensive arsenal.

The element was speed on the basepaths, exemplified best as Lintz sped on spindly legs to 50 stolen bases in 57 attempts, an 88-per-cent success record that bettered those of the four National League baseball players who pilfered more bases.

Among them was Lou Brock of St. Louis Cardinals who swiped a major leauge record 118 bases but was thrown out on 22 per cent of his dashes.

The offensive threat posed by Lintz, who stands five feet, nine inches and weighs 140 pounds, has been enough for manager Gene Mauch to declare that he hopes Lintz fights off the challenges of Jim Cox and Pete Mackanin, among others, for the regular second baseman's job

"I hope Larry Lintz will be my second baseman," said Mauch. "We're going to have to scratch for runs. He can help us as a leadoff hitter by getting those quick early, easy runs that are so important."

The 50 steals were all the more impressive in that Lintz reached base only 122 times in his 113 games. He banged out 76 hits, drew 44 walks and was hit by a pitch twice.

"This doesn't mean he has the job. They all start equal. I'm only saying I hope he can do the job at second. His speed is a plus and can get us the early run. I'd like that."

Lintz said he hopes to improve on his .238 batting average of 1974.

Lintz would like to avoid the added burden of setting out to better his stolen base contribution and sacrifice hit total of 23, both club records.

"I don't set goals because it's not necessary. You just go out there and you see what you can do. Setting goals just puts extra pressure on you that you don't need."

The pressure already is sufficient because Lintz carries some decision-making permission with him to first.

"I'm usually free to take off if I think I can make it, but it depends on the situation. Sometimes I get a signal whether they want me to go or whether they want me to stay."

Olympic Athletes Need Our Support

TORONTO (CP) — Governments, the business community, the media and the public came under fire from amateur sports Tuesday for not supporting Canadian athletes preparing for next year's Olympics.

The broadside was fired by Julian Carroll, executive director of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, who told a news conference that the time has come "to take a stand in favor of the Olympic Games and ask for greater support, encouragement and commitments to the athletes who will represent us."

Carroll, acting as the spokesman for several sports governing bodies, said in his main address that all one hears these days are numerous negative stories about whether or not the 1976 Olympics will proceed as scheduled in Montreal.

"The athletes seem to be a forgotten and neglected factor in this Olympiad," said Carroll. "And that's disturbing because the Olympics, despite the criticisms levelled at them, can have their most lasting and important effect on our athletes, and be a boom to Canadian sport in general."

He denounced the lack of government, business and public support given athletes.

"We are frustrated by the silence of many sectors of Canadian life that should be voicing their support," said Carroll.

"We hear no words of encouragement from the prime minister, from the cabinet or even from Mr. (Marc) Lalonde, the federal minister responsible for sport."

Caroll also expressed disappointment in the news media for its lack of coverage on amateur sports and in the slow sales of Olympic coins and stamps, "a percentage of which flows directly back to the national sports bodies through the Olympic Trust."

"This silence and lack of interest . . . is having a discouraging effect on our athletes and may seriously affect their performance.

"I spoke recently with our (swimmer) Wendy Cook and she said 'with all this talk of Canada possibly losing the Games, I'm wondering whether it's all worth it'."

"And that is a comment of tragic portent since Wendy is currently world ranked in the backstroke and a chief hope for a gold medal."

Conductor Says State Should Save Culture

NEW YORK (CP) — Conductor Jacques Beaudry is one of those who thinks the state must take the responsibility for protecting and developing cultural enterprises.

"If culture is just left to itself, to the hazards of life or the hazards of people's charity, I don't think it can go very far," said the Sorel Que.-born maestro in an interview at the outset of a North American tour.

Culture, he said, should be considered a public service in the same way as other services that cannot be carried on by private enterprise.

"It has to be organized by the state."

The 45-year-old musician, who has conducted the Paris Opera since 1967, looks on television as a means of advancing culture, particularly a knowledge of the performing arts.

"But we use it to sell soap," he said. "If we use it to sell culture, I think it would have a great impact on the cultural level of the people.

"I think the way private television is used is quite degrading for a human being. It should be used at a much higher level."

He returned to his theme of state intervention in the arts when he talked of the cost of musical productions.

"There are always money problems with music because putting on symphony concerts and opera costs more money than the box office can take in," he said. "So you need grants or subsidies from the state or the people.

"In America, I think it's a big problem. . . . Culture is something you cannot evaluate in money. The responsible people have to be aware of that when they say that art, especially music, costs a lot of money, and when they have to decide how much money they should give.

"Musicians deserve to be well paid. A violinist spends much more time studying his instrument to become a good violinist than a medical student to become a good doctor.

"But the doctor opens his office and there are always sick people to provide him with a living."

Beaudry, who plans to spend six months this year in Canada and the United States, is a graduate of the Brussels Royal Conservatory of Music.

"All my superior musical studies were in Brussels and also some superior conducting courses in Holland and Italy," he said.

Lillie Langtry Another Jersey Product

ST. HELIER, Jersey (CP) — The Channel Island of Jersey is noted for its fine breed of cows, its Norman French ancestry, its sandy beaches—and Lillie Langrty.

Jersey-born Mrs. Langtry was an Edwardian beauty. She became an actress, the toast of London and later America, and was a friend of Edward, Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII.

Many of the places on the Jersey visitor's schedule have some Langtry stories and souvenirs.

An example is the famous oil portrait of Lillie by John Everett Millais on her first visit to London. He called it A Jersey Lily and the name stuck. It became the painting of the year when it was exhibited at the Royal Academy in 1878. Last March Jersey bought the painting for £9,500 ($21,850). It now hangs in the Jersey Museum in St. Helier, the capital.

Here, too, can be seen her large silver-gilt travelling case with her brushes, mirrors and an ornate clock shaped like a gold harp.

Incidentally, Lillie was also painted by such well-known artists as Whistler, Burne-Jones and Leighton. Oscar Wilde wrote a poem comparing her with Helen of Troy.

Lillie's prized golden pistol is in Elizabeth Castle, one of the island's major attractions. It's a gloomy fortress with a series of tableaux in various rooms depicting its history. Sir Walter Raleigh was its first Royal Governor.

Right in St. Helier there's the Lillie Langtry bar of the Imperial Hotel with a large portrait of Mrs. Langtry.

Lillie's right name was Emilie Charlotte le Breton. She was nicknamed Lillie because of her fair skin. She was born in 1853 in the old rectory, the daughter of the Anglican Dean of Jersey. The pleasant rectory on Rectory Lane in St. Helier now is a private house called La Belle Maison.

Nearby in St. Saviour Cemetery is Lillie's tomb with a white marble head in her likeness and a spray of Jersey lilies.

Lillie married an Irish widower, Edward Langtry, but her extravagances put her in debt and a friend suggested she go on the stage. She was an immediate success although not a great actress.

Later she travelled and played in the United States. She had her own luxurious railway car designed and built by a Colonel Mann whose boudoir railway car was the rival of the Pullman coach. Lillie toured the U.S. for five years, even had a California ranch. And a town in Texas was named Langtry in her honor.

Edward Langtry died in 1897 and two years later she married Sir Hugo de Bathe of the English nobility. She was married in St. Saviour Church in St. Helier and spent many summers on the island. She even bought a summer villa on lovely St. Aubain's Bay and called it Merman after her favorite horse in her racing stable.

Lillie spent her later life in Monte Carlo and died there in 1929 at the age of 76.

Little Is Known On Sarcoidosis

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told that I have sarcoidosis. I'm short-winded and I have knots on one knee and am getting them on the other.

I'm going into surgery to have one of the knots removed for a biopsy. It is under the skin like a cyst. I also have dizzy spells. Could this be related to the sarcoid disease?—Mrs. L.T.

Your description typifies the enigmatic aspects of sarcoidosis. It can appear almost anywhere on the body, although it is most often found in the lungs, the lymph nodes, the eyes, and on the skin. Short-windedness, because of possible lung involvement, is not an uncommon symptom.

The knots are the sarcoids (FAR-coyds), nodules that resemble TB tubercles, but in appearance only. The disease is not contagious.

About a third of the cases require treatment, and then only if important organs are affected, such as the liver or the eyes. The condition can linger on, often as long as two years. Eventually, though, there is a spontaneous disappearance of the nodules and a clearing of any lesions.

Your biopsy is important in evaluating the sarcoid for a positive diagnosis. The Kveim test is one method of diagnosis. This is done by injecting a solution made from a bit of the tissue under the skin. A purple spot will appear at the injection site about four weeks later, positive evidence of sarcoidosis.

Treatment would consist of steroid medication by injection or by mouth over a period of about six months or until the symptoms disappear.

Little really is known about sarcoidosis. It appears to affect blacks more than whites, women more than men, and usually comes in the 30s or 40s.

Dear Doctor: I have a problem of craving for ice cubes and frozen frosty orange juice which I put in a plastic cup to freeze. All day long, when I'm not doing anything, I sit and eat the frozen orange juice.

I had my tubes tied two years ago and ever since then I have gained weight. That was when the craving started. Will it be harmful to my body, eating all that ice?—Mrs. B.A.L.

A pagophagist is one who has an abnormal craving for ice. More generally, the condition is called "pica," the irresistible urge to consume unusual items of all sorts—starch, dirt, chalk, and the like. Individuals prone to this are often found to have iron-deficiency anemia. In your situation, your pica could be caused, partially at least, by psychological factors related to your infertility. Your weight gain could be another result of this.

There is no harm to the body in eating the ice, except to the enamel of your teeth from all that crunching. Persons with pica related to anemia usually improve rather quickly after iron supplement therapy. You should be checked to see if you have anemia.

It's an incision made in the vaginal outlet during childbirth when the baby's head is a bit too large to permit normal delivery. It is done, quite obviously, to avoid tearing of the vaginal tissues, a tear being more difficult to control than a neat surgical incision. Also, a tear might damage muscles that could cause problems later on, such as urinary incontinence.

Episiotomies are needed in only a small percentage of births, and the incisions are corrected after delivery.

Opening lead — J ♠

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

You don't need to be a mathematician to know that any time you give yourself an extra chance you are playing percentages.

South finds himself in a nice comfortable three-notrump contract. He isn't really happy with the spade lead. It has killed his chance to handle a 4-1 diamond break successfully. If South is just an ordinary, careless, but reasonably good player, he knows that a suit will break 3-2 some 68 per cent of the time. He goes right after diamonds. When the suit fails to break, he struggles manfully to find a ninth trick. The same gods of chance, who caused the bad diamond break, fail to co-operate with him and he winds up with eight tricks and a slight headache.

A careful good player looks around before playing to trick two. He sees those four clubs in dummy and reasons that maybe clubs will break 3-3. If they do and diamonds break also he can collect 12 tricks, instead of the 11 he would get by starting diamonds. Far more important, he sees that a 3-3 club break can give him his ninth trick if diamonds don't break.

Then our careful player gives himself an extra chance at no cost at all. At trick two he leads a club from dummy and ducks in his own hand. It doesn't matter what West does now. South winds the lead; cashes his ace and king of clubs and has established dummy's last club as an all-important extra trick.

Students in Calcutta Declare War on Rats

By RAM SUNDA
CP Correspondent

CALCUTTA (CP) — Students in Calcutta, India's largest and most populous metropolis, have found a new cause.

Hundreds of school and college students spend their evenings and holidays trapping and killing rats.

Says Sushil Gupta, a Calcutta University student: "So far I have killed 300 rats." His sister Aruna, also a student, claims to have killed 125 rats since the campaign began in December.

There has been what one newspaper calls a "rat explosion" in the eastern metropolis of nearly eight million people. According to one senior municipal official, the number of rats may well exceed two million.

The anti-rat campaign is not an organized one, though several social welfare groups and even some major political parties are in it.

In fact, each mohalla (residential district) has its own anti-rat squad.

The pro-China Naxalite Party has backed the campaign, asking Calcutta's young men and women "to learn from the inspiring example of the Chinese people who have successfully battled against rats, sparrows

The Naxalites say there is no use depending on the government for exterminating rats.

The campaign has gathered additional momentum following allegations in the press that a three-month-old child was eaten by giant rats in a Calcutta hospital.

Provincial Health Minister Ajit Panja visited the Chittaranjan Children's Hospital to launch an official investigation into the death of Kajal Baur who had been admitted for a stomach ailment.

Sanat Kumar Baur, Kajal's father, said: "The tragedy shows what a menace rats have become."

Shouting "Little Kajal need not have died," students paraded in south Calcutta.

The government and the Calcutta municipal corporation have promised to organize an official drive against the city's rats.

But the citizens do not seem to take the official assurance seriously.

As Pratap Ganguly, a medical student, put it: "By the time the ponderous government machinery begins to move, thousands of more rats would have been born. The people must take the initiative."

Decline In GNP Reported

OTTAWA (CP) — The economy turned in its worst quarterly performance in about 14 years during the last three months of 1974, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday, bringing renewed Opposition demands in Parliament for tax cuts and a new federal budget to stimulate economic activity.

A slump in consumer buying, corporation profits and exports led to a 13-per-cent decline in gross national product (GNP).

Statistics Canada said the situation here in 1974 was about the same as the pattern a year earlier in the United States.

Total GNP—the value of goods and services produced—rose seven-tenths of one per cent but was more than wiped out by price increases.

The inflation rate, however, was not as bad as in previous quarters. For the last three months the rate was two per cent compared with an average 3.8 per cent for the three previous quarters.

Value of GNP for the year was $139.5 billion, up 17.3 per cent. But inflation trimmed the real growth rate back to 3.7 per cent. Growth in 1973 after discounting the effect of inflation was 6.8 per cent.

Progressive Conservative financial critic Sinclair Stevens (York-Simcoe) said outside the House that tax cuts of between $500 million and $1 billion were needed to bolster consumer buying power.

Finance Minister John Turner said calls for a new budget are "a little premature.' He said he had anticipated a weak fourth quarter because "the depth of the American recession was deeper than we expected.' The U.S. takes about two-thirds of Canadian exports.

The federal budget tabled in November—which covered government operations up to March 31, 1976—included tax reductions and he said it is too early to assess the impact of those measures and whether they should be revised

The growth rate for 1974 was the worst for a full year since 1970, when it was 2.8 per cent.

Stalled Grain Shipments Give Opposition Concern

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs demanded Tuesday that "something has to be done" to get strike-stalled grain shipments moving.

But Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp said the government still hopes collective bargaining will end labor strife that has bottled up West Coast grain shipments.

Jack Murta (PC—Lisgar) had asked in the Commons what plans the government had to correct the situation.

Mr. Sharp replied that the government is "very, very concerned" about the grain tie-up, but it is not advisable for Parliament to legislate an end to the labor troubles "because we believe in the bargaining process."

That didn't satisfy Mr. Murta, who said "something has to be done rather than let the situation continue."

West Coast grain shipments, as well as other shipping business, currently is tied up by four separate labor disputes. The opposition said further delays in grain shipments could cost Canada valuable export markets.

Vancouver harbor facilities have been plugged by strikes for about 70 days out of the last seven months.

The latest is a strike by longshoremen and warehousemen, which comes on top of a strike by grain weighers, part of the 18,600 striking general laborers and trades group employed by the federal government.

Before that, there had been strikes by grain inspectors and grain handlers, the latter of which was stopped by legislation last fall.

Last week, Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, said that despite labor problems Canada still has a good reputation for grain deliveries and that export customers are aware of the current difficulties.

Convicted

OTTAWA (CP) — Twenty-three firms were convicted for offences under the Food and Drugs Act and the Weights and Measures Act from October to December, 1974, the consumer affairs department reported Tuesday.

Bogus $50 Bills

BUDAPEST (AP) — Police seized $4.85 million in counterfeit U.S. $50 bills. They said they found the counterfeits after a routine search of a 23-year-old Yugoslav's bags turned up 97 bogus bills.

Ottawa Plans to Obtain More Oil Sands Leases

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans to obtain additional leases in the Alberta oil sands, giving it room to build more oil extraction plants if they prove feasible, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday.

The government hoped to negotiate a share of an additional 150,000 acres of the oil sands within the next year, the minister told the Commons natural resources committee.

That acreage would be outside the leases already committed to the Syncrude Canada Ltd. project partly owned by Ottawa and the provinces of Alberta and Ontario.

Appearing before the committee to discuss federal investment in the consortium, Mr. Macdonald said the government is willing to discuss plant construction with other groups. But he said they should not expect to get the same deal as Syncrude.

After three multinational oil companies threatened earlier this year to abandon the project, the three governments agreed to put up $800 million to keep it going. The company also was promised world prices for its oil and an exemption from tougher resource taxes imposed last fall.

If Syncrude is successful, the government hopes to see it expanded, increasing planned production of 125,000 barrels of oil a day, Mr. Macdonald said.

After that, it would consider construction of a new plant, which energy department officials say would have a minimum production of 100,000 to 150,000 barrels daily.

The energy minister said the additional production plants probably will be needed within the next 10 years, but he could not say when they will be built.

Mr. Macdonald said during the 25-year life of the plant, total government receipts in taxes and profits will be $8 billion, of which Ottawa will get $2.5 billion for its $300-million investment.

A finance department official appearing with the minister said $1.8 billion will flow to the federal treasury as taxes, leaving federal share of anticipated profits at $700 million.

No breakdown was given for revenue of the other governments involved.

Berger Inquiry Ignores Dispute

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — It was business as usual here Tuesday as Mr. Justice Thomas Berger resumed his inquiry into an application by Canadian Arctic Gas Pipelines Ltd. for a right-of-way across Crown lands for a 2,600-mile natural gas pipeline through Northern Canada.

Government statements Monday that Ottawa might not wait for the judge's report on the social, economic and environmental effects of the $7-billion project before approving the pipeline were ignored both at the inquiry and in public statements by the Berger team.

"We're here, aren't we," said one team member when asked about reports that Judge Berger might resign over statements in the Commons by Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp.

Judge Berger, wearing a blue, pin-striped suit, seemed totally absorbed in evidence of three expert witnesses dealing with background information on the rivers, permafrost and other aspects of the Arctic environment that lie in the path of the pipeline designed to bring Mackenzie Delta and Alaska gas to southern markets.

The background briefings by Arctic experts are the first in hearings into large projects, something that the Berger team sees as possibly an example to be followed in the future.

Shortened filmed versions of the talks are to be made available to schools and libraries across Canada.

If federal cabinet ministers are trying to put down the importance of the Berger inquiry as charged by NDP Parliamentary Leader Ed Broadbent and others, the judge could claim victory Tuesday.

He Never Wears a Watch

Harry Kigiona, a Copper Eskimo who has been repairing watches for most of his adult life, says he has never cared to wear a watch and does not own one. He became involved with timepieces with a tuperculosis patient in hospital. (CP Photo)

Man Who Repairs Watches Never Cared to Wear One

GRANDE PRAIRIE, Ala. (CP) — When Harry Kigiona is seen wearing a watch, chances are he's just testing it for a client.

Mr. Kigiona, a Copper Eskimo who has been repairing clocks and watches most of his adult life, says he has never cared to wear a watch and does not own one.

"It just doesn't feel right on me. I don't like to look at time."

He became involved with timepieces while a tuberculosis patient at the Charles Camsell Hospital in Edmonton.

Born in a tiny Eskimo settlement on the rim of the continent in 1930, he was found alone in an igloo at the age of two, his parents having died from tuberculosis.

He was taken to Aklavik, N.W.T., where he spent his pre-school years with Eskimo friends of his parents—when he was not in hospital for tuberculosis. At school age he was taken to All Saints Anglican Mission, but spent so much time in hospital he earned the nickname Hospital Harry.

In 1946 he went to the Charles Camsell Hospital and stayed in Edmonton seven years. The principal of the hospital teaching staff introduced him to watchmaking.

"He brought me some tools and scrounged up some old clocks and watches," Mr. Kigiona said. "He encouraged me to carry on."

n 1953 he was transferred to the Veterans' Hospital in Ottawa where he apprenticed with an old watchmaker who was a patient at the hospital. In 1955 Mr. Kigiona left hospital and studied watchmaking for a year at the Manitoba Technical Institute in Winnipeg.

He said he had no desire to return to the North because he had no close friends or relations left there, so he came to Grande Prairie and stayed three years before going to Fort Nelson.

A three-year partnership in Fort Nelson Jewellers "didn't pan out as it should have," so Mr. Kigiona returned to Grande Prairie. . .

He now runs his own business—Harry's Watch Repair—and prefers a quiet, unhurried life. In spite of living in the "south," he said he often feels the urge to go into the bush and "get away from the rat-race."

In August, 1974, he visited Inuvik, N.W.T., and "met a lot of people I knew when I left and they still remember me."

But he was saddened by the demoralized condition of many Eskimo people. "They're handed whatever they want. They don't go out and get it."

Meanwhile, he goes ice-fishing nearly every winter weekend, and enjoys big-game hunting. In summer he bicycles and plays golf.

Mr. Kigiona said he is baffled by people who want their watches fixed in a hurry—especially if they are about to go on holiday.

"If they're going on holiday, what do they want a watch for?"

Hair Cut, Servant Hangs Self

BOMBAY (CP) — Muthu Velu, a 17-year-old domestic servant, was ordered by his employer to have his long hair cut or face dismissal.

When the youth protested, the employer summoned a barber and Velu was forcibly given a haircut. The next morning, the servant hanged himself from the kitchen roof.

The Domestic Servants Welfare League denounced the incident as a "wanton attack on the individual rights of poor citizens."

Although long hair is becoming increasingly popular among Indians of all ages, it is frowned on by conservatives as a sign of "vulgar modernization and Westernization."

Many households ban their servants from wearing their hair long for a different reason.

"I do not mind my sons sporting long hair," said a housewife in Bombay's properous Malabar Hill district. "But the servants will not be allowed to do so as it encourages disobedience."

"Once your servant grows his hair long, you may rest assured that the next thing he will do is talk back," said another housewife.

Chandran Devadas, a representative of the servants' welfare league, described the long-hair ban as evidence of "upper-class snobbery and hostility to the working classes."

He said nearly 2,000 servants are being harassed by their employers because of their long hair and called on trade unions to uphold their cause.

Dawood Khan, a Socialist party worker, said the servants grow their hair long for two reasons—to look like film stars and to defy their employers.

Ironically, the Indian Communist party offers no sympathy to the wearing of long hair as a symbol of working-class protest. Communists have pronounced it a sign of "capitalist decadence."

Show to Stay

FARNBOROUGH, England (CP) — Organizers of the Farnborough International Air Show, held in this southern England area every other year, ordered a computer analysis of the British summer weather after the show was badly affected by rain on several days last year. The Society of British Aerospace Companies always reckoned September was the best time—and now the computer has supplied the same answer. So the Farnborough show will stay.

Village Survives Closing of Railway

WINDTHORST, Sask. (CP) — It has been 14 years since the weed-covered railway roadbed here was abandoned, apparently dooming this eastern Saskatchewan community to the same decline and possible disappearance suffered by others where the trains no longer pass.

But the village is still going strong as living proof that rail-line abandonment does not necessarily mean extinction for a small prairie community.

The disappearance of the rail line was a serious blow.

The population of 225 fell to 168 and tax assessment was cut 25 per cent by the exodus of elevator agents, railway workers and their families.

But "we made up our minds we weren't going to lose this town," said John Glover, deputy mayor.

Lots were sold at $5 apiece and a water and sewage system was installed, attracting retired farmers.

Windthorst has since regained its original population and its tax assessment has more than doubled to $350,000 from a low of $160,000.

Secretary-Treasurer Ron Downer said Windthorst is adequately served by a private bus company and a transport company "gives us satisfactory service from the west but not so from the east."

Despite this inconvenience, the village council contends Windthorst is "the fastest-growing village in Saskatchewan."

Mr Glover, who adamantly opposed the rail abandonment in 1961, describes it now "as a blessing in disguise."

"People got mad," said Mr. Downer Their anger gave them the impetus to make improvements in the village.

"These villages and hamlets have long been established," said H. H. Griffin, the transport commissioner who studied the 1961 case.

"Even without the elevators, they are part of the rural patterns about them. The residents were not dependent on the railway as patrons, except for the movement of grain."

But at least one farmer would argue that the rail line abandonment has produced financial losses.

Though Basil McInnes has not added up the dollars, he said he has paid "10 times as much for fuel, 10 times as much for wear on my truck and it took me 10 times as long to haul my grain."

He used to be able to haul his grain quota in two hours; now it takes two days.

Mr. McInnes was one of the farmers most affected by the abandonment since he lives only 1¾ miles from Windthorst and now has to haul his grain 13 miles to Kipling.

Water Dawson, reeve of Chester municipality, said the abandonment left its mark on roads in the area.

"In 1967, we started building a grid road to Corning," he said. "It wore right down. It lost at least 18 inches off the top and it's ready for rebuilding"

Increased road use meant more road maintenance for the municipality. At the same time, it lost its small revenue from railway taxes.

The farmers are again talking about rail line abandonment. The line through Peebles and Kipling and, further south, the line through Stoughton and Carlyle are part of 6,284 miles which Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, said are under review.

If all these lines are abandoned, "this is one area where there would be a big pocket," said another farmer, George Hengen.

Mr. Hengen has watched CNR engines crossing his farm in years past pulling cattle cars, oil tanks, passenger cars and cars carrying machinery and freight. Now he only sees grain cars.

"The CNR really wants to prove it's losing money by re-routing transport of everything but grain over other lines," he contended, saying much less profit is derived from hauling grain than from hauling other commodities.

New Life Preserver Protects from Cold

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — A new Charlottetown elementary school will generate almost all its own energy, both for heating and electrical purposes.

Three 135-horsepower diesel engines are involved, two on regular duty and one on standby. The engines will generate the school's electricity for lighting and other electrical devices, including hot-water heaters, while heat from the engines will be collected to warm the school.

A control panel automatically cuts in the second engine if needed. On cold days, a conventional oil-fired boiler can be used to supplement the engine heat.

John Gilmore, deputy public works minister, said the government expects to recover the additional capital costs involved in about six years. Savings will come from increased efficiency in the use of fuel and not having to pay an electricity bill estimated at $1,000 a month.

The new system is 80-per-cent efficient in recovering available energy from fuel. Conventional systems operate in the 50-to 75-per-cent range. Oil-fired turbines used to produce all of P.E.I.'s electricity are about 30-per-cent efficient and some of that is lost through transmission lines.

Catalytic converters on the diesel engines in the new school will burn up about 95 per cent of the carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emissions, making the new system more environmentally acceptable than conventional heating.

Extra acoustical insulation has been installed in the school's boiler room to ensure quiet in other areas of the building.

Mr. Gilmore said the government is also doing research on possible applications of heat pumps and solar energy units.

Recently-built schools have energy-conserving features such as thicker insulation, fewer windows and orientation of structures so that the windows are on the sunny side of the site.

Log Cabin May Make Comeback

WINNIPEG (CP) — A civil engineering project being conducted at the University of Manitoba may give a new life to the historic log cabin.

Civil engineers Dr. A. M. Lansdown and Dr. A. B. Sparling and Richard Speers of the university's engineering department have modified the basic log-cabin design, had an experimental model built and are testing it this winter.

It will be warmer in cold climates than conventional housing and easier to heat, they said.

A student has agreed to set up house in the 12-by-14-foot structure and evaluations will be made from tests taken during the winter on moisture levels, heat retention and costs and general comfort.

One of the first changes in the cabin was its appearance. Instead of the traditional placement of logs, the walls have been built with round poplar, six to eight inches in diameter and a foot long, stuck together with mortar.

The result is walls about one foot thick with as much insulating power as a conventional house with 3½ inches of insulation, Dr. Lansdown said. An oil space-heater is the only heating source.

The floor is built of concrete and a quarter-inch of plywood and there is a conventional peak roof.

The idea began a few years ago when the three men studied northern Manitoba housing.

"Our findings indicated that conventional housing was too costly because most of the materials had to be brought from far away to many remote communities," said Dr. Lansdown, adding that framed structures also cost more to maintain and deteriorate rapidly in extreme cold.

The study noted that for conventional housing to withstand the northern temperatures, the walls would have to be 10 to 15 inches thick.

"An ordinary cabin might have been equally adequate, but then again large logs don't grow in the north so they would have to be transported in as well."

The men designed the cabin from early drawings and plans and used as much local material as possible.

Dr. Lansdown said some northern Indians consider the cabin a step back from conventional houses.

Karate Expert A Bouncer

HAMILTON (CP) — Ollie Krupica, 25, is a quiet man who dresses conservatively for his job and speaks in such a low tone that you have to strain to hear him.

But he is a handy man to have around when trouble strikes.

Mr. Krupica, who came from Czechoslovakia six years ago, is six feet tall, weighs 210 pounds and practises karate at the black-belt level.

He is a bouncer at a downtown nightclub. Occasionally, he is called upon to deal with persons who cause trouble.

"I like to stay in the background and not interfere unless it's absolutely necessary," Mr. Krupica said in an interview.

"Then I will try to persuade those concerned that it's better to cool it. Mostly, they see reason and everything ends all right but sometimes you get the guy who doesn't want to be friendly.'

What happens then?

Mr. Krupica said two men who were asked to leave returned two nights later looking for trouble.

"They were politely asked to leave at least half a dozen times,' Mr. Krupica said. "They refused so I asked them to step into a lobby.

"One of them immediately swung at me. I knocked him down. He reached into his pocket and because I have had knives pulled on me before, I applied a kick to his solar plexus.

"It was over, really, for the other guy didn't offer too much trouble."

On another occasion, a man in a long overcoat visited the nightclub.

"When I approached to speak to him he turned his back and then came round to hit me with a baseball bat."

"It caught me on the head but didn't knock me down. So I took the bat off him and whacked him with it a few times."

Apart from his nightclub duties, Mr. Krupica has a part-time job as a driver and soon hopes to make it full-time.

When he first came to Canada he did a bit of amateur boxing and toyed with the idea of becoming a professional wrestler. But he gave it up.

"It's too rough," he said.

Kilkenny Rewarding Town For Visitors to Ireland

KILKENNY, Ireland (CP) — Kilkenny, a former capital of Ireland, is a well-preserved medieval town and the design centre of the country. The Irish writer Terence de Vere White considers it "the most rewarding city in Ireland outside Dublin."

Kilkenny is a place of 12,000 people, hilly streets, great historic buildings and unexpected discoveries for anyone driving out of Dublin to such places as Waterford, Tipperary or Cork.

The romantic, towered Butler Castle, rising above the River Nore, dominates the city. The Butler family was the most powerful among Irish and Anglo-Norman families like O'Hely, Roth, Archer, Carroll, O'Doyle, O'Ryan, Walsh, O'Donoghoe, Power, Purcell, O'Shea and LeMareschal.

The castle is surrounded by woods and gardens offering pleasant walks along the river. It was the scene of a reunion in 1967 when Butlers came from all parts of the world.

Most of the old buildings have been kept in good condition since the first archeological society in Ireland was started here 125 years ago.

St. Canice's, a beautiful 13th century cathedral is built, on the site of a church founded in the sixth century by St. Canice or Kenneth or Kenny, who gave his name to the city.

A tower 101 feet high stands beside the church, which has a large collection of 16th century effigies of knights, barons, bishops and numerous Butlers and their wives. St. Mary's Cathedral boasts a tower that is higher by 99 feet.

At Kilkenny College Jonathan Swift studied, as did the dramatist William Congreve George Berkeley.

Medieval buildings lead modern lives. The other House, once the home of a prosperous Tudor merchant, now is a museum. The Toll House is the city hall, and the courthouse is lodged in a castle of the Grace family.

The Kilkenny Design Workshops alone would be worth a stopover. They were set up by the government in 1965 to develop creative talents so that Irish industrial products could compete both at home and abroad. Artists, craftsmen and technicians were brought over from Europe to instruct in weaving, ceramics, pottery and jewellery.

The workshops are housed in former stables of Butler Castle. Work is exhibited in lofty, bright rooms and is for sale. The designs are sold to Irish firms.

Product include silver and gold jewelry, silverware, wrought iron, copper work, mohair throws, linen curtains, bowls and plates of cherry and elm and distinctive pottery.

Downtown the legendary fighting Kilkenny cats were not to be seen—just a few cats curled up in the sun looking well-fed and domesticated. But in salute to its famous cats the city holds an annual cat show.

Kilkenny celebrates the fact that it has the oldest brewery in the country with an annual beer festival the last week in May. A Munich band is invited and plays along with local bands in a big tent in St. James's Park. A Queen of the Land is chosen on the basis of her farm knowledge as well as good looks, and special racing events are held. Children are amused at a circus and carnival rides.

Kilkennians open their homes to take in any overflow from the hotels. Eight miles out of town is a youth hostel occupying Foulkrath Castle. And with fishing, racing, the college, boutiques, dance halls, tennis courts and the design workshops, there are plenty of young people around in this old city.

Study One Centre for Belleville, Trenton, Picton Ambulances

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Gerry Bahr, provincial investigator studying Belleville ambulance services, says a single ambulance dispatch centre for Belleville, Trenton and Picton is being considered as a cost-cutting measure.

The provincial government has stated that Belleville is a "high cost" area for ambulance service delivery. Mr. Bahr is under orders from provincial health minister Frank Miller to devise a "care-effective, cost-efficient service for the city and surrounding area."

"It appears to me that a computer study is going to show we have more vehicles in the area than we need," said Mr. Bahr in a telephone interview today.

He said a central dispatch system for the three municipalities would erase duplication and generally cut operating costs of the service.

"The area is over-serviced," said Mr. Bahr. "We are looking at evolving a central dispatch that would make better use of ambulances. We are not making as good a use of the vehicles as we could."

During the past week Mr. Bahr has interviewed the two Belleville operators and said "they are both concerned and have assured me of their co-operation for a most cost-effective system."

"We're going to have a little bit of trouble coming up with something though," said Mr. Bahr. "Both operators are holding their positions that they certainly don't want to amalgamate."

The study will continue for two weeks, gathering information from citizens, doctors and health officials.

Raid Takes Thirteen Lives

Israelis Victors In Hotel Battle

TEL AVIV (CP) — Thirteen persons were killed and 11 wounded today after a seaborne Arab guerrilla assault on a Tel Aviv hotel, military headquarters said.

Seven out of eight Arab guerrillas, three Israeli soldiers and three civilians died in a battle at a beach hotel where the raiders seized hostages, a spokesman said.

Eleven persons, including five soldiers, were wounded and one guerrilla was taken alive, he said.

But he added the casualty figure may not be final. Rescue workers digging into the debris of the Savoy Hotel—wrecked by explosions and gunfire—may uncover more victims.

Meanwhile in Damascus Palestinian sources said more than 100 Israelis were killed or wounded in the battle for the hotel which ended when guerrillas blew up themselves and the hotel.

Reporting the claim, the Palestinian news agency, WAFA said here that 50 Israeli troops were killed or wounded in the battle.

A Palestinian spokesman said the guerrillas detonated the explosion when their ammunition ran out and when Israeli soldiers had virtually overrun them.

The spokesman said 20 civilians were killed and at least 30 wounded when the Israelis stormed the hotel. He reported room to room fighting which he said increased the civilian casualties.

In Beirut a Lebanese defence ministry communique said Palestinian guerrillas opened fire on five Lebanese air force jets in the mistaken belief that they were Israeli raiders retaliating for the Tel Aviv hotel attack.

In Tel Aviv, a gunman was reported captured at mid-day about seven hours after Israeli troops stormed the hotel seized by the guerrillas.

Defence Minister Shimon Peres earlier had said all the guerrillas had been killed in the army operation. But the gunman was discovered about noon after shots were heard as troops searched the area surrounding the hotel.

Military sources said the Arabs had held about 30 persons hostage at the hotel for about six hours. The hostages included American, British and German tourists, the sources said.

The Palestine guerrilla command in Beirut said the raiders, reported to have landed from two rubber boats on Tel Aviv's Mediterranean waterfront, were members of Assifah, the military arm of the Al Fatah guerrilla organization.

Both Al Fatah and the overall Palestine Liberation Organization are headed by Yasser Arafat. The raid was certain to strengthen Israel's refusal to negotiate with the PLO and its chieftain.

Damage to the hotel was so heavy that army bulldozers were called in to clear the streets of debris. Troops searched the rubble for bodies and survivors.

The raiders presumably came down the coast from the Lebanese border, 75 miles north of Tel Aviv. They stormed ashore shortly before midnight and ran through the streets, firing and throwing grenades.

Erb Is Arrested, Taken to Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — Captain Brian Erb of the controversial cargo ship Answer arrived this morning from Gaspe under Quebec Provincial Police escort to face charges of having stolen the vessel here Feb. 23.

The Answer's game of cat and mouse with the federal icebreaker John A. Macdonald ended Wednesday when Captain Erb and his young crew of 13 men and five women were arrested at sea and airlifted by helicopter to Gaspe.

Shadowed by the John A. Macdonald, the Answer had been manoeuvring in ice-clogged waters amid gale warnings in the Gulf of St. Lawrence for 10 days in a bid to reach international waters.

"It's the ice that stopped me," Captain Erb, 31, said on his arrival at provincial police headquarters in Quebec City, "I didn't have any choice; I couldn't go any further."

Looking relaxed and smiling despite the eight-hour trip by car from Gaspe, the captain said he had papers attesting ownership rights to the ship.

No charges were laid against the crew members, who spent Wednesday night in a local hotel and were reported today planning to leave for Sept-Iles, Que., 250 miles northwest.

The Answer currently is en route to Sept-Iles, piloted by six Canadian Coast Guard personnel under escort by the Macdonald following its seizure some 60 miles northeast of the Magdalen Islands. An RCMP spokesman in Montreal said Wednesday the two ships were expected to dock in 24 hours, although they may head for another port if weather conditions force course changes.

Mine Closed

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Canadian Johns-Manville Co. Ltd. has announced permanent closing April 30 of its asbestos mine in Reeves Township about 23 miles west of here.

The open-pit mine was temporarily closed two weeks ago because the company was unable to meet new clean air requirements of the natural resources ministry.

Oil Lands Give Terms For Freeze

ALGIERS (AP) — Ending their first summit conference, representatives of the oil cartel countries sign a declaration today on future relations with customer countries.

The leaders of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) approved Algerian President Houari Boumedienne's proposal for a five-year freeze in the "real" price of oil, that is, in terms of its purchasing power, provided their Western customers make a large contribution to development of the Third World, delegation sources said.

Drapeau Wants Money

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau has indicated the city may attempt to use Olympic lottery revenues as a source of funds for the 1976 Olympics building program. A pledge that lottery money would be used only for Games administration and not to build capital projects in Quebec was a key element in overcoming resistance by other provinces to the lottery, The Globe and Mail says.

Iran and Iraq Settle Quarrel

ALGIERS (AP) — Algerian President Houari Boumedienne announced today that Iran and Iraq have signed an agreement resolving the conflict that has frequently led them to armed border clashes.

Minutes after Boumedienne made the announcement, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi of Iran and Iraqi strong-man Saddam Hussein embraced in the middle of the conference hall where leaders of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries ended their summit meeting.

Then both leaders walked up to the podium and simultaneously embraced Boumedienne amid the applause of the assembled OPEC leaders.

No details of the peace agreement were immediately known, but it was likely to include a provision allowing Iraq to terminate its war against Kurdish insurgents.

Higher Beef Prices Likely by Yearend

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

Canadians should be prepared to pay substantially higher prices for beef, probably by the end of this year, Gordon Parke, president of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, said in Belleville Wednesday.

Mr. Parke, a working rancher from Cache Creek, B.C., was winding up a four-week cross-Canada tour during which, he said, he wanted to emphasize two major points:

"Beef prices are lower now than they have been in years in terms of the consumer's ability to pay. In 1961 it took 22 per cent of family income to pay for food and beverages. By 1970, this had dropped to 16 per cent and in 1974, was back up to 18 per cent.

"The second point is that there is absolutely no price gouging going on anywhere along the line between the beef producer and the beef buyer. This includes the farmer or rancher, the packer and the retailer," he said.

Mr. Parke said the glut of beef now on the market should disappear by the end of the year. "Then the price will have to go up all along the line," he said.

"When this happens, the consumer shouldn't be surprised or suspicious. The only alternative would be large government subsidies that would be just as expensive to the consumer in the long run."

National Secretariat on Energy Suggested

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Establishment of a national secretariat of federal and provincial energy ministers and more emphasis and funding of long-term energy development were among recommendations included in a report released Wednesday by the Science Council of Canada.

A. A Bruneau, chairman of the councils committee on energy policies, said in an interview Wednesday in Toronto that the federal and provincial governments should not make further financial commitments to the Alberta oil sands project.

Present technology only allows a small amount of oil to be extracted without costly 'digging. He said a way must be found to get the oil without expensive digging.

Last month, the federal, Alberta and Ontario governments invested $600 million into the Syncrude project in the sands.

Mr. Bruneau said the investment is an indication of the government's policy—reacting to events rather than creating long-term policies.

The report recommends additional research and development spending of between $42 million and $65 million a year.

It also urges greater government research efforts into existing energy sources such as oil, gas, coal and nuclear power and new supply sources such as the sun, hydrogen, fuel cells and biomass-gas produced from organic materials.

The report goes on to recommend an immedate $100 million a year be spent to advance development of the Candu family of nuclear reactors.

The 135-page report, based on three years of study, states that research is impossible without policy direction from government on what types of energy will be used in future.

The answer, is regularly-scheduled meetings by federal and provincial representatives to deal with policy and a permanent secretariat to analyse projets.

A national policy should also indicate development priorities for the large projects now needed, including the oil sands, hydro and pipelines.

Campaign On To Save Band

A mass rally in support of retaining the Kingston-based Air Transport Command Band is being planned by Kingston and the Islands MP Flora MacDonald with the support of other prominent Kingstonians.

Last Friday, Captain Kenneth Moore, bandmaster of the ATC band, received written confirmation the band would be phased out, although no date was set for the defence department's final reduction of military bandsmen to 160. This would reduce the number of military bands in Canada to about four.

Interested area residents have rallied behind the Kingston MP, who will extend an invitation to the rally to Defence Minister James Richardson and the joint chiefs of staff.

Data for the rally will depend on when the defence minister can attend.

Province Provides Funds For Trail Improvement

Work starts Monday on grooming 100 miles of snowmobile trails in central Hastings County — a co-operative effort between the Quinte-Hastings Recreational Trail (QHRT) the provincial's government.

The venture, funded by the province, also has trail officials hopeful it indicates stepped-up government interest in the future of their big outdoors facility running 250 miles across the Quinte district.

The volunteer QHRT organization earlier in January added a 350-mile snowmobiling network — originally created in 1969 in nine central townships by the Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association —to its major recreation trail running from Lake Ontario to the northwest end of the county.

The takeover co-incided with acceptance by the provincial government of need for organizing trail facilities in Ontario. First step was taken with availability of funds to designated organizations to spruce up snowmobile routes.

In recent months, the trail group has been working with district natural resources ministry officials on selecting an area of QHRT winter trails.

The ministry has now approved a trail pattern designated for official upkeep.

It swings north through Madoc Township (from near Cooper) to Cashel-Grimsthorpe townships' boundary then, west to the Wollaston Lake townships' line, and south through part of Marmora township.

The QHRT has now received $1,750 to launch grooming necessary to define the trails, before district ministry equipment moves in for the finishing touches.

Jim Staveley says another $1,750 is slated — if the weather holds and ground conditions remain workable.

Four workers — two each from the Marmora and Gilmour areas at opposite ends of the 100-mile route — will clear overgrowth to ministry standards — eight feet wide and high — and post directional signs.

Such marking has proved important. In the past, city-dwelling snowmobilers from outside the Quinte region have lost directions along the trails, said Mr. Staveley.

Selection of QHRT for the snowmobile project holds out promise that the main recreation trail — plagued by lack of upkeep funds since it was created as a Local Initiatives Program winter work scheme three years ago — has caught provincial government attention, speculates Mr. Staveley.

Take 3

"The interest the ministry has taken in us is an indication we will be taken as one of Ontario's designated recreation trails," said Mr. Staveley.

Among provincial plans announced last November by Resources Development Secretary Grossman was identification of facilities for multiple recreation use. An advisory council was planned to assist development of a "complete trails system."

Rural Crossing To Get Signals

MELROSE — Federal funding — the major contribution — has been approved for improving safety at another Canadian Pacific level-crossing in Tyendinaga Township.

The Canadian Transport Commission has approved a $14,000 grant to finance installation of automatic warning signals at a CP Rail crossing between the township's fourth and fifth concessions.

The installation is part of an ongoing program to improve safety at crossings along the rail line which slants across the rural township, said Bill Walsh, the municipality's clerk-treasurer.

Visibility is reduced at the crossing because of curves and a rock cut, he said.

The federal contribution to the $17,000 installation amounts to 80 per cent, with the township paying 12.5 per cent and the railroad 7.5 per cent, he said.

Annual maintenance costs of such crossings are about $700 a year and are shared equally by the township and the railroad, he said.

Bancroft Mill Back In Limited Service

BANCROFT — The Domtar Woodlands Chip and Pallett Mill at Bird's Creek, four miles north of Bancroft, which ceased operations Jan. 24, resumed a portion of its chipping program this week.

Ben Burtchael, mill manager, said things have improved a bit during February in the lumber business.

"We're sending our chips to the Domtar's plant at Cornwall," said Mr. Burchael "and we hope to be back to International (the International Paper Company) in Tonawada by the end of May."

At the moment, the local plant is not buying any chip lumber from local bush operators yet and Mr. Burtchael is not prepared to say when they will be ready for local purchases.

"We're trying to reduce our inventory and we expect that it will last for about two months," he said.

However, the pallett board cutting operation at the Domtar Woodlands mill near Bancroft is still at a standstill following the termination of operations on Nov. 1, 1974.

Mr. Burtchael said that he is optimistic that the present slump in the lumber industry would be over fairly soon.

The optimistic attitude is shown in proposed renovations that are being implemented at the local plant.

The mill is being extended to include facilities for the workers and for equipment to modernize the pallett operation when it resumes.

The new area will also include a double surface planer and an automatic sorter.

The staff at the Domtar plant now numbers 16, compared to the over 60 a year ago.

There are also six drivers employed who handle the chip trucks on the long hauls.

Library Budget Up Sharply

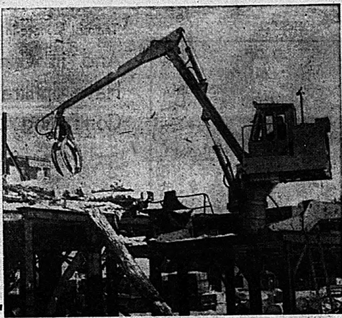
PICTON — The Picton Public Library board has submitted a request to town council for a 1975 budget of $23,500 to be raised through the town's tax levy.

The proposed budget includes a total of $17,178 for expenditures on books, magazines, light and heat, insurance, films, telephone, printing and stationery, new equipment and library supplies. In 1974 these items cost a total of $13,450.

Salaries this year would require a total of $28,958 under the new budget. In 1974, salaries totalled $24,526.

Head librarian Valerie Creasy would receive an annual salary of $8,105 in comparison with $7,172 in 1974.

Receipts expected in the new budget total $47,342 in comparison with $42,749 last year.



Moving Again

For the first time in a month, the logs are moving through the line at the Domtar chip mill near Bancroft. Crane starts logs on series of operation beginning with debarking and ending with piling of chips ready for shipping to paper mill at Cornwall. The Bancroft plant has been shut down since January 24 because of lack of demand for its product.

Private Road Blocking Proposed Medical Clinic

PICTON — Picton mayor Donald King has cautioned town council may establish "a very dangerous precedent" if it agrees to purchase a paved road to the Proctor-Lewyt plant, owned by the estate of the late Harvey J. McFarland.

The private road, constructed a number of years ago when the Proctor-Lewyt plant opened on Main St. East, has been offered for sale by the estate of Picton's late mayor.

Recently, Picton veterinarian Dr. Robert Clapp decided to buy land adjacent to the road as a construction site for a medical clinic. The clinic would be adjacent to the site of Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital.

The plan hit a snag, however, when it was discovered that a building permit could not be granted for construction of such a clinic on land that does not front a public street.

Last November, Dr. Clapp's attorney, Malcolm Mcarland wrote a letter to council asking if the town would consider purchase of the road. This would make construction of the clinic possible as the road no longer would be private.

Council agreed that it was not its responsibility to buy the road and a letter indicating this stand was forwarded to Mr. McFarland.

This week council received a second letter from Mr. McFarland seeking reconsideration of its decision.

Councillor Harry Abram observed the private road has been a council issue on four separate occasions and suggested the matter should be handled conclusively by referring it to the finance and administration committee.

Comedian Dave Broadfoot and sidekick Carol Robinson prepared to stage their show, Take a Beaver To Lunch, Wednesday evening at Trenton High School. The "luncheon" comedy review was met favorably by the 350-member audience who were given the opportuntiy through the sponsorship of the Trenton Rotary Club.

Project Christopher: People Helping People

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — If World War Two had not occurred, John Brayler would not have become a Roman Catholic priest. A university graduate, Father John went overseas along with Hubert Campbell of Trent Valley Paperboard Mills, Floyd Bell of A and P Food Stores, Belleville, and Alec Cunningham of Northern Electric. They were all on loan to the British Army as officers.

Father John was a company commander with assault troops hitting the beaches on D-Day and fighting through Europe until the end of the war. He said the things he saw made him become a priest. After the war he took theology and entered the priesthood.

The former-army major became a priest in Montreal. In 1960 he started Project Christopher. "I found that youth wanted something to do in the summer. I challenged them to go out and work voluntarily. We took young people of 15 and 16 years of age to Prince George, B.C., where they dug ditches at that province's first integrated college. Those summer programs have continued on since then."

Paule Emile Leger was his Cardinal. In 1967 Cardinal Leger granted Father John permission to do special projects, so he opened Project Christopher to non-Montrealers for the first time.

Oliver Francis first met Father John in Wisconsin. Brother Ollie, of Milwaukee, related in an interview that [illegible] John was working with [illegible] at the time. He has been working with Project Christopher since.

"I saw the attitude of two students change completely after talking to Father John," he said. Brother Ollie is in Canada on a visa, and wants to make Project Christopher his apostolate. His order is the Society of the Divine Saviour.

After working with young people throughout the United States and Canada, Father John has now got a permanent home base.

Bob Mathews a farmer on the sixth concession, Rawdon Township, lets Father John use an old house on his property. When Father John, Brother Ollie and the 13 members of the one-year team returned to the house after one of their trips around the country, Mr. Mathews had done much panelling in the old home.

"From June to October 150 young people have staying here for some time," Father John said. "We try to be a catalyst. We have two years work ahead of us, speaking and organizing youth. We have two programs at the moment, Christian living for youth, and Christopher Leadership. Christopher means Christ bearer."

"Small towns, villages, rural life have been neglected. The big cities have their programs, and we have ours," Father John explained. "We don't go into an area with a prepared program, we go in and listen."

"We do not take jobs away from anyone, but around here we have helped people on fixed incomes. We have fixed their windows and helped with spring cleaning. We are a service to anyone in need. We have got enough work around here for the next two years."

Father John believes that his one-year team needs physical work. "We break axe handles and hammers, but they are not going to learn unless they use them. It is a fascinating experiences for them to watch the birth of a calf. Most of them come from cities.

Although a Roman Catholic priest, Father John points out that Project Christopher is non-denominational. "We have all types of religions and non-religious people here. We never ask a person what he did yesterday. We accept a person here at face value, maybe for the first time he is treated as a real person," he said.

Murray Still Undecided On Fire Protection Source

WOLLER — Fire protection for Murray Township provided by the Trenton Fire Department is still in effect, Reeve Harry Lafferty said at council Wednesday evening. However, Trenton will be losing some business in the future, the reeve added.

"Whether we deal with Trenton or not, we have to deal with Frankford," Mr. Lafferty told council, "since the residents in the north end of Murray Township are not happy with the fire protection. We had two or three delegations last year."

Murray Township used to receive fire aid from various municipalities, but last year gave all of the business to Trenton for $12,000. In a letter to Murray recently, Trenton said it wanted $30,000 for the same services this year.

Two weeks ago, Murray council expressed astonishment at this figure and decided it would seek fire protection from other sources. Last night, Murray council drafted a letter for clerk Ken Rose to send to Trenton council.

Trenton has sent two letters, with Mr. Rose receiving the first communication Feb. 14.

"What are we going to do if we have a fire and Trenton doesn't come," Reeve Lafferty pondered. "What if Trenton tells people they wrote a letter to Murray and they never answered? What if a guy's house burns down? What are we going to tell him?"

In other business, Al Baldwin of Barcovan Beach Rd. appeared before council and spoke on behalf of another resident who wanted a building permit. Council granted the request.

Them Mr. Baldwin asked for a building permit for his own property. Council said that his half-acre site already had a house upon it, and the zoning would not permit any more.

Mr. Baldwin then told council that some cottages in the area were being winterized, a piece of property the same size as his had nine buildings upon it from previous years, and one resident had recently dug a cesspool which had polluted the surrounding wells.

Clerk Rose said conversion of cottages to residences in a recreational zoned area was contrary to the bylaw. He also said that the ministry of the environment approves all sewage facilities, and sends the clerk a copy, and he had not received any such notices that he could remember. Council instructed that an investigation into the matters be carried out.

Mr. Baldwin went on to ask council if he could operate a hot-dog stand on his property from a bus. The clerk said he would have to check with the Murray planner to see if it was permissible.

Economic Pressures

The cost of newsprint and other staples of the publishing industry has hit hard at newspapers and magazines alike. In Britain, there is talk of one or more national newspapers perhaps being forced to cease publication.

Times are hard all over. On this continent magazines that have been forced to reduce their size and content include Holiday and the Canadian women's magazine, Chatelaine. Chatelaine actually is now a neater and more manageably-sized publication. If it has been forced into this mini circumstance it is one which, as often happens, has won readers' approval.

Another which has a new, and in its case a somewhat less attractive appearance than before, yet with no loss in circulation — indeed it is to be published twice as often — is the California-based Ambassador College's Plain Truth.

Circulated free hitherto, Plain Truth lately has been seeking voluntary subscriptions to keep up with rising costs, and it is now being published in the form of a small newspaper still without benefit of advertising.

Included in the latest issue of Feb. 3 is an article which examines some of the recent neighborly differences of Canada and the United States.

Plain Truth ranges widely, for there is also an article on little-known Albania, with the heading, "No Room for God in the World's First Atheistic State." Articles too about the arms race, the energy crisis, women's lib and much else.

One publication which arrives at this office and which is a handy size is the Japanese-published PHP standing for Peace, Happiness, Prosperity. It is in the same catholic tradition as Plain Truth. Arnold Toynbee is one of PHP's distinguished contributors and it addresses itself to many of the urgent matters of the day — Toynbee's What Man Must Learn From History being a case in point.

Large or small, the world would be a poorer place without publications such as these. The ultimate calamity would be that they should cease publication altogether, but by cutting back somewhat, and by ingenuity, many are carrying on as before, and with renewed vigor.

Flu Hits Hard

It has not taken either the winds or the ides of March to herald that perennial hazard of these late winter days — influenza.

There has been a lot of it around, for some time now, and it seems to come in a variety of exotic — some might quarrel with that descriptive — guises, from Hong Kong flu (of which there apparently are several strains) to the Port Chalmers variety.

Port Chalmers is a community near Dunedin in the south island of New Zealand where this particular strain reportedly was first identified.

Not long ago there was the sad story of a young Filipino couple who died within days of each other in Sarnia. Victims of what was described at the time as an unidentifed infectious virus, they left a seven-month-old son who was being cared for by friends.

Beware the Ides of March is the legendary warning from the days of Caesar, referring as it does to the ancient Roman calendar — the fifteenth day of March, as well as of May, July, and October, and the thirteenth day of other months.

There is one small girl in Belleville who might link it all with a nasty bout of flu. Last year it struck on her fourth birthday, and now with that event a week or so away, she has it again.

Better to have it over with now.

'... BETTER TIGHTEN THE BELT!'

Collective Bargaining's Boomerang Effect on Government Policies

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Their political opponents swear that the Liberal talent for power really flows from their skill at theft.

Routinely through all the 34 of the last 40 years they have ruled the land, the Liberals have simply lifted their best vote-grabbing ideas from the CCF-NDP.

Just ask NDP veteran Tommy Douglas and Stanley Knowles. They both watched it happen.

The biggest political idea heist of all was that vote-winning whiz-bang, Family Allowances.

But there have been others ... the old age pension ... unemployment insurance ... collective bargaining for public service.

Right now it is coming through loud and clear from the taxpayers that collective bargaining for public servants was not really such a terrific idea after all.

For the way things have been working out in recent years in the Post Office, air and other transport, inspection services and other federal functions, the public servants have become the masters through the simple process of holding the public to ransom while Parliament and government, terrified of union power, does little except pay off.

But something is beginning to happen in this last wave of public service strikes with both Liberals and Conservatives starting to show a bit of courage and perhaps even muscle.

The Conservatives were first, and the Liberals, who so successfully pilfered NDP ideas now are taking from the Tories.

It was only a couple of months ago that Otto Jelinek, one of the two Tories to survive the Liberal sweep, in last summer's election, of the Toronto ridings, proposed a possible cure for public service strike blackmail.

It was what he called "sector bargaining' for longer contracts.

He has put all the different air transport services under one collective bargaining roof. Same with the railways. Ditto the inspection services.

Unions, providing the same basic public service but fragmented into differing trades and professions, would be brought under one roof for negotiations on contracts of two or more years.

All Otto Jelinek wanted, really, was some tilting of the scales back into better balance between the rights of the taxpayers to receive the services for which they pay and the rights of the public servants to shut them down.

There had to be a fairer sawoff between union freedom to strike and the publics right to freedom from extortion through harassment.

So along comes, of all unlikely people on his record, Labor Minister John Munro.

And what does he propose? Same thing as Otto Jelinek.

He even lifts some of Jelinek's own words.

And in a recommendation to Cabinet he proposed sector bargaining through what he calls a Canada Labor Relations Council.

Listen to him echo, almost word for word, Otto Jelinek.

"... there are too many bargaining points, too many bargaining agents and unions.

"The result (in the case of the air travel industry) as any holiday traveller in Canada knows, is something as exciting as the Olympic lottery.

"As he embarks on his holiday (or business trip) confident that the airline pilots are working and that the machinists are also on the job, there just may happen to be a walkout of ticket clerks and other personnel.

"And even if all these employees (federal public service and Crown Corporation Air Canada) are working, the trip still could be placed in jeopardy by striking air traffic controllers, technnicians, airport electricians, fire-fighters or runway cleaners, baggage handlers, fuel pumpers.

"There are similar difficulties in the movement of grain, with risk of its steady flow being halted, if in the long stream of handling it,. there is labor peace on the dockside, but not on the ships, the waterways, railways, or inspection services.

"It is clear," writes the Labor Minister to the Cabinet, "that the system now lacks coherence and has a great potential for conflict."

He is telling the taxpayers!

They have known it for years, have howled their rage and frustration for years, but nobody in government was listening.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

March 6, 1955.

The City of Belleville Health Department has completed distribution of request forms for polio vaccine to parents of pupils in Grades 1 and 2 of Belleville's public schools. Parents are reminded that the serum, used last year on 450,000 U.S. school children is harmless. Health authorities are not sure of its effectiveness but the Ontario Health Department is conducting a province-wide test of the serum this year.

The possibility of a profitable producing uranium mine in Hastings County moved closer to reality this week with an announcement by Faraday Uranium Mines that the company will spend $700,000 for exploration and development work at Bancroft in the next six months.

30 YEARS AGO

March 6, 1945.

The Regional War Labor Board for Ontario upon an application made by Local 425 UAW-CIO has directed the Consolidated Optical Co. of Belleville to pay a night shift premium to hourly rated employees working on the night shift. The amount is .5 cents per hour.

The Belleville Community Concert Association expects to have a sold out house for this coming year — according to Mr. Russell E. Hackborn, President.

40 YEARS AGO

March 6, 1935.

Belleville Hydro Electric System closed the year with a surplus of $29,977, the largest since 1931. As a result of this it was decided to ask the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario for a substantial reduction in rates at the earliest possible time.

Appointed at the age of eighteen years in July 1932 as clerk of the township of Rawdon, Lorne C. Bateman of Springbrook, is one of the youngest, if not the youngest of municipal clerks in Ontario. He was appointed a justice of the peace on the recommendation of the Hon. J. Robert Cooke, — a position he held until this year when the Hepburn Government set up a new magisterial and justice of the peace system.

50 YEARS AGO

March 6, 1925.

'At the regular monthly meeting of the Victorian Nurse Committee Miss Shand indicated that a great need is felt in Belleville for a baby clinic. All babies needing medical care would be sent to their medical doctor. Weighing the babies, giving advice as to nutrition, clothing, growth and care of milk would be the kind of service offered. Miss Shand suggested it might be called a Mothers' Conference. No doctor would be in attendance at the outset.

At a winter meet of horses held on the Bay of Quinte two events were staged. George O. Tice acted as starter and H. Ketcheson, Wesley Parks and A.C. Dafoe associated with him as officials. The meet was arranged by Frank Smith, Adam Palmer and Dr. Wellbanks.

Bible Digest

by H. B. DEAN

"Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly that it might not rain: and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months. And he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit." James 5;17,18

If you are inclined to doubt the power of prayer, read this again and remember that God still uses plain people willing to use the privilege of prayer to bring on unusual things. Go ahead, talk to the Lord about anything and believe Him for everything.

Terrorist Menace in Germany

And in Canada Leftist Activists Have Infiltrated Postal Station Controlling 55 Per Cent of Mail

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst

West Germany, Europe's traditionally most prosperous and economically the most dynamic nation in the continent, has the basic affluence which detracts from the rise of terrorist movements.

The West German republic is no Argentina, split by dissenting political factions, unable to survive the rule and death of a strongman with an economy shattered by inflation and bad planning.

Nor is the Bundesrepublik a victim of great gulfs between the classes brought on by archaic social system or economic disparities.

Most people in West Germany are well-fed, properly housed and until recently, lived in a country with literally no unemployment.

And yet one of the world's especially vicious terrorist outfits, called themselves the Baader-Meinhoff Gang, appeared in Germany about a decade ago, apparently on the heels of a severe riot in Berlin in which students were killed.

The Baader-Meinhof Gang, quiescent since the Munich Olympics of 1972 when the West German police clamped down on them in the light of the Palestinian guerrilla attack on the Games, are in the news again with their kidnapping of Berlin Mayor-elect Pter Lorenz.

Lorenz was seized days before he won the mayoralty in the old German capital city as a member of the Christian Democratic party which a few years ago also ruled the West German republic.

You will remember the famous and late Conrad Adenauer was German chancellor through much of the postwar era and was a very distinguished Christian Democrat.

It may be that party's historic record of support for German private industry, which invariably included the huge trusts or their successors who helped build Hitler's war machine, exploited wartime slave labor from the captive countries, which occasioned the Baader Meinhof to pick Lorenz.

He is the leading Christian Democratic politician in Germany today. The terrorists in their first communique after seizing him said he was unharmed but being questioned severely on "his relations with the economy, the bosses and fascist governments."

None of this explains the rise of terrorism in Germany nor why its leaders are all comfortable middle class professionals, one of whom, a 39-year-old lawyer, has been attorney for the group.

What it does tell us even here in Canada, is that our present industrial societies are filled with disaffected people who for personal or ideological reasons now attack the system they live in and have helped to create.

The other day the public relations director for the Canadian post office in Toronto admitted the city's central postal station, through which 55 per cent of all mail in Canada must be processed, has known revolutionaries among Toronto employees.

They are in the postal workers unions he freely admitted, because it's a well-known fact groups wanting to overthrow a system know it can't be done without first disrupting or taking over the communications system.

He listed them as Marxist Leninist, Trotskyists, members of a Workers' Action Committee, (also Marxist-leaning), and that they tried to be elected to the executive of the Toronto postal union.

I mention these in he context of the Baader Meinhof in case you think West Germany's present crisis has no consequence for us.

Opposition to Franco Mounts

Spain May be Ripe for a Coup

By KEVIN DOYLE
The Canadian Press

In the sunny heartlands of Spain, civil unrest, economic disorder and resentment against the dictatorship of Gen. Francisco Franco seem to be nearing a climax.

Reports are growing that a section of the army is considering a coup and militant students have stepped up their campaign for democratic reforms with dramatic suddenness.

They have been joined by priests, housewives, teachers, actors, writers, journalists, economists, lawyers, professors and neighborhood civil bodies.

Franco's 36-year-old regime has ruthlessly and effectively put down such movements many times in the past. But the current upsurge of protest is different. It coincides with one of Spain's worst economic slowdowns in decades.

In the past, the wily 82 year old Franco, now a semi-invalid, was always able to cool public tempers with promises of greater economic prosperity, something he accomplished with considerable skill. This gave him a free hand to act with what often seemed like swift brutality against dissident leaders.

But now the economy is in turmoil. The country is suffering a 70-per-cent annual rate of inflation, emigration has fallen sharply, unemployment is growing and there has been a major drop in industrial production, tourism and building.

So Franco's prime miniser, Arias Navarro, who succeeded Carrero Blanco after he was murdered more than a year ago, has been forced to look for new solutions.

Early in 1974, Navarro seized on the promise of democratic reforms to ease pressure on the government and told the Spaniards they would be free to form political associations, forerunners to the establishment of full-fledged political parties.

But Navarro had apparently underestimated the power and reactionary force still wielded by Franco and the right-wing backwoodsmen who surround him.

The prime minister quickly retreated on his pledge and said only associations which swore allegiance to the existing regime would be permitted, thus effectively wiping out any chance of legitimate opposition groups being formed.

After that, Navarro's credibility among the Spaniards was destroyed.

Franco has since ruled out moderate proposals to set up a one-man, one-vote form of suffrage and for the establishment of free trade unions, alienating many of the country's most able centrist politicians.

What now appears to be happening is that moderate politicians and army officers, faced with a situation in which the political right is highly organized under Franco and where there is no viable centre organization, are moving to join forces with the clandestine left.

Should this development gain momentum, as it shows every sign of doing, the heyday of the old regime may be drawing to a close.

Day of Political Racketeering

By DON O'HEARN
Queens Park Bureau
of The Intelligencer

TORONTO: This was politics: There unquestionably was racketeering, or toll-gating, in liquor licences in Ontario in the forties.

The government or elected members weren't involved. Rather the operation centred around four senior party officials.

There was a regular schedule of pay-offs, $10,000 for a Toronto licence, $5,000 for Sudbury and so on. And if you wanted a licence you paid or else.

Some of the money may have got into party funds, but it has always been assumed that most of it went into the pockets of the four.

It was well known at the time that the toll-gate existed; you can't have 1,000 or more bar owners paying under the table money without word getting around.

In fact it got to be such a scandal that one winter's morning in 1948 Leslie Blackwell told me he had called the four into his office for that afternoon and he was going to threaten to jail them if they didn't quit.

From time to time during the Drew administration I would take a whack at the racketeering and the racketeers.

After a few months he called me down to his office one morning.

First he asked me if I had anything on Alec Mackenzie; long-time president of the Ontario Conservative Association and chief party organizer.

I told him that I didn't; actually I had nothing but hearsay on any of them, but it was pretty formidable hearsay.

Then he said "Don I am going to clean this up. It will be stopped as of now. And in the meantime I would appreciate it if you would lay off."

One of the four was a particularly notorious and obnoxious individual. I will call him Mr. X..

"What about X?", I asked.

"X will never again hold an official position in the Conservative party", Frost replied.

"Okay then", I said, "you have a deal."

Frost did clean it up right away. And very simply.

He put a very strong restriction on new liquor licences

During his regime there were no new lounge or beverage room licences issued except to legitimate new hotels. The only other licences were dining lounge licences and there were only a few of these to quite sumptuous restaurants.

He also kept his word about X.

He suddenly dropped out of sight and never again figured in the party.

Some years later, however, Frost did appoint him to a very important job outside the party.

When I put this up to him he said, "Don he really was the only man for the job.'

And I had to agree. It was a tough job that called for a tough man. And though X may have been obnoxious he was able and he certainly was tough.

Auto Converters Curb Pollutants

Health for All

Cars with catalytic converters are centerstage this year. Along with unleaded gasoline.

The 1975 cars with converters not only spew out fewer pollutants. They also run better than last year's models, start quicker, and even get better gas mileage. Fuel savings in 1975 models with converters, for example, are 13 per cent above that for last year's cars.

Part of the reason for this good news is that car manufacturers have had to redesign carburetors and ignition systems in order to get the catalysts to work properly. So there are happy side-effects along with less pollution.

The converters themselves, attached to exhaust pipes, chemically change polluting hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide to harmless carbon dioxide and water. The converters are designed to reduce hydrocarbons by 83 per cent and carbon monoxide by 90 per cent.

Cars with converters must use completely lead-free gas. It's against federal law for a gas station to pump leaded gas into a catalyst-equipped car. In addition to ruining the catalyst, violating the U.S. law calls for a $10,000 fine. But besides being destructive and illegal, it's almost impossible to pump the wrong kind of gas into the new cars. The filler pipe is so narrow that the standard gas nozzle won't fit inside.

Reducing the pollutants in car exhaust is one major way to fight air pollution. Car exhaust is the chief cause of air pollution. But there are other important ways, such as supporting public transportation.

The Alamo at San Antonio, Tex., finally was captured by Mexican Gen. Santa Anna's forces after 13 days of bitter fighting 139 years ago today—in 1836. No survivors were permitted among the Texans and the victims included legendary scouts Davy Crockett and James Bowie. The Alamo was taken only after all but five of 180 defenders had been killed and these five were shot as rebels. A few months later Santa Anna was defeated at the battle of San Jacinto and Texas won independence.

1834—Toronto, formerly the Town of York, was incorporated as a city.

1935—Oliver Wendell Holmes, U.S. jurist and scholar, died at 94.

1938—The Spanish insurgent cruiser Balaeres was torpedoed with the loss of 800.

Man Jailed For Safety Violation

BROCKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — County Judge G. A. Stiles handed down Wednesday the first jail term in Ontario under the Construction Safety Act, sentencing Murray McMunn to one day in jail.

The provincial ministry of labor had appealed a $500 fine levied against McMunn by Provincial Judge John Deacon.

Judge Stiles said he would sentence McMunn to one day in jail as a deterrent instead of fining him. The maximum fine for a violation of the act is $10,000 and the maximum jail term is one year.

McMunn was charged after Bruce Cobb, 17, of Westport, Ont., was killed after McMunn gave him an improperly-grounded electric drill in a street excavation last June 19.

Bonus Offered

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A third Brampton firm has offered a bonus to employees who buy new cars.

Reynolds and Reynolds Canada Ltd., a business form printing firm, will give $150 to any of its 120 employees who show proof of purchasing a new car, president Tom McKay said Tuesday.

Color Not Vital

CHATHAM, Ont. (CP) — Harvie Armstrong, curator of the Fairfield Museum about 30 miles east of here, says the color of the curators skin should not be important.

Mr. Armstrong was commenting Tuesday about a claim by the Moravian Indian band council that it—not the United Church of Canada—owns the museum and 30 acres of land surrounding it.

The band has said the museum curator should be an Indian.

Minister Dies

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Rev. Henry H. Janzen, a former moderator of the Canadian Mennonite Brethren Conference and an associate minister of the Kitchener Mennonite Brethren Church, died here Tuesday. He was 73.

Wants Report

TORONTO (CP) — Archbishop Edward Scott, primate of the Anglican Church of Canada, said Wednesday that the Berger commission "should be allowed adequate time and given maximum federal support to complete its work and deliver recommendations before any decisions are reached on the Mackenzie Valley pipeline proposals."

Depend on Ontario

HULL, Que. (CP) — Mayor Gilles Rocheleau wants to meet Quebec Social Affairs Minister Claude Forget to discuss a possible solution to a five-week strike which has virtually closed the city's Sacre Coeur hospital.

"It is deplorable that we in the Outaouais region, which is part of Quebec, must depend on Ottawa hospitals for our health services," the mayor told Hull city council Tuesday.

Plant to Close

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Electrohome Ltd., blaming slumping sales and high inventory, has announced a four-week shutdown of its electronics plant.

More than 500 employees will be laid off from March 13 to April 7 and company officials have yet to project employment for the next three months.

$96 Guaranteed

OTTAWA (CP) — Migrant farm workers from the Caribbean and Mexico will be guaranteed at least $96 a week this year to help Canadian farmers harvest fruit and vegetable crops, Manpower Minister Robert Andras said Wednesday.

The migrant workers will be guaranteed a minimum of $2.40 an hour after May 1, an increase from the $2 an hour paid to 5,537 foreign migrants who worked in the fields of southwestern Ontario last year, Mr. Andras said in a prepared statement.

Immigrants Aided

OTTAWA (CP) — Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds) suggested Wednesday in the Commons that Labor Minister John Munro may have been involved improperly in the cases of two immigrants.

But he refused later to elaborate, saying that any specific allegation might land him in legal trouble.

"I don't want to say much outside the House for obvious reasons," he said in an interview. All remarks in the House are privileged and not subject to legal action if they are erroneous or slanderous.

Study Grievances

MONTREAL (CP) — Roman Gralewicz, president of Seafarers' International Union of Canada (SIU), Wednesday announced the creation of an appeal and review board to "take some of the sting" out of last December's allegations of waterfront corruption.

The board, headed by Commodore O.C.S. Robertson, former deputy director of the Arctic Institute of North America and a director of Expo 67, will arbitrate members' grievances about the union.

Price Hike OK

OTTAWA (CP) — TransCanada PipeLines Ltd. has been granted permission to increase its rates for natural gas by 1.9 cents a thousand cubic feet effective April 1, the National Energy Board announced Wednesday.

The increase, which the company requested to meet higher costs, will mean an additional $3 or $4 on the annual fuel bill of the average homeowner.

Toronto Muskrat Trapper May Lose His Trade

TORONTO (CP) — Loftus Trotter, who says he's the last muskrat trapper in Metropolitan Toronto, is annoyed by the prospect of a bylaw that would force him to discontinue the trade he has plied for nearly 60 years.

Earlier this week, York council said it is considering a ban on trapping in the borough to preserve the muskrat, a long-tailed water rodent which fetches about $3.50 a pelt.

"They just don't understand trapping," Mr. Trotter, 70, said in an interview Tuesday.

"I'm not out there day and night killing the rats. With all life, you've got to lower old stock to reproduce.

"If they're thinking of making the marsh into a sanctuary, it won't work. Nature only allows a certain amount of life in an area.

"The muskies are really in danger because of the effluent that pours into the marshes," he added.

Mr. Trotter says he'll sue if the bylaw goes through. And it won't be the first time he's brushed with city hall.

Ten years ago when the city banned trapping in Toronto's west-end marshland, the provincial ministry of lands and forests went to bat for Mr. Trotter.

It wasn't long before the No Trapping signs came down.

Abzug Gets File

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Central Intelligence Agency file turned over by the agency to Representative Bella Abzug is the first concrete evidence of what CIA Director William Colby has acknowledged were improper activities.

The file detailed Representative Abzugs anti-war activities during the late 1960s and early 1970s and contained information dating back to 1953. Some of the file's data had been obtained by opening her mail.

"A considerable amount of material in your file should not be in there," Colby told the New York Democrat at a House of Representatives subcommittee hearing Wednesday.

Fly In Medicine

OTTAWA (CP) — Medicine urgently needed for an ailing six-month-old child in Toronto will be flown in from New Haven, Conn., Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said Wednesday.

"We're not taking any chances with a kid's life," he said in an interview after learning that the child's medicine may be tied up in the strike-affected Toronto post office.

Mark Anniversary

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Gallery celebrates a double birthday today—the 500th anniversary of the birth of Michelangelo, and the 95th anniversary of its own first exhibition.

To mark the occasion, the gallery is observing 1980-Minus-5 today and next Sunday. The title is a reminder that the National Gallery is five years away from celebrating its centennial and wants a new building.

Extras Costly

OTTAWA (CP) — Security equipment accounted for $70,117 of the $83,530 cost of Prime Minister Trudeau's 1974 Fleetwood Cadillac limousine.

The basic car price, without security equipment, cost $13,413, it was disclosed Wednesday.

The information, tabled in the Commons by Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp, said the vehicle, replacing a similar 1973 Cadillac, was ordered at the request of the RCMP and supplied by General Motors of Oshawa, Ont.

The second car was needed to make a spare vehicle available for visiting dignitaries and heads of state.

Exemption Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Shipping industry employees in Eastern Canada who work on board ship should not be bound by legislation establishing a maximum number of working hours, says a report prepared for the labor department.

The report, which deals with hours of work in the shipping industry along the St. Lawrence River and Maritime ports, was prepared by an inquiry commissioner, Jacques St. Laurent, who held public hearings in five eastern cities and received 16 briefs from various groups.

Few Attend

OTTAWA (CP) — Animal lovers received an apparent set-back Tuesday night in their attempts to form an association to lobby for the rights of pets and their owners.

The meeting attracted only 20 persons—and one diapered dog.

The group advocates a municipally-funded, low-cost spay and neuter clinic to reduce the pet population.

Ottawa Is Blamed For Grain Tieup

VANCOUVER (CP) — One of the first lessons a union business agent or corporate industrial relations manager learns is that when a labor dispute has public impact, it is in the interests of both parties to find an outside scapegoat—and fast.

In the last eight months of industrial strife, the grain handlers were followed by the grain inspectors and then the grain weighmen in pointing to the federal government as the source of shipping woes.

And in the most recent port shutdown—begun March 2 by 4,000 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union against the British Columbia Maritime Employers' Association—Ottawa is again being blamed.

Companies affected by the strike say Ottawa made its first mistake in forcing the grain elevators last October to accept the terms of the Perry conciliation report to end a seven-week-long walkout by grain handlers.

The legislation ending that strike gave grain handlers a total increase of $1.52 an hour for two years, much of it retroactive, bringing the base rate on last Dec. 1 to $6.48 an hour from the previous $4.96. The elevators said the settlement was financially ruinous and would set a precedent for other port workers which ultimately would price Vancouver shipments out of the world market.

Only two weeks later, federal grain inspectors began booking off sick because they were dissatisfied with treasury board and conciliation report offers to their component of the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC).

The grain handlers, the inspectors said, got a 30.6 per cent increase over two years and they wanted parity with that percentage, instead of the 21.5 per cent over 27 months recommended by a conciliator.

The inspectors worked intermittently until Nov. 23, when they went on strike for 12 days, eventually but unhappily settling for 18 per cent over 15 months.

Clive Lewis, a spokesman for the inspectors, said what they missed this year, because of being "forced into a corner" by the treasury board, will reappear at next year's negotiations.

The same tale was told by the grain weighmen, part of the general labor and trades component of the PSAC, on strike since Feb. 17.

"We can understand why the inspectors and now the weighmen are upset with Ottawa," John Loney, general manager of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, said.

"After all, they (the government) forced us to accept a certain level of wages, but now they're hanging tough with their own employees, at far below the level we were forced to pay," he said.

Employer groups say the real issue in the current dispute is not wages—although those certainly are not settled, with the union seeking $1.50 over one year on a base rate of $6.08 an hour and the companies offering $1.75 over two years.

The real dispute, they say, concerns a contract clause which allows longshoremen to unload containers on the dock when the shipper or consignee does not have its own warehouse.

The 60 members of the employers' group want that clause lifted for a one-year trial period but union leaders fear the proposal will cause a loss of work opportunity on the docks.

Ottawa's role in this dispute, employers say, is an historial one. The federal government for years has postponed getting into container traffic in a major way at this National Harbors Board port. Now, with more than half of B.C. container traffic being shipped through Seattle and trucked north, the union's stubbornness and escalating construction costs make extensive container development less and less likely.

The port seems resigned to remaining a bulk shipment port for grain, potash, sulphur and coal, they say.

Whatever the truth of that charge, the series of strikes in the last eight months which have closed the port more than 80 days have taken their toll of present shipping credibility.

Ken Rodger, manager of the Alberta Wheat Pool said the port's image "has hit the very bottom—we're millions of bushels (of wheat) behind."

The producer advisory committee of the Canadian Wheat Board and the Vancouver Board of Trade are both urging federal intervention in the longshoremen's dispute.

The cargo statistics for this current dispute indicate a cost that will be hard to bear so shortly after prairie farmers had to pay $15 million in demurrage charges for the grain handlers' stoppage.

Forty-one ships remained in Vancouver harbor Wednesday, 23 of them waiting for grain, including the supertanker Amoco Cairo which sits in the Pacific sun long after it was due to leave with a gift shipment of wheat for famine-plagued Bangladesh.

CNR says it has 1,600 loaded cars between Vancouver and Jasper and another 900 between Prince Rupert and Jasper. CP Rail says it has 1,145 cars in the Vancouver area, 145 at points west of Revelstoke, B.C., and another 4,559 east of Revelstoke.

CNR also says it has about 70,000 tons of coal, potash and sulphur tied up in 7,000 cars between Vancouver and Jasper, and CP Rail says it has 80,000 tons of the same commodities waiting in 16 trains.

No New Stimulus Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — No new measures to stimulate the economy are planned immediately despite the 1.3-per-cent decline in the gross national product during the last three months of 1974, Finance Minister John Turner indicated Wednesday.

He said in the Commons it is "a question of judgment" whether more stimulation is needed than was provided in his Nov. 18 budget.

Tax cuts and other measures announced at the time are just beginning to take effect and the government will reassess the over-all economic situation before doing anything else, he indicated.

He was responding to questions from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, Progressive Conservative financial critic Sinclair Stevens and Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader.

Statistics Canada reported Wednesday that the GNP dropped 1.3 per cent in the last quarter of 1974, the worst performance since 1961-62.

Mr. Turner was asked by critics to revise the four-per-cent real growth estimate he made in the budget for 1975.

Mr. Broadbent said recent non-government forecasts indicate that real growth will fall to about one per cent during the year.

Mr. Turner said domestic productive activity—excluding international business—is holding up relatively well. It rose by about 6.8 per cent during 1974, not a major decline from the high figure of more than eight per cent the previous year.

Over-all growth for 1974 was 3.7 per cent but the prime reason was slackening export trade caused by economic woes among major trading partners—the United States, Japan and European countries, he said.

Growth forecasts were "difficult to make and difficult to achieve." Virtually all forecasts had been revised in recent months.

Haddad: Joie de Vivre and Insight

TORONTO (CP) — Claire Haddad brings both joie de vivre and insight into her business of designing sleep and loungewear.

"Today a garment must have several purposes," says the petite designer. So she produces garments that can be worn in bed, at the poolside or even out for an evening.

She is also a gourmet cook, an antique collector and an avid party-giver when she finds the time.

One of the 12 founding members of the recently formed Fashion Designers Association of Canada, she was born into the business.

Her father, J. H. Bardwell, started a loungewear firm which she entered after graduating from the Ontario College of Art and studying in three fashion schools, including the Fashion Academy in New York.

After her marriage to Albert Haddad, they formed their own company with Mr. Haddad as president and managing director.

In her downtown showroom are the many trophies she has won as a designer, including a Coty Fashion Award, the first given to a Canadian. She was also the first Canadian designer to be recognized by Vogue magazine in a full-page picture layout.

"It's a compliment to your family to be as well dressed and groomed at home as when you go out," she says.

As a designer, Mrs. Haddad leans towards an oriental look and her caftans and harem robes are famous.

Top New York stores such as Saks Fifth Avenue and Bonwit Teller have been her customers for years and the firm plans to exhibit at the lingerie preth a porter showings in Paris next year.

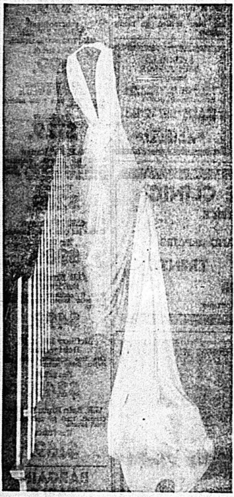
The Haddads have sold their line wherever they have travelled but have not yet established sales rooms abroad.

Mrs. Haddad is a member of the advisory committee of Seneca College in Toronto and allows design students to gain experience in her factory.

The Haddads have two daughters—Andrea, who is studying French at a university in Rheims, and Lynn (Mrs. Robert Vickers), who is in charge of co-ordinating the wardrobes of Canada's 1976 Olympic team.

The decor of the Haddads' split-level house in suburban Don Mills reflects the extent of their travels. A round 16th-century table with a brazier centre for coals and an old three-part screen were acquired in Spain and another table with designs in various tones of wood comes from Lebanon.

Mrs. Haddad's cooking is equally cosmopolitan, including Lebanese delicacies from her husband's family recipes, spinach rolls of strudel dough and a Greek and Turkish dessert of shredded wheat and nuts.



This Haddad - designed gown is typical of her original and exotic lounging outfits. In white banlon, the elegant gown has a cover-up that can be dropped to form a long cape for boudoir and honeymoon breakfast. The back is lowcut to the waist, and the unadorned front rises to a high roll collar. (CP Photo)

Discipline—Does It Belong at School?

OTTAWA (CP) — Parents may be expecting the schools to do more than they are designed for, says Norman Goble, secretary-general of the Canadian Teachers' Federation (CTF).

Writing in a CTF news letter, Mr. Goble asks if it is fair for parents to expect schools to administer the discipline that parents seem unable or unwilling to exercise in the home.

He sees the schools caught in a bind and mainly at the mercy of parents' moods. While some parents say the schools should punish their children others say teachers have no real jurisdiction over students' behavior, that discipline is a job for parents alone.

In recent years, there has been a trend away from corporal punishment, commonly known as "the strap." It has been replaced by psychological measures such as withdrawal of group support or exclusion from a favorite activity.

In Ottawa, the strap has become a heated issue again. The education committee of the Ottawa board of education has recommended removal of the strap from 57 elementary schools. The experiment will begin next September if the board accepts the recommendation.

This is in direct opposition to a recommendation of the elementary school principals' association. Its subcommittee on corporal punishment favors retention of the strap.

Mr. Goble, too, has misgivings about abolishing the strap. He says studies show that long-term damage is inflicted on a child treated by psychological methods compared to the short-term pain of a strapping.

Joseph Messner, executive director of the Ottawa Childrens' Aid Society, says children disciplined by the strap are casualties of an "incredible anachronism." However, he recognizes the problems faced by teachers.

He feels that it is up to the schools to "provide machinery for the removal of difficult children." Teachers should be trained to handle these cases.

Whatever recommendations are made concerning the strap, it is teachers and students who stand to lose while the experimenting goes on.

Crowded classrooms, variations on a disciplinary theme and mixed expectations from the community continue to compound the question of who is going to discipline the child and by what means.

Confusing the issue is time spent in extra curricular activities. As these become longer and more frequent the responsibility of the teachers not only increases but "guidelines become blurred," Mr. Goble says.

Teachers have no special legal protection in exercising routine discipline. If students or parents complain of a teacher's actions, he or she may be liable under the Criminal Code unless a judge rules that the teacher acted "as a kindly and judicious parent."

Moral Support Might Assist Dope Addict to Kick Habit

Dear Doris: I wrote to you a little while ago with a problem of how to overcome shyness with a certain boy.

Well, now I have another problem. I have heard that he was a dope addict. I also heard that he is now trying to straighten himself out and get off dope. I still really like him and if he is trying to get off dope, then I would do anything to help him.

The problem is, how would I do it?

Need Help.

Dear Need: Getting off dope is a rough process, for a real addict. If his efforts are serious, his family doctor probably already knows about it. He or the boy's family can refer him to a local branch of the Addiction Research Foundation or similar body for your province.

All you can do is remain his friend. If he confides in you let him know you respect his efforts and encourage him. Moral support from real friends can do a lot for him now.

Dear Doris: I was interested in a letter by one who signed herself "No More Hope". Evidently she has lost a daughter and wonders why she has never heard from a mother who has lost a child; because it seems that she has heard from many who have not had such an experience.

I, like those who have written to her, have not had a like experience but the book "Angel Unaware" by Dale Evans Rogers, of which you may have heard, was in this home and read by several other family members.

If you would send me the name and address of the lady I should be happy to mail the book to her.

Toward Peace of Mind.

Dear Peace of Mind: Since the item you read, "No More Hope" has received comforting letters both from persons who have had the same experience, and others. She has written thanking us.

I have read "Angel Unaware" myself and agree with you that Dale Rogers expresses a wonderful philosophy about the child she loved and lost. I don't think anyone could read what she says without being touched — and helped. Privately I am sending you "No More Hope's" address.

Dear Doris: You gave "Sensitive" some real good advice.

I am in my early 50s. I was a very fussy housekeeper, but after a three-months' illness last fall I had a different outlook on life. I don't spend as much time at housework. I seem to relax more and feel what I don't get done today can wait until tomorrow.

I go out more, and as I work a few hours a week I usually spend the money on myself, my family or something for the home. I don't think a person really appreciates good health until they become ill.

After all, we're not here forever, so we should live one day at a time.

Keep up your good work and best wishes for Successful Living for all of us.

Woke Up Before Too Late.

Dear Woke Up: Now that's the kind of a letter that should give any aging person a lift. The second half century may well have some delightfully exciting moments and many enjoyable years in it.

When you think of the living we have done in the first 50 years, we must surely have learned something about how to appreciate life! If it isn't an illness that draws us up short, it is likely to be other kinds of crisis.

If we can learn to keep our cool and our faith, those later years can be mighty satisfying — in a way youth can scarcely hope to understand.

Ann Landers

Not-so-happy Hooker Wants Lifestyle Change

Dear Ann Landers: I am a prostitute who is sick of myself and sick of the whole rotten business.

I started as a pretty, young (and foolish) girl who figured this life was an easy way to sleep late and make a good living. I am now approaching 30, and the future doesn't look very bright.

I want to get out of this lousy life, but I am faced with some terrific problems, the main one being how can I cover up my past? Can you suggest an agency that can help me?—A Not So Happy Hooker

Dear No So Happy: Yes. An employment agency. Look in the want ads for a job for which you might be qualified.

I see no reason to inform anyone of your past. You don't say whether or not you have any special interests, but if you do, I suggest vocational training so you can get into a field you'll enjoy. Congratulations on your decision. I hope you stick with it. It won't be easy.

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to New Wrinkle was all wet. Her teen-age son was draining the hot-water tank by floating up to his neck in a wave of "cleanliness." You suggested that he switch to showers because it would "save on the hot water."

Dear lady, as a long time shower-lover, I can tell you, it all depends on how long you stay in the shower. I used to stand in the stall for as long as half an hour—when I could get away with it. My parents finally put an end to my luxuriating. They bought me an egg-timer and I was put on my honor to set the timer for three minutes and get out when the buzzer went off.

As an adult, I still enjoy long, hot showers. Fortunately, however, I married a man who can afford a large hot water tank and the utility bills that go with it.—An Older Wrinkle

Dear Rink: The utility company informed me that the average shower uses at least one third less water than the average bath—hence my advice.

My counsel would of course be inappropiate for shower freaks who enjoy standing under a rushing torrent of water for half an hour. I knew people such as you existed, but I never received a letter from one before. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: I am still laughing over the controversy that raged in your column a while back about whether it should be called a dishcloth or a dishrag.

I was born in the Midwest, where a rag was what was left of worn-out underwear, nightgowns, bedsheets, towels—anything that had outlived its usefulness in the original state. The cloth we used to wash dishes with was one of those "remnants." We called them rags.

It's amazing how people can write in about such trivia when the world is in a state of economic chaos, starvation is a genuine threat to millions, and wars go on in at least three strategic areas. Are they crazy?—Boggled.

Dear Bog: Not necessarily. You wrote, didn't you?

Lots of Questions —But No Answers

Personality quizzes are addictive, as any regular subscriber to magazines can tell you.

Once you've checkmarked your way through one series of queries that promise to indicate your social adroitness or sexual prowess, you're on your way to getting hooked forever.

Soon you'll buy magazines simply because the front cover announces that inside you'll discover answers to "Do you have a happy marriage?" or "Are you an extrovert or an introvert?' or "Would you be suited to a political career?"

Most often, it's all quite a lot of nonsense. You seldom find out anything about yourself that you don't already know. And what you do discover is often misleading when you tally up your "score".

It would be much more interesting to find out things about the rest of your family.

So, here's a quiz for you to do just that.

There are no right or wrong answers, no scale of more or less, no indication of which direction you should go in order to sound like the sort of person you'd like to be.

The purpose of this quiz is to launch you and your family into new areas of conversation. These are questions you might ordinarily not ask. Where will they lead you?

When you were a child (or, if you are a child) did/do you prefer coloring books or blank pages to color?

Are you the sort who colors neatly inside the lines, or do you scribble?

Name five foods you have never tasted, and try to describe how they taste. (If you can afford it, buy at least one of them tomorrow to see how close you were. If the whole family tries this, perhaps you could make a meal using all new foods.)

Which would you rather be — a butterfly or a tortoise?

What do you think would be the very worst thing about being seven feet tall?

If someone else were to describe your personality, what WOULDN'T they say about you?

If you have a pet dog, cat, gerbil or canary, imagine what it would look like if it were human. What kind of animal would you be?

If you had the power to invent anything you want, what would you invent? Describe how it would work, and draw a diagram if you can. What would you call it?

Imagine how it would feel to be a doorknob that is afraid of human hands. Imagine a conversation between that doorknob and the door.

Quick! Answer this as fast as you can without stopping to ponder: Which would you rather be, a healthy dunce or a sick genius? (Why?)

What is the absolutely most embarrassing thing that has ever happened to you?

Think of five people whom you really cannot stand. Name their qualities that most offend you. Do these people have anything in common? Do you have any of their characterestics?

If you are over 12 years old, name all the nations in South America. If you are under 12, name all the streets you know in Belleville. Get in the car with family and go see those streets

Which would you rather be: Proud or humble?

How do you feel about children calling their parents by their Christian names instead of Mom and Dad?

If you could choose a color to be, what would you choose? Why? What kind of car would you be? What sort of building?

Describe six methods that television commercials use in order to persuade you to buy products. How effective are these techniques? Go through the kitchen cupboards and see if you know WHY you've bought the brands you have.

And no quiz is complete without a question about a deserted island. Ready?...

Name four things that you would leave behind if you were going to live alone on that island forever. Name one thing you would most like to have with you.

(Don't worry about that last one. We can arrange for The Intelligencer to be delivered just about anywhere!)

ST. PAUL'S ACW

Plans for a St. Patrick's Day Tea and Bake Sale on March 14 were completed at Monday night's meeting of St. Pauls A.C.W.

The members agreed to support the "Concerned Students and Teachers of Marmora Senior School" by writing a letter to the Marmora and District Lions Club urging them to undertake a community centre for Marmora.

REDNERSVILLE W I

Marjorie Roblin was hostess for the February meeting of the Rednersville Women's Institute.

Evelyn Price reported on the Kitchen Workshop held in Foxboro, where it was suggested that kitchens be divided into three distinct areas for maximum efficiency. Three basic floor plans were considered — the U plan, the L plan, and the triangle plan.

Francis Young and Evelyn Price will be the leaders for the senior project for spring, accessories for the home. Mac Pulver, and Vivian Rose will be the leaders for the 4H spring project on garden and home beautification.

Marlene Corfield will be the delegate to the W I Officers Conference in April.

Aileen Barker led a program about hobbies, suggesting that constructive use of spare time is very good for both mental and physical health. She introduced the guest speaker Mrs. Jack Austin of Wooler, who talked about ways that families can use increased spare time to expand interests. She said that widows particularly should keep active and involved with hobbies that take them out into the community.

Mrs. Austin spoke about her own hobbies, including music, coin, glass and button collections.

The roll call was answered by the members each telling about their own hobbies and showing samples of their work. A variety of articles were displayed, among them jewellery, crocheted and knitted goods, dried flower arrangements, batik and embroidery.

Bonnie Gayda, Theme Teacher

When she began teaching seven years ago, Bonnie Gayda thought she'd like to teach an intermediate grade — perhaps grade six.

Then circumstances forced her to take on the kids she was least sure she'd enjoy — the grade one children.

She hasn't left the primary grades since.

"I've enjoyed the grade one so much, I haven't wanted to change," she says.

Currently anticipating the birth of a child, Bonnie plans to leave Harmony School, where she's been for three years, at March break. She'll return in September.

Between now and March break, her grade one kids will be studying the farm. Reading, printing and other primary subjects will be taught through the study of that subject. It's called theme teaching, Bonnie explains, and she'll admit it takes a lot more time and work than an ordinarily-structured class room schedule.

"I find it enjoyable," she says, to explain her long 10-hour days.

The children apparently like her approach, too.

"Once they're interested in a topic, they're keen for every aspect. I'm surprised constantly by their enthusiasm.

"And I feel I get better results this way."

Bonnie Gayda feels that theme teaching is a more natural approach and the relatedness of the skills she's teaching becomes more apparent even to the kids.

And it's fun, too.

"Parents sometimes think that to be learning, their child should be sitting still, nervous and upset, sweating to learn. They often think if it's fun, it can't be good. But of course it isn't true."

One important aspect is her individual approach: she hears each child read each day, allowing the children to progress at their own rate.

It's a far cry from — and maybe a reaction to — her own grade one days.

"I can remember filling out an entire year's workbook one afternoon in first grade when I was bored.

"The teacher made me spend the next two days erasing the whole thing."

OUR KATE

Mrs. Cookson is a distinguished writer whose novels have won acclaim all over the world. Born in Tyneside, her noves are set in the industrial towns along the banks of the Tyne.

"Our Kate" is actually Catherine Cookson's mother and the story revolves around her. Catherine was illegitimate and she had to contend with being poor and despised and her mother's weakness for the bottle.

A sensitive child, she overcame tremendous odds to become the famous author and happy wife she now is. Despite the hardships and almost intolerable background, it is astonishing to read how much love and laughter was part of this struggling northern family.

Mrs. Cookson has written several novels under the pseudonym of Catherine Marchant, and two of the titles are Heritage Folly and The Fen Tiger, both available at the Corby Public Library, as is Our Kate.

SEX VS. MARRIAGE?

What part does sex have in the breakup of a marriage? It's a complicated question. But there's no doubt that today's liberated attitude toward sex has led to unreal expectations and a "tyranny of performance". AROUND TOWN with LANA ROBINSON

(. . . an advertising feature designed to keep you better informed of what's new around town.)

A Roblin Special

The sales staff at Gord Roblin Real Estate, 117 North Front St., are quite excited about a family dwelling now listed with them. This three bedroom bungalow is located in a popular East-Hill area close to the YMCA and the Plaza. It's on a quiet crescent, is brick and is only two minutes walking distance to both public and high schools. What more could you want in a family dwelling that such a location with shopping, recreation, and education facilities at hand? And Gord Roblin Real Estate is close at hand too. All you have to do is have that hand dial 968-6475 and Gord Roblin Real Estate will take care of the rest.

The Perfect Companion

Perhaps someone you know has been ill or is confined to bed or home for an extensive period. Perhaps you'd like to give them a tangible "cheering up". The Tropical Garden Pet Shop, 301½ Front St. has a suggestion: a canary. Canaries are certainly pretty and certainly songful, a perfect happy reminder of your thoughtfulness. Canaries are also easy to look after. Food and care advice are free from the Tropical Garden too. But hurry. There are only five canaries in stock right now and because of their popularity, they're hard to get sometimes.

Something Different

It's worth a visit to Sidney Inn, 265 West Moira St., just to try and keep up with the range of merchandise it carries. For example, owner Al Whitney, told me this week about something quite novel as a decor or gift item — engraved brass sabres from India, excellent for over mentel pieces and perhaps just the right retirement gift or as a gift to friends leaving the area. There are a variety of other shapes and sizes of this imported brassware. But as Al Whitney say "You have to see it for yourself". So as the man suggests, do just that in the gift section of the proliferating Sidney Inn.

A New Line

In recent weeks, I told you of the rather spectatcular expansion of Superior T.V. in the area. Superior T.V.'s parent store is located in Belleville at 103 Cannifton Rd. But its two new offspring are located in Madoc and Napanee respectively. Now these two new store are going to be carrying all kinds of records and eight track cassettes too, just what you need for your new Fleetwood or Hitachi component set from Superior. This fast-growing group of stores are very sensitive to their new customers' needs. Napanee and Madoc residents requested this expanded recorded and tape service, and that's what they're getting. That certainly is service.

"The Go-Anywhere, Do Many Things Wig"

That description fits two wigs in particular at the De Kapsters' Wig Boutique, part of Studio 231, 231 Front St. "Inflair" is a shoulder-blade length wig which can be worn in eight different styles. The "Freedom-Wig" is a young, curly wig that just needs a shake and is ready to go. Both wigs make excellent travelling companions for your down-south, or cruise wardrobe. You'll always look nice just minutes off the beach, and so will your wig. De Kapster's have many styles of wigs from which to choose, in easy-care, natural looking fabrics. A wig can give you a whole new look — or maybe looks. See the experts at De Kapster's.

Where To Go

With the days lengthening, there doesn't seem to be the great urge to get home and stay home, since we are no longer enveloped in gloomy darkness at 4 o'clock. So 'during-the-week' excursions don't have quite the negative reaction they might have . . . a little more sweetness and light, you might say. So a visit into the interior of Prince Edward County knowing that the comfort and enjoyment of dining at the Inn On The Bay Tavern is quite in line — and in order too. The menu is varied, the wines good, the atmosphere charming and as a way to spend an evening . . . there's none better. Call 476-3114 in Picton for your Inn On The Bay excursion.

Vader's Car Sales, just around the corner from North Front on College, have some very special used cars on hand at the moment. How are a 74 Corvette, a Datsun 260Z and a Ford Ranchero G.T. for special? These cars are rare in availability, beauty of styling and performance. And you have this range of rather exotic cars all at one place. Vaders sell great new cars . . . Datsun. But they also sell some great used ones too. Get in on some great action in some great cars. Visit Vader's Car Sales new. And check out their new showroom and service facilities while you're at it.

Just Back

Mr. and Mrs. Wonnacott of W. Wonnacott and Son Jewellers, 247 Front St. have just returned from the Spring Gift Show in Toronto. And if you have a wedding or graduation coming up in your circle of friends, this is significant news. Wonnacotts take the "gift centre" idea of their business just as seriously as they take the fine jewellery and repair side. And any gift you choose from Wonnacotts may be gift-wrapped by them if you choose, and of course, engraving can be done also. Wonnacott's realize that buying a meaningful gift is no casual endeavour; they'll help you make a wise choice and one with which you — and the recipient — will be pleased.

Aluminum Time

We've had cold times, like this week, and snowy times, like I hope we won't have anymore; we've had some sunny times this week too and soon, we hope to have some spring times. And if you are going to enjoy those spring times and the subsequent seasonal times without the bother of taking off and putting on those wooden storm windows, you'd better call Belleview Glass and Mirror, 354 Pinnacle St. at 968-5731. They'll come up and measure your home for aluminum windows and screens and doors; order them for you and then install them in about three weeks time. Ah, let's see . . . if you call today, that means you'll be greeting April the way you should be, with windows that will take rain or shine for a long time without any more fuss.

Carpet Decorator Prints

You may have noticed the window of Wrays Home Furnishers, 306 Front St. this week. If you didn't, you should. It's in blossom with a varied and attractive selection of 'designers' collections' in carpet, which are printed patterns on carpet in plaids, florals, oriental designs and any other kind of designs you can imagine. You can use these designs to perk up flooring and indeed, your whole home with some tasteful and startling innovative thinking. If you're going to decorate, then you should DECORATE. Wrays can help you translate your imaginative thinking into reality with their expert carpet installation. They employ their own staff for this operation and are as proud of their work as they are of the fine names in carpeting which they carry. Get with it with Wrays.

Religion and Politics Not Basically at Odds

EDMONTON (CP) — The principles of religion and politics are not necessarily at odds, says Werner Schmidt, 42-year-old leader of the Alberta Social Credit party.

"The greatest thing I learned is that people are basically concerned that the truth be held high," he said in an interview during his campaign for the March 26 general election, "but I won't tell anybody what to believe."

"Politics can be a hopeless world. . . . I have been shocked at the level to which some will stoop. I know how dirty politics can be played. But that's stupid."

A member of the Mennonite Brethren Church and former academic vice-president of Lethbridge Community College, Mr. Schmidt said he isnt worried about compromising Christian ideals in the political arena.

"When you compromise you're always going to antagonize someone. So you simply must decide what's best for most people, bearing in mind the laws of the country."

Defeated in the 1971 provincial general election—before he became party leader in February, 1973—and in a Calgary byelection last June, Mr. Schmidt said he hopes Social Credit can appeal to all age and interest groups by being "a true, honest-to-goodness peoples party."

He said the party has "a reasonable chance" to form the next Alberta government and that he did not take his defeats in the southern riding of Taber-Warner personally.

"The voters don't reject me, they reject the political alternative."

This alternative is a commitment to law and order, to the responsible management of public funds and the sanctity of family life, said Mr. Schmidt.

"An underlying principle is to allow individuals and associations of individuals to apply their own initiative and be rewarded for it."

The attitude towards work would have to change as society becomes more mechanized.

"We will have to create an enclave where individuals can do a different kind of thing. Social Credit has always held work in respect—we don't think people should be on the public dole—but work is not restricted to digging a ditch."

Mr. Schmidt spent the first 19 years of his life on a farm near Coaldale, Alta., and holds two degrees in educational administration from University of Alberta.

He is currently working for his doctorate on the effects of bureaucracy on innovation.

As well as working in education "from pre-kindergarten levels to the board of governors,' and as director of the Alberta School Trustees Association, Mr. Schmidt identifies with the farming community through a feedlot he owns with several other men.

"We lost everything we had, we're in debt now" because of market conditions, he said. "Yes, I'm sure aware of the beef problem. But we'll pull out of the slump all right."

Mr. Schmidt, married and with two teen-age sons, says he enjoys tennis, table tennis, skating, skiing, hiking and photography. He reads extensively on current events, world economic problems and constitutional issues.

He listens to classical music and male choirs, turns on Herb Alpert "when I want to be surrounded by sound" and has learned to like some of the rock music played by his sons.

He also enjoys live theatre and movies—although Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf made him feel "unwashed and gritty inside."

Election Called

Peter Lougheed Off and Running

EDMONTON (CP) — If the opposition parties had been watching carefully and knew what to look for, they might have been able to tell when Peter Lougheed planned to call an election.

They didn't know that about three months before the Valentine's Day election call, the former football player opened his personal training camp in preparation for the rigors of Alberta's first winter election campaign in 5 years. He always stays in shape, but this was war.

Running a mile a day, running the government and running the campaign for the March 25 provincial general election, the bouncy 46-year-old is described by associates as always "super-organized and super-motivated."

"Physically I feel great,' Mr. Lougheed said in an interview.

"I think we've got the campaign well organized. We've got the candidates in the field. We've got the organizational people, most of whom were with us in 1971."

No longer does he have to bound up to people on main street with the once-familiar line: "Hi! I'm Peter Lougheed."

Now they know who he is. In 10 years he has moved from the almost-unknown leader of the Progressive Conservatives, who lacked even a single legislature seat, to a government leader described privately by officials of all three opposition parties as likely to gain a landslide election victory.

He captured 49 seats in 1971 in ousting Social Credit from 6 years in power. When the election was called this time the Conservatives had the same number while Social Credit had 24 seats, the New Democratic Party one and there was one independent.

Despite his situation, Mr. Lougheed is not without doubts.

He points to Quebec with which Alberta has developed a special relationship because both provinces have been fighting for provincial rights.

He recalls that when the Liberal administration of Jean Lesage came to power in Quebec in 1960 "they made a large number of changes and they perhaps moved too fast for the citizens and were defeated in 1966 by the very government they defeated in 1960."

Mr. Lougheed wants to stay in Alberta, not try to succeed Robert Stanfield as national Conservative leader. This would go against some basic political beliefs, he said.

"Frankly, I think that a strong provincial government, such as in Alberta, more than anything in terms of western development can ensure that this part of the country is given its full opportunity in the future.

"If you're involved in the national scene, you're obliged to make compromises across the board."

So the five foot-eight former Edmonton Eskimo halfback runs hard in Alberta.

"Now we were successful in 1971 partly because our opposition was complacent," he said. "I don't propose to have our candidates defeated by the very reason we won office."

The premier said he can take the rigors of politics and elections but conceded that it is hard on his young family. He has four children.

"So there are times, sure, when I would prefer that I could stay home and didn't have to pick up a huge briefcase on Sunday morning or Saturday morning but could spend more time with my family."

The premier's campaign is already scheduled right to the end with special provision for Mr. Lougheed's disposition towards working in the morning.

"I'm a morning person. I do my best thinking in the morning and certainly my best reading. Then I tend to tail off late at night."

Accordingly, none of his appearances are scheduled to last much past 10.30 p.m. Then, if the meeting is outside of Edmonton or Calgary, he will probably climb into the back seat of a car and sleep his way home.

He likes to get 6½ to seven hours sleep a night but said: "I'm trained enough in this business that if I'm stretched, I can stretch myself."

Hair Transplants Said Only Cure for Baldness

MONTREAL (CP) — Each year millions of dollars are spent by man in an effort to cure male pattern alopecia or baldness.

Advertised treatments to save hair range from massages using exotic oils with restorative powers to ultraviolet rays.

Money spent on such treatments is wasted, says Dr. Samuel Herlich, a 48-year-old general practitioner who has performed hair transplants since 1960.

"Even the most intelligent men spend fortunes on quacks," the doctor said. "On average, the man who is bald equates it with loss of masculinity, the Samson syndrome."

Such feelings of inadequacy, coupled with the unsympathetic response of many physicians to what they consider cosmetic defect and not a medical problem, drive these men to try any and all measures to restore lost hair.

About 99 per cent of those men experiencing hair loss suffer from hereditary male pattern baldness, he said, while one per cent of the cases are "acquired," caused by systemic illness or glandular disorders.

There is no process which can save the hair of a man destined hereditarily to go bald, he said, but transplantation can replace lost hair.

Dr. Herlich, with the aid of a surgeon, has performed more than 1,000 hair transplants in his office located in the tree-lined suburb of Outremont.

The doctor describes the operation as a "minor surgical office procedure performed under local anesthetic and causing no side-effects other than perhaps minor discomfort."

It involves freezing the back of the scalp and then using a special instrument to cut out a plug of flesh, complete with hair and roots. Between 50 and 100 such plugs are removed depending on the bald area to be covered. The plubs are properly prepared and carefully placed [illegible] similar number of holes cut in the bald area.

Each plug of flesh contains several hairs. Depending on the size of the bald area, several sessions may be necessary to transplant a sufficient number of plugs.

In 15 years, the doctor said, he has never performed a transplant which did not take. The transplanted hair should last a lifetime and is a better texture than other hairs because it comes from the back of the head where the roots are stronger.

The procedure costs anywhere from $500 for one transplant session to $5,000 for a full head of hair.

Dr. Herlich received his undergraduate degree in science from McGill University, studied medicine three years at the Sorbonne in Paris and spent another three years at University of Geneva.

Book Tells Story Of Hoodoo Ocean

[illegible]

By JACK TRACY

The Canadian Press

The waters south and east of the Virginia Capes seemed safe enough to me as a seaman in the 1930s and as a naval officer during the Second World War. Outside hurricane season, the Gulf Stream was balmy and flying fish played easily alongside the ship.

Now a book has appeared by Charles Berlitz, The Bermuda Triangle, to suggest there is something sinister about that stretch of ocean.

It is not the first time that books or articles have been written about the area extending roughly from Bermuda in the north to southern Florida, and then east to a point through the Bahamas past Puerto Rico and back again to Bermuda.

Berlitz, a member of the family that founded the famous Berlitz language schools, gives two pages to acknowledgment of his sources and previous writings.

In the area he writes about, sometimes called the Hoodoo Sea, more than 100 ships and planes have vanished and more than 1,000 lives have been lost in the last 26 years alone. The odd thing is that no bodies or wreckage have been found.

Probably the most publicized loss was the disappearance in good weather in late 1945 of five American naval bombers with 14 men on a routine training flight out of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. A rescue plane sent out to search for them also disappeared with its 13-man crew.

Other than confused radio signals, suggesting the loss of navigational facilities, nothing was ever heard of the six planes. Not even an oil slick was found.

Berlitz makes much of the fact that in many cases magnetic compasses in the area became useless, electrical equipment did not function and power drained from batteries.

The author does not mention the gyro compass, which is independent of the vagaries of magnetism. But the gyro, of course is spun by an electric motor.

Berlitz, who wrote his book in collaboration with Dr. J. Manson Valentine, honorary curator of the Museum of Science of Miami and an authority on the area, does not offer any detailed explanations or solutions to the strange happenings.

But he leans heavily toward the possibility that flying saucers or unidentified flying objects (UFOs) might be responsible.

He Can Run His House Without Leaving His Bed

OTTAWA (CP) — Harry Perley-Martin, 85, never throws anything away.

Just take a look at his bed.

Mr. Perley-Martin, a retired jack-of-all-trades, has the most convenient bed in the country. Above it, hanging like a strange mobile, dangle strings with typewriter erasers, plastic salt-dispenser tops or Cracker-Jack prizes taped to the ends.

Pulling one of them switches on the light. A tug on another and the television switches off. The air vent and the window shutter are controlled by two more.

From his bed Mr. Perley-Martin sees up and down the street by means of a periscope made from strategically located mirrors aimed at his basement window.

His kitchen utensils are fashioned from old copper tubing, scraps of metal and broken cutlery. His work table is made out of an old door and a breakfast-in-bed tray from a discarded washstand.

Other odds and ends go into artwork and handmade toys for the neighborhood kids.

"I've never been so happy in my life," he said. "These kids are part of my life."

His most notorious invention is a home-made pair of crutches to which he attached a red "stop' flag on an old extending television antenna. It helped him cross the wide street of Winnipeg when he visited there last year.

The crutches have a red leather change purse and a ball-point penholder attached within easy reach.

Mr. Perley-Martin turns old hockey sticks and metal into professional looking walking sticks. Although he has given away most of the 14 canes he has made he keeps a couple handy for personal use.

"I always take one with me on my bicycle in case I need a little help,' he said.

Mr. Perley-Martin has been, among other things, a prospector, surveyor, newspaper display-advertising salesman and life insurance salesman.

He has lived in many cities across the country but calls Ottawa home.

He attended Elgin Street Public School here from 1896 to 1903. He returned recently to the new Elgin Street school and signed a photo of the original building as one of its earliest students

But he really returned to the school to see the children. Last December they sent him handmade Christmas cards which he keeps stored in a corner of his crowded room.

A descendant of United Empire Loyalists, he has traced his Welsh predecessors to New Brunswick.

He dug out information from Ottawa relatives' keepsakes and has made donations to a Saint John museum and to Merritt House, a Loyalist home.

Display Rivalry

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Interservice rivalry is displayed by two billboards on opposite corners here. One is for the army, showing a large group of smiling soldiers. Across the street the other billboard depicts one marine with the caption: "Quality, Not Quantity."

Madrid's Blue Skies Obscured by Smog

MADRID (Reuter) — Air pollution and mushrooming apartment blocks are messing up the face of Madrid.

Gone are the limpid blue skies that Velasquez, Goya and other great masters loved to paint.

Even their priceless paintings are threatened by the smog seeping into the exhibition halls of the Prado, one of the world's most important art museums.

Situated in the centre of Spain, on a plateau at the foot of the Guadarrama Mountains, Madrid has a population that has grown to four million in 15 years.

Apartment buildings have sprouted in once green areas. Cars clog the streets and innumerable chimneys belch out smoke during Madrid's long hard winter.

Air pollution has become so bad that the government is considering drastic measures to cut it down.

Proposals made by a study group led by the mayor of Madrid, Miguel Angel Garcia-Lomas, include:

—Banning all vehicles except buses from certain streets and permitting cars to circulate only on odd or even-numbered days, according to their plate numbers.

—Reducing the hours central heating is used.

—Improving the quality of fuels used in transport and heating by reducing their sulphur content.

While anti-pollution measures await the approval of General Franco's cabinet, the Spanish Association for the Defence of the Environment has written a bitter complaint to Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro.

Chinese Soldiers Seek More Money

CANTON, China (Reuter) — "We want more money," a demand heard with regularity in the capitalist West, has become a slogan of ex-soldiers in Canton.

Handwritten "big-character posters" in this bustling city of three million allege that demobilized soldiers have been deprived of their allowances and extra payments.

"We demand more money for disbanded soldiers," one former member of the People's Liberation Army wrote on his poster.

'We warmly welcome the whole population of the city discussing the question of ex-servicemen's pay and allowances," said another poster, signed by a "Kwangtung province ex-army heavy industry worker."

On another main street, a corner wall is filled with closely written posters arguing the same subject.

Apart from these notices, Canton's poster campaigns have come to an end.

Street walls, which until recently were covered with red and black characters criticizing Lin Piao and Confucius, have been newly whitewashed.

Observers here believe this indicates the year-long campaign against the ancient sage and former "comrade-in-arms" of Chairman Mao is over.

Canton, the volatile southern gateway to China, has, however, been experiencing another sort of poster campaign which has been given less publicity.

These posters, detailing court proceedings, seldom appear in other Chinese cities open to foreigners and are not easy to spot here.

On the back wall of a busy second-hand clothes shop is a warning to criminals.

Issued by the municipl peoples court, this poster listed 40 people who had been punished for various serious crimes ranging from assault to spying.

One man, the notice said, was executed for being a Kuomintang agent, an 18-year-old was shot for rape and a third man suffering the death penalty was listed as an "anti-revolutionary element."

The names of those executed were crossed through in red ink.

Most of the others listed had been given long periods of hard labor or had death sentences suspended for a period during which they would be given a chance to reform.

Canton's crime problems seem to focus on juvenile delinquency and the tensions arising from a large, tightly-packed urban population.

City authorities have found one novel answer to the problem—displaying offenders in a tumbril.

The Chinese-style open cart, preceded by a motorcycle with sidecar, does not lead offenders to the guillotine as in the French Revolution but is intended to humiliate them publicly.

Witnesses recently saw 10 shame-faced young men in such an open truck. All looked in their teens and each wore a white paper placard around his neck stating his name, crime and punishment—mostly remoulding through hard work.

In front, a member of the public security police in the sidecar broadcast a tape-recorded message.

"At night Li crept into a comrade's dormitory and stole a watch," the loudspeaker bawled.

An everyday example of the Chinese method of using humiliation to cure minor offenders occurred on a crowded Canton trolley.

The conductor leapt out at a stop, ran across the road and brought two young men back by their ears. They had apparently got off without paying.

Israeli Scientists Incite Algae War

TABGHA, Israel (AP) — Without the Sea of Galilee, Israel might die of thirst.

The biblical sea—actually a lake—is the only big pool of fresh water in Israel. It provides one-third of the country's water supply, from household taps to irrigation in the Negev Desert.

Now the sea where Jesus preached is threatend with pollution and Israli scientists are striving to save it.

Working in a laboratory on the traditional spot where Christ fed the multitudes with loaves and fishes, the scientists have found a unique anti-pollution technique, says Dr Colette Serruya, a water expert from France.

The plan is to start a biological war among the algae, the scum-like organisms that pollute the depths of the sea. As different kinds of algae fight one other for living space, the water is expected to clear.

"We hope to do this by regulating the level of the lake," said Dr. Serruya, director o fthe government-sponsored research laboratory. This means simply pumping more water from the lake in summer and letting it refill in winter.

Shrinking the lake in the summer heat would increase the concentration of phosphorus and nitrates in the remaining water, making too rich a diet for the peridinium-type of algae that infest it, she explained. This would permit other, less-polluting types of algae to take over.

"But we must control it very, very closely because this is real biological war."

Three years ago Israel's Nature Reserves Authority forecast that the Sea of Galilee was "doomed to utter ruin by pollution." Some experts predicted it would be dead by 1978.

Dr. Serruya contends that although the sea's condition is "far from ideal," it is not yet polluted.

"I drink from it all the time," she said.

Some of the lake's pollution-like qualities, its peculiar chemical composition and almost total lack of oxygen in summer, are due to the heat of the water—63 degrees at its coldest up to 100 degrees.

Th lake, egg-shaped and 13 miles long, nestles 685 feet below sea level and summer vacationers swelter in the hat.

Yoram Avnimelech, a professor from Israel's Institute of Technology, said that draining the swamps of the Hulah Valley was a triumph of pioneering in the 1950s, but it meant pollution for the lake.

It exposed half a million years of accumulated peat soil to the atmosphere. The soil instantly began to decompose, producing vast amounts of nitrates that are washed into the Sea of Gallilee by winter rains.

Some authorities recommended re-flooding the velley to cover the peat but a university team has developed a system of clearing out the nitrates with bacteria.

"The problem may be solved in two or three years," predicted Avnimelech, who co-ordinates research on the Galilee watershed.

But a tougher problem may arise, he said.

Much of the water that feeds the Sea of Galilee and the upper Jordan River comes from springs on the Golan Heights which rise from its northeast shore. If Israel returned the Golan to Syria under U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's peace initiatives, Avnimelech said, the Syrians might cut off 50 per cent of those sources and gravely affect Israel's entire water supply.

Races Mix

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — City officials say there have been no racial incidents since Africans were allowed to mix with whites in public parks, libraries, museums, the art gallery and zoo a year ago.

Francois Oberholzer, chairman of the city council's management committee, said:

"We have had about two dozen complaints from whites in protest against the city's measures to give the blacks a better deal—but they represent a very small percentage of the city's white population.

Oberholzer released figures recently showing that since the "whites only" signs were removed a total of 12,984 Africans have used the city's nine reference libraries while 4,462 joined lending libraries.

Aerial combat began in August, 1914, when pilots of German and Allied planes started shooting at each other with rifles and pistols, with negligible results.

Today's Diplomat Is From New Mould

RIO DE JANEIRO (CP)—Roger Blake is a diplomat who doesn't fit the stereotype of one.

At 35, he is one of the youngest Canadians to head a mission, the consul and trade commissioner's post here.

Blake represents a new diplomatic breed. He is aggressive, outgoing and hardworking, less bound by protocol than was his father, a retired diplomat now living in Victoria after serving in various parts of Europe, Australia and the Caribbean.

Blake sees himself as a marriage broker.

"You never really get an in-depth knowledge of the field or area a businessman is involved in," he said in an interview. "Instead, more often you end up acting as a marriage broker seeking to bring interested parties together.

"This job is unpredictable. In one moment I may be dealing with a Canadian businessman wanting to sell candy in Brazil and later have to deal with a Canadian tourist who has lost his passport."

Blake is usually in his office at 7:30 a.m. and works through to about 6, compared with the usual 8-to-4:45 Brazilian working day.

He and the 14 members of the staff are involved in a variety of activities, from dealing with Brazilian authorities when a travelling Canadian runs afoul of the law to representing Canada at official functions such as national Brazilian holidays.

Farmers' Security Act Questioned

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to broaden the federal Agriculture Stabilization Act, giving farmers more security against market and production slumps, had a cool reception when debate opened in the Commons Wednesday.

"I don't see this bill answering many of the problems facing agriculture," said Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot), an Alberta cattle rancher.

The changes, proposed by Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, are not responsive enough to cope with market and economic difficulties affecting farmers, he argued.

Mr. Whelan said his proposals will widen income-security measures already adopted by the government and give farmers more incentive to produce.

"If we ask them to produce without some kind of security, they'll just go down the drain," he said.

Introduced last month, the bill would add industrial milk and cream, corn and soybeans to the list of already covered by the stabilization act. These include cattle, hogs, sheep, butter, cheese, eggs, oats and wheat.

Barley is covered except in the so-called "designated area" of the Canadian wheat board, the Prairies and a section of British Columbia.

The amendments proposed by Mr. Whelan would delete wheat, butter, cheese and eggs from the act because other federal measures have been enacted separately to cover them.

The bill also would reduce the period used for price support calculations to five years from 10, a move Justice Minister Otto Lang has said will let the government be "much more sensitive to current conditions."

If a farmer loses money in one year, average prices over the past five years, instead of 10, would be used to determine the assistance he gets to help offset losses.

Another provision in the bill would implement an indexing system to cover rising production costs.

Despite the upbeat appraisal given by Mr. Whelan, Mr. Horner, Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) and Adrien Lambert (SC—Bellechasse) were critical.

Mr. Peters said it amounted to "reworking a bunch of words and putting them in different form." Mr. Lambert called it a patch-job and said the stabilization act should be replaced completely.

Support coverage would rise through the bill to 90 per cent of the five-year average from 80 per cent. Total protection may be provided if the provinces or producers are willing to participate, Mr. Whelan said.

Protection is vital in the current economic climate, he added. Statistics Canada forecasts indicate net farm incomes will drop 12 per cent this year.

"I would like to know what other parts of society are being asked to accept such a nosedive in 1975," Mr. Whelan said. "Many other segments of our society are refusing reasonable offers such as a 25-per-cent (income) increase."

Ban on Nuclear Plants Proposed

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian and United States conservationists, uniting for the first time in their efforts to upgrade the environment, proposed Wednesday that no new nuclear power plants be considered in either country.

The Canada-U.S. Environmental Council (CUSEC) called for a cautious approach to off-shore drilling and strip-mining and alternative, non-nuclear technologies for extracting oil from shale and oil sands.

The council also supported a plan to try to talk to North Pacific whales.

The council, formed in Toronto last November, includes 15 private environmental groups, 10 of them Canadian, claiming a combined membership of about 100,000 persons.

Various groups within the over-all body—at their two-day meeting which ended Wednesday—voted for:

Double bottoms for supertankers, delay of proposed dredging and damming of the Richelieu River in Quebec, opposition to any oil or natural gas transmission across the Arctic wildlife range in Alaska and the Yukon, and more humane killing of fur seals.

They also passed resolutions calling for long-term assessments in the energy field, continued opposition to the Garrison irrigation project in North Dakota; and setting up a system of environmental-impact assessments on a large scale across Canada.

The whaling venture is Project Ahab, in which Greenpeace V will sail from Winter Harbor, B.C., in April for a three-month attempt to halt taking of whales in the North Pacific by Japanese and Soviet whalers.

The crew will try to "communicate scientifically" by using underwater sound equipment to signal whales away from a given area.

31-nation Food Talks Under Way

LONDON (CP) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen of Canada ended a three-day visit here Wednesday after meeting British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan and helping to launch a Commonwealth conference on food production.

He told reporters before leaving for Canada that he hopes the 31-country food conference will produce an information exchange leading to better, agricultural development programs.

In the meeting with Callaghan, he said he discussed energy questions, Prime Minister Trudeau's London visit next week, the April Commonwealth leaders' meeting in Jamaica and other issues.

At the food conference, held behind closed doors, MacEachen approved establishment of a new food and agricultural development division within the Commonwealth ssecretariat.

He said Wednesday that the division, "a modest initiative," could co-ordinate Commonwealth farm programs and advise member governments.

Interest in the idea had been voiced by Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith and Judith Hart, British overseas development minister.

Votes of Emigrants Sought

ROME (AP) — Italian emigrants, a bloc of millions but often overlooked in the past, are being rediscovered. Italian political parties now are counting them as a vast reservoir of potential votes.

The government has laid on special trains to bring emigrants in Europe back to vote, but now there is talk of giving the vote to Italians living in the United States, Canada and the other immigrant communities across the ocean.

The issue came up at the national conference on emigration, a week-long session ostensibly called to deal with the persistent trek of Italians to other lands.

Extending the franchise may seem like a simple exercise in democracy. But some delegates to the conference, particularly North Americans, are wary of exporting Italian politics and the closely linked labor movement abroad.

"The hammer and sickle of the Italian Communist party is not what we need in Canada," one conference observer remarked. "We have our own problems."

The issue of voting really turns on the aspirations of emigrants, estimated at between five and six million—or a tenth of the population of Italy. Of the 2.4 million Italians living in Europe, all but a few retain their Italian citizenship, an Italian residence and the hope to return eventually with a small nestegg to their native land.

"But when an Italian emigrates to the United States it is a final decision," said Rev. Silvano Tomasi, a sociologist who heads the Centre on Migration Studies on Staten Island, N.Y.

"The goal of immigrants to the so-called Anglosaxon countries, the United States, Canada and Australia, is integration. They've left Italy behind."

Deaf Student Now Trying Teaching Career

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Susan Gemmell and Anne McKercher are both university graduates and both are student teachers at Sir James Whitney school for the deaf — yet they live in different worlds.

The difference is the world of sound and each one in her own way is attempting to break the barriers that separate them as teachers.

Anne, 27, a native of Petrollia, Ont., has been deaf since birth. She spent about 14 years of her life at the Ontario school for the deaf in Belleville.

After graduation she attended the only university for the deaf in the world, Gallaudet College, in Washington, D.C., and studied history.

She returned to Sir James Whitney last year to become a teacher of the deaf. Anne is one of three deaf student teachers at the school.

Susan, 23, a native of Toronto, graduated from the University of Guelph in 1971 with a degree in economics. She later decided to pursue a teaching career and attended McCarther College in Kingston.

Inspired by previous work with retarded children Susan enrolled last September in the course and upon graduation plans to join Sir James Whitney as a full-time teacher.

Both student teachers spend about 10 weeks of the year teaching the deaf students as well as the entire month of June. The remaining portion of the course involves classroom and seminar work.

They are required to teach one year after graduation to attain their teaching certificate which qualifies them to work in any one of Ontario's three schools for the deaf.

For Susan the major stumbling block is learning to communicate with the impaired hearing students.

She said the one to one correspondence in this type of teaching appeals to her as well as the fact that it is a relatively unknown field of education.

The choice of teaching the deaf for Anne was a simple and natural one. Upon her graduation she will be one of the few deaf teachers in Ontario. Belleville now has one.

The common bond of wanting to teach the deaf will undoubtedly help to break down the barriers and bring their two worlds together.

Committee Plans Awareness Week

An organizing committee for speech and hearing month has decided its time Belleville residents learned first hand about hearing impaired people.

The committee met Wednesday night at Centennial secondary School to launch this city's first "Deaf Awareness Week" tentatively scheduled for sometime in May.

Committee chairman, Louise Ford, an interpreter at Sir James Whitney school for the deaf, said the committee will attempt to hold most of the activities at the Quinte Mall.

She said instead of the traditional "open house" approach to speech and hearing month the committee will encourage deaf people to get into the community.

"The major aim of the local campaign will be to educate the public about deafness," she added.

The group will try to organize displays depicting the various equipment available to deaf or hard of hearing people.

Mrs. Ford said the committee will ask the city to declare one week in May "Deaf Awareness Week."

McLauchlan Seeks NDP Nomination

A 30-year-old Belleville resident, who ran in last December's city hall elections, will seek the New Democratic Party nomination for Quinte riding in the next provincial election.

Carson McLauchlan, a Canadian National Railways office worker, is the first NDP politician to announce his intenion to run in the March 13 nomination convention.

The riding has been represented since 1967 by Correctional Services Minister Richard Potter.

A native of Belleville, Mr. McLauchlan made his first bid for political office in the last civic election. He finisher in 14th place among 22 candidates running for 10 council seats. He polled 1,400 votes in a contest where voting returns ranged from almost 4,000 to 470.

Mr. McLauchlin, married with one daughter, said the NDP is the party "most committed" to maintaining close links between government and individuals.

An elected politician, he said, "must encourage grassroots participation" in his area.

Health Care Aides Complete Course

Eighteen health care aides, all employees of both Belcrest Nursing Home and Montgomery Lodge, graduated Wednesday in the fourth such aide course conducted through Loyalist College's extension division.

The women, all area residents, had entered the course to augment their work experience, taking both on-the-job training and college classes as well as work supervision.

From Belcrest, the graduates are Anna Golden of RR1, Roslin, Georgina Zebedee, RR5, Trenton, Cathy Willms, 166 Ann St., Carole Dallaire 105 Selena Dr., Ruth Clark, RR3, Avonlough Rd., and Gloria Asselstine, 12 Jane St., all of Belleville.

The Montgomery graduates all reside in Belleville — Muriel Cole, 58 Prince of Wales Dr., Marjorie Bunnett, 138 Charles St., Genaveen Ladoucier, 100 Gilbert St., Trudy Young, 20 Tripp Ave., Madeleine Peters, 207 Dundas St., Helen Cantello, 19 Harvest St., Lillian Haill, 216 Dufferin Ave., Suzanne Fobert, 33 Janlyn Cresc., Mary Bryans, 5 Lee Ave., Gwen Gibson, 16 Tripp Ave., Molly Kent, 36 Elgin St., and Anna Levinetz, 285 Bleecker Ave.

School Budget May be Late

The Hastings county board of education may be several weeks late in striking a 1975 budget.

Education director Eric Runacres said Wednesday the board cannot bring down a budget until government grant regulations are received.

The grant regulations spell out the educational ceilings as well as revenues based on the number of elementary and secondary school students.

Mr. Runacres said the county budgetary requirements have been set. Last year the board came down with a budget during the first week in April.

He predicted the 1975 budget will be made public either the second or third week of April. Prior to 1974 school board budgets were usually formulated by March.

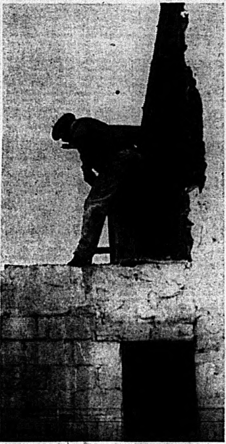
Mr. Runacres said last year's increase was about eight or nine per cent. He would not speculate on this year's budget increase.

Trail Display at Quinte Mall

The Quinte-Hastings Recreational Trail (QHRT) is putting the $3,000 worth equipment to be won in its current funds-drive lottery on public display at the Quinte Mall this weekend.

The trail display, under supervision of Fred Bemis, city industrial commissioner, who is QHRT vice-chairman, is aimed at making tickets easily available in the lottery with which the organization hopes to raise about $6,000.

Prizes, to be drawn March 19, are snowmobile, a street-trail bike, hiking and cross-country ski equipment.



Looking Up

Work is progressing on the demolition of the block at the city's four corners to make way for the Century Place to be ready for occupancy in spring of next year. Here a worker goes about the job of tearing down one of the walls. The building is slated to be levelled in about four or five weeks.

Faraday Gets Approval For Mine Operation

Re-opening of the Farady uranium mine at Bancroft has moved a crucial official step closer with an approval of operation from the provincial government.

An exemption, required under provincial mining regulation for extraction of Faraday ore — scheduled for export to Italy — has been granted by the province Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings said today.

"This means as far as the Ontario government is concerned, we can go ahead with our operation," said Del Wilson, mining consultant in charge of readying the mine for resuming production that ceased with a market drop in the early 1960's.

Mr. Rollins said he'd been advised by the natural resources ministry the province has approved the "necessary authority" to Consolidated Canadian Faraday uner section 113 of the Mining Act for "exemption of the products to Italy".

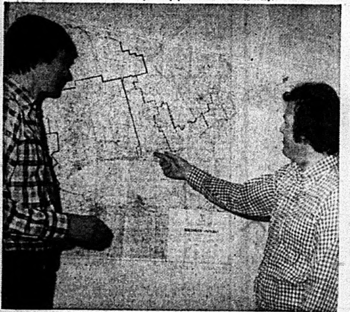
The secion involves treatment processes of mined ore, a ministry official in Toronto said today.

Mining operations are a provincial jurisdiction, while exports are regulated by the federal government.

Six weeks ago it was confirmed in Ottawa that lenghy negotiations over the proposed exports had been concluded with federal mines and energy authorities.

But the contract has yet to be approved by the Atomic Energy Control Board, whose involvement includes concern with reserves for domestic use.

Last month Mr. Rollins told Hastings County council the mine expected to begin work with an initial 40 workers this spring when needed provincial approvals were received.



They're Watching

Environment officers with the Belleville district office of the provincial ministry of the environment, Doug Wilkie and Doug Graham, check the territory they cover from their Belleville office. The office, on Victoria Ave., is one of four in eastern Ontario designed to get ministry's services closer to the areas served.

Bright Future Painted For Commercial Core

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

This year will be one filltd with changes for downtown Belleville.

Gerry O'Shaughnessy, in his first newsletter as president of the downtown association, says, "a great many aggravating situations exist and must be dealt with."

He warns the 12-man executive, "the work load will not be light ... some touchy subjects must be discussed and a decision reached through a united front."

One of the major changes in the association this year has been the growth of enthusiasm among members and the willingness to work towards "re-vitalization" of the downtown area, says Doug Row, association vice-president. Mr. Row, during an interview Wednesday, spoke on the business climate downtown in the absence of the association president.

One "touchy area" Mr. O'Shaughnessy pointed to is the formation of uniform store hours.

"There are staffing problems and one thing and another but we are working towards some uniformity," said Mr. Row.

"This is going to be our biggest and best year yet," said Mr. Row. He based his optimism on a $15,000 budget granted the association by the downtown improvement board.

For two years, all business in the downtown core has paid a special tax levy to the board for improvement projects.

The 1975 budget includes an advertising campaign promoting the downtown as a place to shop and provides capital for several downtown events.

Other planks in Mr. O'Shaughnessy's platform for 1975 include upgrading of downown sidewalks, improveed street lighting and early compliance with the city's recently-passed sign bylaw.

"The bylaw banning overhanging signs now is in force and pressure must be applied ... to have some of our members pull down some of these Mickey Mouse contraptions called signs," said Mr. O'Shaughnessy.

Association Wants Say In Parking Problems

Gerry O'Shaughnessy, president of the Belleville Downtown Association, Wednesday said city merchants should have a larger say in the workings of the city Parking Authority.

Mr. O'Shaughnessy, in his first newsletter says an association "voice in the use of land management now and in the future could alter productivity for the whole area."

He says municipal parking lot on Pinnacle is a "waste" of prime land and that the city should consider building a row of new stores on the site topped with three levels of parking garage.

Trio Hurt In Crash

TRENTON — An ambulance was dispatched for three persons injured in an accident involving a motorcycle and a car on Highway near County Road 21 just east of here at 8:50 p.m. Wednesday.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said today the driver of the motorcycle was Charles J. Byrieter of Consecon and the driver of a 1971 Mercury was Thomas D. Holmwood of 132 Byron St. in Trenton.

Police had no information on an injured passenger, Anne Windo.

A damage estimate and other accident details were not available.

Tools Taken In Break-in

City police are investigating an overnight theft from a lumber company at 405 Dundas St. E.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said today a drill and saw were stolen from Arthus A. Sills and Son Ltd. Entry was gained by breaking a window.

It is not known yet if anything else was taken.

Manpower Offers Course In Proper Job-hunting

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

"The vast majority of people do not know how or where to seek employment," says Grant Armstrong of the Canada Manpower Centre (CMC) at 133 Dundas St. E.

So CMC has developed a special course for occupation-seekers entitled Creative Job Search Technique of which Mr. Armstrong is an instructor here.

He points out 70 per cent of people who follow the outline of the course find work in 30 days. And 10 per cent more discover employment in 60 days, he adds.

But 20 per cent do not bother making an attempt, notes Mr. Armstrong. "The onus is on people to get out and find work," he says.

If a person is looking for an eight-hour a day job, five days per week, he should spend an equal amount of time on that search, he emphasizes.

When speaking with a prospective employer, always ask for an interview, Mr. Armstrong advises. "Be yourself and be honest."

He explains the first minute of any interview is important. In attitude and appearance, "be neat, tidy and polite."

"Don't underestimate the receptionist in that front office," comments Mr. Armstrong. "That girl can tip the scales in your favor."

He also advises not to pay attention to the term "unskilled job". "I hate the term," he remarks.

"There is no job that does not require a skill," says Mr. Armstrong. "There might be an unskilled individual but never an unskilled job."

How to Find a Job

Pollution Control One Task of New Office

By CASH MAHAFFY
Staff Reporter

The Ontario ministry of the environment is keeping a closer eye than ever on Hastings and Prince Edward Counties with the establishment of a district office at 15 Victoria Ave., Belleville.

Six environment officers and two secretaries, all local residents, staff the office, which is concerned with three basic environmental areas:

— Municipal and private waste abatement, under the direction of John Tooley.

— Industrial abatement, under George Skalin.

— Pesticides control, under Don Raddon.

Three additional environment officers complete the office's professional staff. Their area of jurisdiction covers Hastings and Prince Edward counties and Murray Township.

The Belleville office is one of four district offices under the Kingston regional offices. The others are at Cornwall, Ottawa and Pembroke.

A major job of the municipal and private section is checking proposed land severances to determine if properties are suitable for septic tanks, wells, refuse disposal. Recommendations are made to the county's land division committee after inspection.

Also under this section is the supervision of sewage and water treatment plants and waste disposal sites in the district. Records are kept of all wells and well drillers are licensed.

Further activity includes checking tent and trailer camps to determine their environmental impact and working with developers on the environmental implications of proposed subdivisions.

In the industrial sphere, the big job is pollution abatement, either after or before it begins. For instance, new plants or manufacturing processes must be approved by the ministry before they go into operation.

All of these activities and restrictions are covered under the province's Environmental Protection Act of 1971, which now is being updated.

Under the act offenders can be prosecuted, but this seldom occurs as most offenders, when made awa er o Lichtr when made aware of their offence, correct it within a reasonable length of time.

Trenton Pioneers' goalie Spike Martin appears to have increased his height by at least a foot as he gets up in the air, full length, while making stop during Wednesday night exhibition match with Manitoba Oldtimers at Trenton Community Gardens. The Manitoba team posted 7-3 win.

Manitoba Team Old but Sharp

TRENTON — Like the hair on the heads of many of the oldtimer hockey players showing their stuff on the ice at the Community Gardens here, Wednesday night, the turnout for the exhibition match was sparse.

To their credit, members of the Manitoba Oldtimers and Trenton Pioneers did not let the fact they were snubbed by hockey fans detract from their performance.

Past their prime though they may be, players on both sides showed plenty of savvy, gained from years of experience in first rate professional and amateur ranks.

The Manitoba squad, just returned from a series of exhibition games at Canadian Forces Bases in Europe, turned it on in the third period Wednesday to skate off with a 7-3 win.

The winners held a 3-1 edge after two periods.

The absence of body checking made for a fast, well-played contest with the action flashing from end to end.

Ron Castelane scored twice for Manitoba. Other goals went to Father Elmer MacGillivray, Clare Wakshinsky, Ross Parke, Bud McCormick and Rollie Marion.

Trenton scorers were Jim Bonn, Dan Murphy and Bert Garrett.

Three BCI Teams COSSA Bound

By DOUG WALSH
Sports Editor

Belleville Collegiate Institute (BCI) teams will represent the Bay of Quinte in Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association (COSSA) AA playoffs in Cobourg, Saturday.

The BCI powerhouse faltered only slightly on the way to wrapping up berths in the COSSA showdown, during a special playoff series staged Wednesday night at Loyalist College.

As expected, East Northumberland Secondary School of Brighton gave the BCI Midgets a stern argument before bowing 35-33.

But in the senior and junior sudden death showdowns, BCI had things its own way. The seniors thumped Napanee and District Secondary School 73-37 while the juniors got past Moira Secondary School 45-32.

Larry Wilson took care of most of the winners' scoring in the senior match, hitting for 30 points. He also hauled down 16 rebounds. Larry Savage checked in with 14 points and Chris Lachman produced another strong performance, scoring 13 points, coralling nine rebounds and demonstrating his ability to harass the opposition by coming up with eight steals.

The only unsettling development for BCI was the fact Russ Simonds came out of the action with a sprained ankle.

George Eadie had 12 Napanee points and Larry Thompson threw in eight.

In the junior match, John Geen played a prominent role in BCI's victory. He shared leadership in production with Mitch Hannah as each clicked for 14 points. Ron Bell was good for eight.

High scorer in the game was Moira's Scott Sisson who found the range for 17 points. Colin McKay had five.

East Northumberland midgets made a strong bid to prevent BCI from sweeping the tripleheader. Sparked by Boers, 14 points, and Platt, eight, the Brighton squad made it interesting.

But BCI said it with a well balanced attack which saw five players combine their talents to chalk up just enough points to get the job done. Mike Wright had nine; Randy Donovan, eight, and Jeff Cass, Dwight Begley and Chris Niblet, six each.

Saturday's COSSA finals will be held at Cobourg East Collegiate.

Generals in Command

Belleville Generals wrapped up second place in the Gas House Hockey League standings at Memorial Arena Wednesday night, topping Rollins Lumber 5-3 in the showdown for runnerup honors.

The teams went into the confrontation with identical records of 16 wins, five losses and a pair of ties for 34 points.

FINAL STANDINGS

	W	L	T	Pts.
Stanley Structures	22	1	1	45
Belleville Generals	17	5	2	36
Rollins Lumber	16	6	2	34
Chuckwagon Foods	16	7	1	33
Jim's Pizzeria	8	12	4	20
Constellation Carpets	9	14	1	19
Belleville Yardmen	6	16	2	14
Art's Esso	5	19	0	10
Canadian Durabla	2	21	1	5

Unfortunately, the game was marred by a rash of penalties of a serious nature, including fighting majors, misconducts and game misconducts. It was the type of display the league can do without.

Steve Truelove led Generals to the important win with a pair of goals. Looking after the other counters were Peter Delanty, Bill Van Soelen and Gary Goyer. Goyer also picked up a pair of assists.

Counting for Rollins were Bruce Pascoe, Dale Tummon and Bill Lynch.

Confirmation of league playoff dates is expected today.

Stirling Peewees Shaded

PICKERING (Special) — Stirling Legion Peewee All-stars lost 4-3 overtime here Wednesday night in the first game of an Ontario Minor Hockey Association DD quarter-final series.

Second and third games in the best of five series are scheduled for Stirling, Friday night at 7.15 p.m., and Monday, March 10 at 7.15. If fourth and fifth games are necessary, they will be played in Pickering, March 12, and Stirling, March 14.

Ferdinand Klompmaker, Mike Jackson and Brian Doxtator counted the Stirling goals in Wednesday's match. Earning assists were Brian Wood, Tim Klompmaker and Steve Fargey.

Gregory Rink Takes O'Connor Trophy Event

The annual Sports Ladies Bonspiel for the O'Connor Trophy, staged by the Quinte Curling Club, attracted 32 rinks Wednesday with the Betty Gregory foursome taking top honors in the one-day event.

Rounding out Gregory's championship rink are Bunny McLean, vice skip; Mary Callahan, second, and Vera Hatfield, lead.

Runnerup for top honors was the Gloria Jones rink with members Inez Heeney, Grace Clement and Gwen Brain.

Wyn Maund was convener for the event.

Rick MacLeish

Six-point Night Not Satisfactory

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rick MacLeish scored three goals and assisted on three others Wednesday night but the Philadelphia Flyers centre was still not satisfied.

"Two years ago I scored four goals and came up with three assists in a game against Toronto," said MacLeish after he had helped the Flyers beat Minnesota North Stars 9-2 in a National Hockey League game.

"I should have had two more goals tonight. A puck jumped over my stick on one sure situation and I fanned on another."

Despite MacLeish's frustrations, the Flyers broke a seven-game winless streak on the road and increased their Patrick Division lead to 10 points over New York Rangers.

The Rangers dropped a 6-3 decision to Buffalo Sabres while, in other NHL games, Toronto Maple Leafs beat Detroit Red Wings 4-3, Montreal Canadiens edged Atlanta Flames 4-3, St. Louis Blues defeated Vancouver Canucks 5-2, Chicago Black Hawks beat California Seals 4-2, and Kansas City Scouts tied Pittsburgh Penguins 4-4.

"We were cooler tonight," said Flyers coach Fred Shero, "and (goalie) Wayne Stephenson has more confidence now since he's been playing more with Bernie Parent out of action with an injury.

"We really havent been playing that badly, no matter what anybody thinks," Shero continued. "We have some good players, like Bobby Clarke, but we still don't have any superstars."

Clarke assisted on both of MacLeish's first two goals and scored two himself. His two assists tied his own team record of 67 for the season.

At New York, the Sabres kept up a furious attack throughout the game.

"It was unbelievable," said New York defenceman Ron Harris. "They must have had jets on their skates. Every line they had was really moving."

Still, some Sabres did not consider the effort their best this season.

"I know we've played better games," said centre Don Luce, who scored his 29th goal of the season and set up another. "We weren't exactly laying back. We forced them to make mistakes, but I don't think it was our best."

Jim Lorentz and Rick Martin each scored twice for the Sabres.

In Toronto, the Red Wings looked as if they would escape with a 3-3 tie until, with only 22 seconds remaining, Darryl Sittler scored the winner for Toronto, his third goal of the night. The win extended Toronto's longest winning streak of the season to five games.

Steve Shutt scored two goals to lead Montreal over Atlanta, extending the Canadiens' record string of unbeaten road games to 21.

It was the second goal of the night for the 19-year-old Paiement, who took over the club leadership with 24 for the season. He has scored four goals in his last two games.

Claude Larose, Chuck Lefley and Bernie Lukowich scored in the first four minutes and Larry Sacharuk added a goal later in the first period to start St. Louis on its way to the win over Vancouver.

Chicago defenceman Dick Redmond scored the winning goal and assisted on two others to lead the Hawks who moved into first place in the Smythe [illegible] one point ahead of Vancouver.

Emms Fined, Suspended

Napier Eligible

TORONTO (CP) — Mark Napier was ruled eligible Wednesday to continue playing with Toronto Marlboros and St. Catharines Black Hawks officials were handed stiff penalties for their protests of Napier's pro contract.

Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz, commissioner of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series, suspended Black Hawks owner-manager Hap Emms for the remainder of the season and fined him $1,000.

Schmalz, in conjunction with OHA president Cliffe Phillips, also suspended Hawks coach Paul Emms for six games and fined the Hawks $50 for failing to start a Feb. 28 game against the Marlboros within the prescribed time.

Napier, an 18-year-old forward with the Marlies, signed a pro contract two weeks ago with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association. The contract takes effect next year but the Hawks' owner said Napier was now a pro and should no longer continue playing with the Marlies.

"Although we have great sympathy for the cause the St. Catharines club contested the night of Feb. 28, we feel the manner in which the club displayed its dismay was imprudent and not in the best interests of the OHA or its major junior group," Schmalz and Phillips said in a joint statement.

Hull Finds New Way to Score

Minnesota Fighting Saints Bless Whalers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New England Whalers are hanging on the ropes in Minnesota and the count of 10 may come in the playoffs.

"It is amazing that we have played this team nine times at home in three seasons and won every time," Minnesota coach Harry Neale said after the Fighting Saints' 5-3 World Hockey Association triumph Wednesday night. "That's good news. We may get them in the playoffs."

Elsewhere, Phoenix Roadrunners defeated Quebec Nordiques 6-3, Vancouver Blazers beat Edmonton Oilers 6-0, Winnipeg Jets beat Cleveland Crusaders 4-2 and Indianapolis Racers defeated Baltimore Blades 5-2.

Minnesota's victory kept the Saints two points behind second-place Phoenix in the West Division and, with 70 points, the Saints are in good position to claim at least a wild-card play-off berth.

Mike Antonovich and George Morrison scored two goals each as Minnesota continued its home mastery of New England. The game was not really decided until Morrison's second goal—his 29th of the season—with eight seconds left after the Whalers pulled goalie Al Smith.

"The thing is one team wants to perpetuate a jinx ... haps, the other is not prepared for the bad breaks," said Minnesota captain Ted Hampson. "I think the game was more important to us. We showed we needed it more than they did in the third period."

Dennis Sobchuk's two goals led the Phoenix victory. John Gray, Rob Florek, Don Borgeson and Michel Cormier were the other Phoenix scorers.

Vancouver beat Jacques Plante, Edmonton's 46-year-old goalie, for five goals in the first two periods. Danny Lawson started the barrage with his 25th goal of the season just 1:46 into the game and Bryan Campbell made it 2-0 late in the period.

Rob Walton scored his 15th and 16th goals in the second period and Johnny McKenzie added one. Plante was lifted in the third period in favor of Ken Brown and Les Burgess wrapped up the scoring at 17:10.

Vancouver goalie Don McLeod stopped 28 shots in recording the shutout.

Goals by Milt Black and Bobby Hull in the third period gave Winnipeg its victory. Black's third goal of the season broke a 2-2 tie at 12:55. His shot following a pass from Danny Spring was blocked by Cleveland goalie Gerry Cheevers, but the netminder lost his balance and the puck bounced behind him into the net.

Hull was awarded the final goal, his 57th of the season, by referee Brent Casselman with 30 seconds remaining. The Crusaders had yanked Cheevers in favor of an extra forward when Hull lofted the puck toward the Cleveland zone.

The shot was not hard enough to reach the net, but with Winnipeg's Anders Hedberg racing after it, Cheevers came off the bench to intercept it near the blue line and Hull was awarded the goal because the Crusaders had too many men on the ice.

Nick Harbaruk's two goals led Indianapolis against Baltimore. Harbaruk's goals were his 14th and 15th of the season. Other Indianapolis scorers were Brian McDonald, Bob Whitlock and Jim Wiste.

Gary Bredin and J.P. Leblanc scored for the Blades, who played with only 15 players, including two goalies.

Canadians Feel Chances for Gold Slipping

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (CP) — Canada's hopes for a gold medal at the 1975 world may be slipping away.

Canadian Champion Toller Cranston of Toronto, who came here as the favorite to win the men's singles, skated an artistically brilliant but technically flawed compulsory short program Wednesday and was unable to improve on his fourth-place standing.

The men's competition ends tonight with the free skating, and the 25-year-old Canadian is given only the slimmest chance of passing the three top skaters to win the crown although he could well finish in the medals.

Canada's chances of winning any sort of medal in the women's singles also evaporated as Lynn Nightingale, 18-year-old national champion from Ottawa, had difficulty in the compulsory figures and found herself in 13th place.

From there it must be considered a virtual impossibility to make it to the top three on the strength of today's program and Friday night's free skating which together account for 60 percent of total marks in the singles competition.

And Canadians never came close to a medal in the pairs competition which wound up Wednesday night with Irina odnina and Aleksandr Zaitsev of the Soviet Union taking their third consecutive title. Canadian pairs finished 11th and 14th.

Leader of the men's singles is Sergei Volkov of the Soviet Union, who barely edged Cranston for second place in last year's championship in Munich. Volkov was also first after the figures but lost some ground in the compulsory free skating to second place John Curry of England and third-place Vladimir Kovalev of the Soviet Union.

Cranston had trouble with a triple loop-double loop combination jump in the compulsory free skating and was ranked third in this part of the competition.

In singles skating, school figures count 40 per cent, the short program 20 per cent and free skating the remaining 40.

With a super performance in the free skating, Cranston could still capture the gold but only if Curry and Kovalev skate less than their best and if, as experts expect, Volkov drops out of first place.

Ron Shaver, 23, of Cambridge, Ont., who was fifth in the world last year but missed the 1975 Canadian championships because of a groin injury, had difficulty with his jump combination and slipped from sixth to seventh place over all.

Bob Rubens, 22, who comes from Dollar des Ormeaux, Que., fell during his short program and placed 18th among the 22 competitors although he moved up one place to 17 in the overall standings.

First in the men's short program was Yuri Ovchinnikov of the Soviet Union whose marks included a perfect six awarded by the Soviet Judge for artistic impression. He moved up from ninth to sixth place.

Second was Curry who also received a perfect six for artistic impression—from the English judge.

Cranston received a standing ovation from the crowd for his artistic two-minute free-skating performance but, after getting into difficulty in his jump combination, he received marks for technical merit ranging from 5.6 from the English judge to 5.9 from the Canadian judge, Ralph McCreath of Ottawa.

The judges were in more agreement on the brilliance of his artistry, however, and he received eight marks of 5.9 for artistic impression and one 5.8, from the English judge.

The women's singles competition, which continues today with the short program and ends Friday night, saw Dianne de Leeuw, a 19-year-old native of the U.S. who has dual citizenship and skates for the Netherlands, in first place after the figures.

Second is Karin Iten of Switzerland and third Isabel De Navarre of West Germany. Defending champion Christine Errath of East Germany is sixth.

Miss Nightingale is a disappointed 13th, mainly the result of difficulty with the first of the three figures, and Kim Alletson, 16, also of Ottawa's Minto Skating Club, is 14th.

Disconsolate because she feels she is not making progress in a bid for a world championship medal, Lynn said she might consider retiring after Colorado.

"It's difficult to think of continuing when you don't feel you are improving."

For Miss Alletson, runner-up to Lynn in this year's Canadian standing after the school figures was not a surprise. Marilyn Thompson, who coaches both Canadian girls said that was about the best that could be expected from the judges who are aware this is Kim's first world competition.

The pairs competition saw Candy Jones of Toronto and Don Fraser of Richmond Hill, Ont., finishing 11th while Kathy Hutchinson and Jamie McGrigor of Cambridge, Ont., finished last in the field of 14 pairs.

East German couples took the silver and bronze medals. Romy Kermer and Rolf Oesterreich finished second and Manuela Gross and Uwe Kagelmann took the third-place bronze.

Emlyn Hughes Dropped

LONDON (AP) — Emlyn Hughes, England's soccer captain for the last nine internationals, was dropped Wednesday from the squad that will meet West Germany in an exhibition game March 12 at Wembley Stadium.

England manager Don Revie's 20-man squad includes eight new names and several surprise omissions.

A new captain was not announced although Colin Bell of Manchester City was an obvious favorite for the post.

Revie has said he planned to try-out as many new faces as possible over the next 12 months.

Newcomers include defender Steve Whitworth of Leicester, Alan Kennedy of Newcastle, Sunderland's Tony Towers, Dennis Tueart of Manchester City, Everton captain Roger Kenyon, Ipswich twin strikers Kevin Beattie and Dave Johnson, and Alan Hudson of Stoke City.

Notable absentees include Leeds United defenders Norman Hunter and Terry Cooper, as well as Trevor Brooking of West Ham.

IN MEMORIAM

ANDREW — In loving memory of our dear grandad William Andrew, who passed away one year ago, March 6, 1974.

We remember you Grandad,
Rocking in your chair.
With a pipe in your hand,
And two curls in your hair.
"Come sit down,
Have a cup of tea,
Stay awhile,
Talk to me,
Do you 'mind' the time kids. . ."
You'd begin,
Then recall a long ago incident,
That we starred in,
With your sense of humour,
And memory so fine,
It was great fun visiting you,
Time after time!

—Ever remembered by Lois, Bill, Stephen, Stephanie and Debbie Belch and Ralph, Ruth, Andrew, David, Susan, Jeffrey and Nancy Ann Plane.

ANDREW — In loving memory of a dear husband and father William Andrew who passed away March 6, 1974.

The world may change from year to year,
And friends from day to day,
But never will the one we loved,
From memory pass away.

—Always remembered by wife Edna, Ruth and Thos., Doris and Cliff, Shirley and Don.

Opening Night Jitters Not Evident in Guild Play

In the 1600s the theatre was an important form of entertainment for English audiences. The broad, bawdy humor and extravagant costumes could be enjoyed by both rich and poor.

But now with modern times providing so many varied forms of entertainment it's interesting to note that the English style of play common more than 300 years is just as popular now as ever before.

One indication of this was the almost-full house that saw The Knight of the Burning Pestle premiered by the Belleville Theatre Guild Wednesday night at the Pinnacle Playhouse. It runs until Saturday night and from Wednesday to Saturday night next week. Curtain rises for all performances at 8 p.m.

The play was an actor's delight and it seemed that everyone in the cast enjoyed playing their parts to the hilt. Consequently, the audience in turn caught the infectious bug and enjoyed themselves as well.

The opening night ran smoothly with few missed cues or any outward sign of nervousness shown by the cast, some of them acting for the first time in a guild production.

Maurice Sykes did a fine job as Rafe, the knight errant, who goes about rescuing fair damsels in distress whether or not they want to be rescued.

But the activities of Rafe and his motley band of militia recruited to help him in his quixotic quest form only one part of the play. There's the adventures of Old Master Merrythought, his wife and their two sons Michael and Jasper of Venturewell and his daughter, Luce and of Sir Humphrey, who comes between Luce and Jasper in vying for her affections.

And there's even action going on in the sidelines, of a couple watching the play who in fact dream up Rafe, who happens to be their apprentice and make him into a commoner-hero. Playing the citizen and his wife are Peter Kitcher and Flo Yanover, who add zest and vitality to their roles and act as a liason between the play they are watching and us the audience.

Bill Culp gave a fine performance as the ingenious and adventurous Jasper while Steve Forrester got a lot of mileage and added to the audience's enjoyment out of his role of Humphrey. Fred Webster as the well-named Old Master Merrythought and Jim Alexander as Rafe's apprentice gave commendable performances.

Of course, much of the credit must go to director, Danny Walsh, who succeeded in deriving capable but restrained performances from his cast without letting them milk their roles more than they should be.

Of the other character Andy Wright here from England added the right touch of an English accent to his role as Venturewell while Terry Brown as Michael and Liz Anderson, a 15-year-old student who played the part of a messenger "boy gave fine performances in their roles.

But the acting constituted only part of the play's enjoyment by the first night audience, the costumes by Jim Westheuser and Adele Cooke and their assistants, the set and costume design by Tony Lassing and imaginative lighting by John Carter and Mark Yanover contributed much to the success of the play.

The Belleville Duplicate Bridge Club meets every Tuesday, 7:30 p.m. in the ANAF Tartan Lounge, 187 Front Street. Everyone welcome. An interesting game will be held on Friday, March 14th, 7:30 p.m. at the Four Seasons Hotel when Belleville joins the Continent-wide Charity Tournament in aid of the Canadian Kidney Foundation. The same hands will be played by several hundred clubs throughout the North American Continent in this unique format administered by the American Contract Bridge League and the Canadian Bridge Federation. Last year the proceeds from the Canadian games alone resulted in a $15,000 donation to the Canadian Mental Health Association.

Entertainment Briefs

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Moscow's Bolshoi Ballet is to take its latest work, Ivan The Terrible, to the United States on a three-month, joint tour with the theatre's opera troupe, beginning next month.

Bolshoi director Kirill Molchanov said Tuesday that more than 50 Bolshoi members would be travelling to the U.S.—the first foreign tour ever made by the two companies together.

The tour will begin in New York's Metropolitan Opera House on April 22, and move on through 10 American cities.

PARIS (Reuter) — Cinematic sex is OK the French cabinet decided Tuesday but violence and dope are out.

Culture Secretary Michel Guy said at a news conference the only sex scenes to be banned would be those "degrading to human dignity," presumably scenes of sado-masochism or those involving children.

The censor's scissors will continue to be used on scenes of excessive violence or those involving heavy drug involvement.

LONDON (AP) — Shirley Temple films have been ruled unsuitable for showing to children on Britain's independent television network because they "have no relevance to modern children," a television spokesman said Tuesday.

The 1930s are "more likely to appeal to the nostalgia of older people than to the sophisticated children of today," said a spokesman for the Independent Broadcasting Authority (IBA), which regulates commercial television.

Opening lead — Q ♠

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

The Professor let the spade lead run around to his ace. Then he led a diamond to dummy; played the three of clubs and finessed his 10 spot after East followed low. He cashed his ace of clubs and, after both opponents followed, the Professor could count 12 tricks in sure winners. He played the hand out to see if a squeeze might develop in spades and hearts. But it didn't, so the Professor settled for his small slam.

"Why did you take that club finesse?" asked the student. "Isn't it better percentage to try to break the suit when you have seven cards and miss the jack?"

"If dummy held the ten of clubs, I would have played out ace-king and queen, the professor explained. "That would give me five clubs tricks any time clubs broke or the jack dropped doubleton. There is a 35-per-cent chance of a 3-3 break, plus a 18-per-cent chance of dropping a doubleton jack. I would have had a 52-per-cent chance for my contract under those circumstances.

"With the ten of clubs in my hand, it would do me no good to drop the doubleton jack of clubs, because the four clubs in his partner's hand would stop me. On the other hand banging the high clubs would only represent a 36-per-cent chance. The play I took would produce five club tricks any time the suit broke 3-3 or 4-2 and East held the jack. That was a 42-per-cent chance and I took it."

Bowlegged Baby Needs No Braces

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will applying braces on a three-month-old baby correct bowed legs? How long will the braces have to stay on?—Mrs. G. F.

I read your letter a few times to be certain you did write "three months."

This youngster is much, much too young for any such leg manipulation. I don't think I've ever seen a baby who wasn't bowlegged, to some extent through the first 18 months of life. Perhaps if it weren't there would be more cause for concern, since that's the way it apparently is meant to be.

After the bowlegged period comes a longer one, often lasting several years, during which a compensation takes place. Sometimes there may be a slight overcompensation toward knock-knees. And this is no cause for concern either. The legs eventually straighten out as muscles develop during adolescence.

If, after adolescence, there seems to be a malformation of the legs, then some attention can be given to it, but at three months—never.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told I have a mild case of glaucoma in my left eye. After my visit to an eye doctor he told me to come back in a few months. I am using eye drops, but I don't think they are very good. My left eye is still not too well, but my right eye is fine. What should I do? Mrs. P. B.

Glaucoma is a progressive disease and it should be treated as soon as it is diagnosed. I suspect your eye drops are the kind used to constrict the pupils and thus promote adequate drainage of fluid within the eye. Glaucoma is a build-up of fluid pressure in the eye.

Early treatment, too, often includes use of medication to reduce the body's water retention.

Your glaucoma is a mild case, the chronic type as opposed to acute glaucoma, in which the onset is sudden, with severe pain. This latter case often leads to rapid deterioration towards blindness in the affected eye.

Your doctor may want to use this conservative method prior to making a follow-up examination in a few months to see whether it has arrested the disease.

You are fortunate to have had such an early diagnosis, for treatment then has a good chance of success. The fact that the glaucoma is progressing at different rates in the eyes is not unusual.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 59 years old, of average frame, 5 feet, 2 inches tall, and I weigh 115 pounds. Am I overweight?

Also, I have varicose veins which do not trouble me. But they protrude and are ugly. I enjoy cycling and I feel great while I'm pedalling. But I feel perhaps that this is putting added strain on my legs.

I feel good, but would like to care for my veins before they become more serious. Mrs. A.

For your height and frame, 115 pounds is ideal. In fact, you are just in between what would be considered the beginning of overweight for you (125 pounds) and what would be thought to be a bit underweight (105 pounds).

The exercise is fine. Keep it up. It will keep blood from puddling in the varicose veins. You might try support stockings also. If the veins are not too large, injection treatment could help. In this, the vein is emptied of blood and injected with a fluid that promotes constriction. Stripping (removal) or ligation (tying off) are last-resort treatments that you might not need if you keep your sensible weight and continue to be active.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has had good results with the low-purine diet in the treatment of gout (plus medication). Does elimination of dried beans, peas, etc., include soy beans? This would be a good source of protein since his diet does restrict meat considerably. Is there a protein tablet that can be used?—L.E.

Soy beans are out. There are protein tablets, but why take these when ample protein can be obtained from the low-purine diet?

Pub's TV Is Huge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Beer parlor patrons across Canada can watch hockey star Bobby Orr in living color but in a downtown Vancouver hotel they can see him larger than life.

The Blue Horizon recently purchased a giant television screen, eight by 10 feet, for its Sunset Inn pub. Morris Wosk, hotel president, said the $3,000 system is the third of its kind in North America, the other two being in New Jersey and Lake Tahoe, Nev.

The system consists of three color projector tubes hanging from the pub's ceiling, which relay cable signals to the screen from an adjoining room. The system can use either video cassettes or live television available by cable.

Mr. Wosk said the system offers special videotaped programs, mostly sports, in addition to selected live television at no additional charge to patrons.

Paul Milelli, hotel manager, estimated the big-screen operation will cost between $900 and $1,200 a month, depending on the cost of the sports shows, variety entertainment and movies available by cassette.

Initially, 75 per cent of the programs will be sports, but much of what will be offered will depend on the results of 3,000 questionnaires to be distributed to the parlor's patrons.

LARGEST LAKE

At 39 feet below sea level, the Eyre, 3,700 square miles in area, is Australia's largest lake and lowest sea level.

Western Rinks Get Challenge

FREDERICTON (CP) — There's a logjam atop the Canadian men's curling championship and it's no suprise to most skips here that the usually dominant Western Canada rinks are facing some eastern pressures.

"There's not one really bad shooter out there," was Harvey Mazinke's reaction Wednesday night after he missed a last-rock takeout that gave Don Twa's Whitehorse entry from the Territories an 8-7 win over Saskatchewan.

It marked the second loss in a row for the Regina club after Ontario halted Mazinke's four-game win streak Tuesday night.

"There used to be a time when rinks reached here with one or two good shooters," the Regina skip said. "Now you'll see every one of those guys out there know what they're doing and where that rock is going."

Bob Cole, the veteran Newfoundland skip experiencing a frustrating week after dropping his sixth in a row, concurred with Mazinke's reasoning.

"I've been to a lot of Briers, both as a spectator and player, and this has got to be the strongest field in recent years," said Cole. "They're all capable of making a shot when they have to."

Tom Reed's St. Albert, Alta., rink took first place in the evening round by trimming Frank Beutel of Penticton, B.C., 9-8 with a last-shot draw to the button—just four inches inside Beutel's last-rock draw.

Alberta, which has played in all seven games to date and doesn't have a bye until today's third draw, had a 5-2 record although it has played two more games than Bill Tetley's Northern Ontario rink from Thunder Bay.

Northern Ontario, at 4-1, had a slim lead over Saskatchewan, the Territories and Manitoba's Rod Hunter from Winnipeg, all at 4-2. Ontario's Alex Scott of Kingston, at 4-3, Fredericton's John Clark representing New Brunswick and Dick Boyce's Nova Scotia rink from Dartmouth were still in contention at 3-3 along with John Fortier and his Prince Edward Island foursome from Charlottetown.

Quebec's Jim Ursel from Montreal, at 2-3, was alone in the next slot with British Columbia and Newfoundland trailing at 0-6.

Leeds, Bayern Score

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

England's Leeds United and Bayern Munich of West Germany took convincing victories Wednesday in European Cup quarter - final soccer competitions.

Leeds, playing at home, blanked Anderlecht of Belgium 3-0 before 41,000 fans in their first-leg match. Joe Jordan, Gordon McQueen and Peter Lorimer scored for Leeds.

Bayern, last year's winners, moved closer to the semi-finals in that competition with a 2-0 first-leg win at home over the Ararat Yerevan team from the Soviet Union.

In another game, Ruch Chorzow of Poland nipped St. Etienne of France 3-2. On Tuesday, Barcelona of Spain took a 2-0 triumph over the Swedes of Aatwidaberg.

First-leg quarter-final matches were also held in the UEFA Cup (European Football Union) competition and Cup Winners Cup tournament.

Home teams won the three European Cup games played Wednesday, but visitors thrived in the Cup Winners Cup.

The Hungarians of Ferenc-VaVros won 3-1 over Malmoe of Sweden, Dinamo Kiev of the Soviet Union defeated Bursaspor of Turkey 1-0 and Benfica of Portugal tied PSV Eindhoven of Holland 0-0. In Spain, however, Real Madrid broke the string with a 2-0 win over Red Star of Belgrade.

In the UEFA Cup quarter-finals, Borussia Moenchengladbach went to Czechoslovakia and took a 1-0 first-leg lead over Banik Ostrava. FC Cologne, playing host to FC Amsterdam, scored a 5-1 victory.

In the other UEFA games, Juventus of Italy beat SV Hamburg of West Germany 2-0 and Velez Mostar of Yugoslavia topped FC Twente Enschede of Holland 1-0.

Detroit Tigers Looking for Improved Staff of Pitchers

RALPH HOUK

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — "New faces going places" reads the Detroit Tigers' brochure promoting season ticket sales for the 1975 American League baseball season.

The new faces are there, to be sure.

But whether the Tigers are going places will depend on what miracles they can get from a pitching staff that was a disaster in 1974 when Detroit finished last in the American League East.

That pitching staff has not changed measurably since.

"We were playing kids at the end of the season last year and it gave us a good insight on what to expect," said manager Ralph Houk at the opening of spring training camp.

"They just went in and got the runs against teams like Baltimore. It's just that we could not hold the opponents back. We averaged five or six runs a game with kids on speed and offence.

"The weak part of the club last year was the pitching. If we didn't have Johnny Hiller, it would have been more of a disaster than it was," said Houk.

Some Civil Servants Overpaid Says Chretien

OTTAWA (CP) — Some federal civil servants are overpaid, Treasury Board President Jean Chretien said Thursday in seeking approval for an extra $10 million to help bankroll government salaries.

Mr. Chretien also said that because of "rampant inflation" the government seriously underestimated the cost of wage settlements for many of the 240,000 unionized civil servants who negotiated new contracts with the government over the last year.

He refused to tell the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee which groups within the federal bureaucracy are overpaid but said, some succeeded through binding arbitration in winning "more than they deserve."

Mr. Chretien appeared at the committee to explain some of the $1.65 billion in supplementary spending estimates tabled by the government recently for the fiscal year ended March 31.

The estimates include a $10-million increase to $100 million in a treasury board contingency fund for paying unforeseen wage settlements and financing disaster assistance and other emergency spending.

He said the extra money was needed because the government underestimated the cost of wage settlements when the main 1974-75 estimates were originally presented about a year ago.

The government planned on settlements of six to seven per cent for the year but many have reached 11 to 14 per cent because of inflation, he said. Twenty bargaining units representing 89,000 employees chose the conciliation and possible strike route to settle negotiations while 60, representing 142,000 employees opted for arbitration that is binding on both sides.

Mr. Chretien said some arbitration awards resulted in pay scales that he considered too high.

Stage Airport Strikes Where Weather Bad

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) in the Atlantic provinces planned to walk out today at all major airports affected by bad weather and to set up pickets at the Halifax post office and a number of defence department buildings in Nova Scotia.

And the Canadian Wheat Board said Thursday it will halt shipments from grain elevators throughout Canada starting tonight because of a huge backlog of unloaded rail cars at West Coast ports caused by strikes by grain samplers and weighers.

As revolving strikes by PSAC members continued to disrupt services across the country Thursday, union members and various groups said it is up to the federal government to settle with the 18,600 federal blue-collar workers who began strikes last Feb. 10.

The PSAC wants average pay increase of 37 per cent over two years. The federal treasury board has offered only 26.1 per cent over the same period.

Ford Would Okay Cambodia Aid Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford will settle for less than the $222 million in emergency aid he previously said was essential for the survival of Cambodia, White House officials say.

This move toward compromise was acknowledged after Ford told a news conference Thursday night that Cambodia could fall to the Communists if Congress doesn't approve more military assistance within "10 days or two weeks."

But Ford never mentioned the $222-million figure.

The White House sources would not disclose what figure Ford might accept. Representative Paul McCloskey (Rep. Calif.) has been proposing $118 million since he returned earlier this week from a fact-finding tour of South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Ford opened the news conference with a statement outlining his argument for more Cambodian aid and said "there is no hope of success unless the Congress acts quickly to provide the necessary means for Cambodia to survive.'

Senator Hubert Humphrey (Dem. Minn.) said before the news conference he told Ford on Thursday that prospects for any aid were "quite dim."

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana told a reporter that "any future military aid will simply prolong the killing."

Representative John McFall of California, the Democratic whip, said the odds are better for some aid because of the fact-finding trip to Indochina.

Another powerful Democrat, Representative George Mahon of Texas, chairman of the House appropriations committee, said the recommendations of some of the fact-finding team have "softened some resistance to the request."

"I don't think Congress will approve the full amount," Mahon said, "but some compromise can be worked out."

The Senate foreign relations committee isn't scheduled to start putting the measure into final legislative form until next week when the House foreign affairs committee also was to consider the matter.

McFall said he doubted Congress will complete action on the money much before its Easter recess, which starts March 26. This is well after the two weeks that Ford marked as the outside limit for Cambodia to survive without new aid.

Ford said three points were at issue in the Cambodia debate:

First, the only way to stop the fighting and killing is "through a combination of humanitarian endeavors and military aid," not by stopping the aid.

If Cambodia can last to the end of June and the end of the dry season, the Communists will have lost a strategic advantage and might be willing to negotiate, Ford said.

Next is whether the problems of Indochina will be settled by conquest or negotiation. "If we abandon our allies, we will be saying to all the world that war pays," Ford said.

As a sign of U.S. eagerness to negotiate a settlement, Ford indicated he would be willing to see Cambodian President Lon Nol resign if that would help start peace talks.

The third part of Fords presentation dealt with "the reliability of the United States. If we cease to help our friends in Indochina, we will have violated their trust. . . .

"We will have been false to ourselves, to our word and to our friends."

Isrcelis Expect Revenge for Raid

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israelis enraged over the guerrilla raid on a Tel Aviv hotel waited today for their armed forces to wreak vengeance on Palestinian guerrillas in Lebanon.

But there was speculation the counterattack would be delayed until after U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger's visit in search of a new Israeli-Egyptian agreement.

"They will be punished," Premier Yitzhak Rabin said after the terrorist attack Wednesday night in which seven of the eight Arab raiders, four hostages and three Israeli soldiers were reported killed. Five soldiers and six civilians were wounded. An eighth guerrilla was captured.

The Israeli military command for obvious security reasons said nothing about its plans to retaliate. But strikes at the guerrillas' bases in southern Lebanon have followed every previous such Palestinian attack into Israel.

Canadian Pay Level Above U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says that for the first time the average hourly earnings of workers in Canada's manufacturing industries have surpassed wages made by their United States counterparts.

The newspaper says the U.S. workers made 41 cents an hour more in December, 1967, but by December, 1974, Canadian workers were getting nine cents an hour more.

The preliminary figure for Canada is $4.73 an hour, compared with the U.S. figure of $4.64, it says, adding that the averages are for gross earnings and include overtime and shift differentials.

Former SIU Official Afraid of Wired Lips

THOROLD, Ont. (CP) — A former vice-president of the Seafarers' International Union (SIU) says rigging union elections is standard practice and that he wants a public inquiry into the organization's activities.

John (Bobby) Lazarus, who resigned last week as the union's director of organization after serving as one of six vice-presidents for about four years, said Thursday there is fear after organized beatings by hired goons of some union members.

In an interview after he spoke to about 100 union members here, Mr. Lazarus, 31, said do-not-ship lists are still used, and he was ordered by the unions headquarters to destroy his lists last year after questions were raised in the Ontario legislature and Parliament.

He said rigging elections is done at the local level on ships, in hiring halls and at union headquarters.'

In January, Mr. Lazarus said, a photocopy of a story clipped from a Montreal newspaper was sent to him in Halifax with his regular union mail. The story concerned the discovery of the body of a Montreal plumber's union member who was tortured and whose mouth was wired shut—with his union card stuffed inside it—before he was killed.

Mr. Lazarus said he took the clipping as a warning and bought a shotgun for protection. "I don't want to be found in the (Welland) canal with my lips wired together."

Downtown Merchants Favor Liquor Store

By COLIN BRUCE

The Belleville Downtown Association has endorsed a proposal for a downtown Ontario Liquor Control Board retail outlet.

The association feels such an outlet would be a drawing card for the downtown area, said Doug Row, vice-president of the businessmen's group.

A petition now is being circulated to gain support for the idea said Mr. Row.

Among suggesting potential sites for such a retail outlet is the $5 million Century Place project to be located at the four-corner intersection of Bridge and Front Streets.

Mayor Complains to Bryce Mackasey About Sidney Street Mail Change

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A city hall protest has been sent Postmaster General Bryce Mackasey over suspension of home mail deliveries on a strip of north Sidney St. because of feared traffic hazards.

In the mail today is a letter to Ottawa from Mayor Robin Jeffrey terming the action "unjustified" and the cause of "much ill-feeling."

She said city authorities are worried similar problems could arise on other city streets for the same reason— lack of sidewalks.

Postal authorities Feb. 24 installed a community mailbox pickup as an alternative to home delivery to 34 households along a 500-yard stretch of Sidney, from Cascade Blvd. to Parkdale Baptist Church.

The move followed protests by local letter carriers union representatives following an accident in the area and narrow escapes by a mailman.

Deliveries would resume, said Belleville area postmaster Roy Wainwright, after sidewalks were installed.

Reconstruction of Sidney Street in the problem zone is scheduled for this spring.

Mayor Jeffery's letter follows [illegible] of city council earlier this week.

"The action taken by our local post office authorities to suspend mail delivery is unjustified," the mayor has told Mr. Mackasey. "It has caused considerable discussion is our community with much ill-feeling."

She mentioned scheduled reconstruction and widening includes sidewalks.

"The mail carrier and Mr. Wainwright were aware the city was moving as fast as possible on this matter," said the mayor's letter.

"The street has not changed, it is still the same as it was last year, or the year before. There was no problem with mail delivery then. Children walk to and from school on the shoulders of this road but a mail carrier apparently feels he cannot."

If mail is undelivered because of no sidewalk "could this same situation arise on other streets of this city that do not have sidewalks? asked the mayor.

"I know you are aware," she wrote Mr. Mackasey, "that a municipality, because of budget restraints, can only construct certain footages of sidewalks and roads each year."

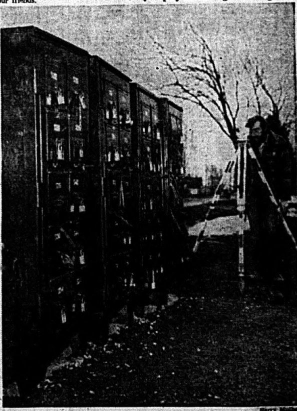
The communal pickup boxes were set up on the church parking lot on Sidney with separate compartments for each householder to padlock. An alternative is to pick up mail at the downtown post office's general delivery department.

A check Thursday showed 28 compartments padlocked.

Meantime, Mr. Wainwright said he'd had a number of calls from householders involved indicating they "are not happy" with the arrangement.

But, he said, he also has had calls agreeing with the post office action.

"I have to look at the safety factor too, said the postmaster. "And I cannot order a man to jeopardize his safety."



Harry Mulhall

Postal Pickups Protested

Most householders on a strip of north Sidney Street now pick up mail from these communal boxes installed after postal officials deemed home-delivery service hazardous without sidewalks. Thursday, city hall survey team — including Zane Plumb — was at work in immediate zone, preparing for road construction in area. Mayor Robin Jeffrey has sent protest to Ottawa over postal delivery suspension.

School Vandalism Costs Are High

VANCOUVER (CP) — School vandalism is a million-dollar problem in this area and no one has a solution.

Officials estimate destruction of school property last year cost taxpayers $600,000 for replacement of glass alone and several hundred thousand dollars more for other property. That includes damage to desks, walls, fences, washroom and even gymnasium floors.

Thousands more are spent on security measures that often have little effect.

Officials are reluctant to reveal figures but glass replacement costs ranged from $5,000 000 in Vancouver.

in New Westminster to $240,000 in Vancouver.

"Trustees get uptight when we get a lot of vandalism, Some districts use security treasurer of the Langley school board. "Then we debate whether we should tell the public, but when we do we often get more trouble."

Most school boards have been installing unbreakable glass at twice the price of ordinary glass. But it's softer expensive and often their efched in it.

Some deistricts use security guards or patrols but they are expensive and often theeir efforts are negated by the tactics of vandals.

All boards have installed intruder alarms in the larger schools but the cost is about $8,000 and they don't halt the second-most expensive form of vandalism—paint.

"Spray cans are the worst things and kids seem to like to use them on freshly-painted walls," said Miles Adam, secretary-treasurer of the Delta school board.

One authority said some vandalism is the work of deranged minds. In Burnaby schools hamsters were mutilated and human excrement was spread in stairways.

Vandalism is sometimes premeditated and cleverly carried out. Several persons broke into a Vancouver school during the Christmas holidays and plugged the drains in all washroom sinks.

They wedged open the faucets so the water would keep running. By the time the incident was discovered, about $50,000 damage had been done, including a badly buckled hardwood floor in the gymnasium.

Most school boards lump vandalism (other than glass breakage) with general maintenance, so over-all damage figures are often not available.

The Vancouver board is an exception. Don Sutherland, the board's director of construction, said vandals caused nearly $425,000 damage last year.

He said the figure is an increase of $79,000 from 1973, and $158,000 from 1972.

But nobody seems to know what causes vandalism.

Dr. Sue Stephenson, professor of child psychiatry at University of British Columbia, said people have urges to break things as a kind of catharthis, but most can control the impulses.

She said many children are drawn into acts of vandalism because of pressure from their peer group.

Several school districts have formed committees to study vandalism. In Campbell River, on the east coast of Vancouver Island, school trustees offer a $100 reward for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of vandals.

Grad Says Challenge Lies In Reaching Elderly People

If health care aides have empathy, they can at least relate to the problems of nursing home residents, says an employee of Montgomery Lodge.

Lillian Hill, valedictorian for the graduating health care aide class at Loyalist College, told fellow graduates this week "the more difficult the person is to reach, the more challenging it is for us to try and bring that person out to a maximum of ambulation and involvement".

"If we can have empathy — the ability to put ourselves into the other persons shoes — in our case the residents — we can at least relate to their problems" she commented.

Mrs. Hill, of 216 Dufferin Ave., in Belleville, remarked, "If at the end of any given day, we have reached one lonely, tired, geriatric resident and we have seen even a glimmer of response, we can feel our day was not in vain."

She explained with the advances in medical science "people are indeed living longer livvs."

"We are finding, instead of the elderly being the forgotten generation, they are and will continue to be the in generation," noted Mrs. Hill.

She pointed out "We must remember these people were once busy, interested, productive human beings, even as you or I are now."

She said she thought it is a thought-provoking idea if the aides "could place ourselves for two weeks into a situation where strangers were surrounding us in an unfamiliar environment . . especially if we were physically handicapped."

Noting the theme of her course was A Career to Ttake Pride In, Mrs. Hill commented, "when you are dealing with people, the element of surprise is there because people can be very unpredictable so there is our challenge that makes our work interesting and rewarding."

Saturday Review Flourishes Again

NEW YORK (AP) — In what even competitors say is one of the most spectacular publishing feats in years, Norman Cousins has taken a bankrupt magazine and, in little over a year, turned it into a flourishing enterprise.

The magazine is Saturday Review, which had survived 50 years—the last 25 with Cousins as editor—when it was sold by Norton Simon Inc. July 12, 1971.

The new owners went bankrupt in a little under two years with $12 million in debts and a cash loss of $17 million to the investors.

Cousins bought back the name and subscription list and combined it with World magazine, which he had founded and edited after leaving Saturday Review shortly after the new owners took over.

"I've always had a love affair with the readers," he said. "A magazine is essentially a relationship between a few editors and their readers." The new success he calls "akin to a regenerating experience."

New York Times went further and headlined its editorial on the feat "Resurrection." "The turnaround," said The Times, "is doubly gratifying because it was achieved through a return to the exacting standards that had slipped badly in two years of captivity by the money-changers."

With the January issue, the word "World" was dropped from the name Saturday Review-World, and the magazine became simply Saturday Review again.

It wasn't easy, said publisher Spencer Grin.

"I don't know why Norman insisted on me as publisher," said Grin, who won his doctorate in education after retiring in early middle age from a lucrative career in international law.

"Everyone in the business wanted the job and I haven't done anything like this since my school newspaper. Naming me publisher was the first unorthodox thing Norman did. That bankruptcy for millions traumatized the whole thing and we started from scratch.

"The first thing was subscriptions. For years, magazines have been depending on advertising to absorb the cost of production. The subscriptions were practically given away with one reduction or another.

"We decided this was no way to continue in the age of TV which is the cheapest eyeball purhase you can get.

"So it was a question of reorienting the public. He had to teach that a magazine subsciption was something of value. We actually believe we can run a magazine that will be paid for by readers who think it worth the money.'

Carleton Reduces Services

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ontario government has tightened up on university spending in an attempt to hold down the cost of higher education in the province.

How drastically the restrictions will affect some universities in 1975-76 can be seen in the measures Carleton University is taking to meet the money squeeze. A reduction in administrative services is one of them.

A. B. Larose, vice-president for administration, writing in Carleton's administrative newsletter, outlined some areas in which reductions will be made.

Carleton has about 8,500 full-time students and about 6,500 part-timers.

Mr. Larose said he anticipates a reduction in staff of approximately 20 with no new support staff being hired.

The budget cut will be felt in terms of reduced custodial services, snow removal and floor and drapery cleaning.

Floor-cleaning, except in public areas, will be carried out every other night instead of every night. Window and drapery cleaning will be eliminated.

The university's telephone switchboard will shut down at 4:30 p.m. daily, three hours earlier than at present.

Budgets for part-time salaries, equipment, supply and travel have been drastically reduced.

Union Head Challenges Erie Manager's Stand

TRENTON — Workers are "quite in order" holding up Erie Technological Products of Canada Ltd. as an example embodying the inadequacies in procedures of the provincial labor relations act, says local labor leader Gordon Young.

The claim was made today in a release by Mr. Young, president of Local 509, United Electrical, (UE) Radio and Machine Workers of America. The union represents workers at the Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. plant here.

It was in answer to statements made by Erie manager J.L. Johnston in disclaiming allegations made by the union in a brief to the provincial resources minister's meetings in Belleville in mid-February.

The manager recently said that since UE did not represent Erie's non-unionized workers, it had no right to involve them, or the company, in a brief whose subject was Ontario's labor laws.

Today's release by Mr. Young claims that right as Local 509 president and as a vice-president of the Quinte District Labor Council, "the voice and the arm of all workers in the Quinte area."

Mr. Young also challenged Erie's claim that the company did not intimidate workers to muzzle a move to unionize.

The manager knows "full well," says the release, "that there are dozens of subtle ways of intimidation with out breaking the letter of the law, but certainly voilating its spirit."

The company has denied having any influence in a secret vote by its workers for unionization.

Three votes have been held at Trenton's largest plant and all have failed.

February's UE brief also claimed Erie paid wages "just above the minumum wage," or $1 or more below what other unionized plant workers in Trenton receive. The charge was countered by Mr. Johnston, who said Erie employees get 30 to 40 per cent above the provincal minimum.

Such rates, says today's release, are "hardly something to boast about." At an average of $3 an hour, they are below the $3.95 paid the lowest paid female worker in a related Trenton plant in the electrical industry.

Province Ups Road Subsidies in County

Initial road subsidies allocated Hastings County provincial government are up $400,000 from 1974.

The total subsidy amount for 1975 will not be known until after the province's fiscal year ends March 31.

After that supplementary allocations will be known which will increase the actual total.

The initial 1975 subsidies total $1,375,500, Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, confirms. This compares with an initial $975,300 last year.

But this increased to an actual total of $1,592,000 with later supplements.

Four townships at the north end of the county have received among the largest lump-sum increases over 1974 in the initial subsidies.

Bangor - Wicklow - McClure townships are allotted $150,000 compared to $83,000; Monteagle Township gets $100,000 — up from $57,000.

But, measured in percentages, the subsidies doubled for Mayo and Marmora — Lake townships.

Comparatively, Tweed Village also receives a big increase — $21,700, up from $9,500 in 1974.

Initial allocations to other municipalities, with 1974 comparisons in brackets:

Villages — Bancroft, $27,000 ($25,000); Madoc, $15,500 ($11,600); Marmora, $16,000 ($10,600); Stirling $13,600 ($10,100). Townships — Carlow, $56,000 ($50,000); Dungannon, $50,000 ($39,000); Elzivir-Grimsthorpe $31,700 ($19,800); Faraday, $63,000 ($46,000) Herschel $65,000 ($60,000); Hungerford, $93,500 ($70,000); Huntingdon, $69,000 ($47,300); - Limerick, $24,000 ($21,000) Madoc $68,400 ($45,500); Marmora-Lake, $79,500 ($41,900) Mayo $54,000 ($27,000); Rawdon, $97,500 ($75,000); Thurlow, $96,100 ($86,000); Tudor-Cashel, $50,000 ($35,000); Tyendinaga, $79,000 ($68,000); Wollaston, $55,000 ($37,000).

Bedding For Beef Costly

Bedding for beef production is becoming less available — and more expensive — because development of new crop lines means cash crops such as corn are being grown over much of southern Ontario. One feasible solution may be slatted floors, according to H E Bellman, an agricultural engineer in the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food office at Walkerton.

At first glance, it's an expensive choice. A modified environment barn with slatted floor can cost $200 to $225 per animal capacity, resulting in an annual fixed cost of $25 to $30. However, farmers should compare this with the annual fixed and operating costs of a barn using bedding. Although the fixed costs are often lower, the added cost of bedding, at $20 to $40 for each animal, drastically alters the picture. In the long run, slatted floor systems are often cheaper, according to Mr Bellman.

Another plus for the system is the environmental concern to prevent pollution. With slatted floors, manure remains completely enclosed in a pit until spread in the field. Higher fertilizer prices, too, are making farmers take a second look at the sytem The pit offers a good oopportunity for them to retain the nutrients for use by plant crops.

Water Rate Increase Proposed

PICTON — Water rates in Picton may rise 35 per cent soon to provide the additional revenue to cover costs of improvements to the water system.

The Public Utilities Commission has asked town council to raise $225,000 by debenture. The commission will repay the money from general water rates.

Manager of the PUC, H. C. Blakely, stated in a recent letter to council that present rates have been in effect since 1967.

He added, "We feel that an increase in this area is reasonable and will still keep us in line with adjacent municipalities.

The flat rate for full water service in Picton now is $50 a year and $30 for a single tap.

The cost of metered water is 40 cents per 100 cubic feet in town and 80 cents per 100 cubic feet in the country.

The question of a rate increase this week was referred to council's finance committee.

First Aid Needed

Scoutmaster Don Marchand, Stirling, and scouts Ralph Tyrer and Jimmy Hunter practice first aid. Scouter Marchand says a group committee is needed since regulations tie his hands in the way leaders and the troop can make money. The group committee also supervises leaders and their activities, the scouter points out. The Stirling group committee chairman and the treasurer both want to retire and cannot find replacements.

Lack of Interested Adults May Doom Stirling Scouts

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — At Stirling council this week, deputy-reeve Fred Brandt said the boy scout movement in Stirling is going to collapse since the group committee requires officers and no one has volunteered.

"Nobody is interested. I am making a plea for somebody to help out," deputy-reeve Brandt said.

In an interview with Jim Stewart, president of the Moira Valley District, Boy Scouts of Canada, he said Stirling's problem has shown up all over Canada. He outlined the situation in the Moira district.

"In Marmora, the Lions Club has taken on the sponsorship of the scouts, and they are doing a tremendous job. All towns need some kind of adult participation. At Cloyne, the scout movement has got the same problem as Stirling," he said.

"In Madoc things are slacking off. The Kiwanis Club is the sponsor there. In Tweed the Salvation Army almost have their own organization. The legion finally pulled out as a sponsor for Plainfield and Roslin, and the group committee is the sponsoring body there, which is a rare thing," Mr. Stewart said.

"In Foxboro there are no scouts. It is a real disaster."

Mr. Stewart said parents are willing to dirve youngsters around and be regular members of group associations, but are afraid to get into office, because they think they will not be able to get out once they show interest.

"It is thinking like this that causes our problems," Mr. Stewart said. He added if there is a chairman, vice chairman, treasurer and secretary . . . "the four positions manned, you have a good group committee".

Stirling's problem is the chairman and treasurer want to be free of their responsibilities, and no one wants to take over in their place.

Roy Tucker has been chairman for four years, and since his son is working out, he must look after 35 cows and feed 75 hogs.

Bernard Farrell has been treasurer for 15 years, and his hours at Belleville General Hospital interfere with his scout work, and he wants a replacement.

Stirling Branch 228, Royal Canadian Legion holds the charter for the local boy scout organization.

Mr. Farrell says he has been asking for relief for five years. Mr. Tucker says he told the legion two years ago to find somebody else.

Mr. Stewart said that District Commissioner Bruce Woodbeck found the original charter held by the legion for the Stirling scouts and got a new one to present to the service organization.

"There were a lot of new members and they didn't even realize they were the sponsoring body," Mr. Stewart said. "I thought things were going to be different. Two members came out for awhile."

District Commissioner Bruce Woodbeck said in an interview "The Legion has been very good. They have held the sponsorship for 44 years. There has just been a little change in blood."

Telephoned in Toronto, Wally Harpur, director of administration, Ontario Headquarters, Boy Scouts of Canada, said that there has to be recruitment on a personal basis. "One man selling another."

Mr. Harpur explained that the sponsoring body had a certain responsibility to recruit interested parents to serve on the group committee. He said if the Legion could not provide a couple of members, they should at least have one member to report back to the Legion regarding what is happening with scouting.

Driver Escapes Injury

A single-car accident on Highway 2, east of CFB Trenton, Thursday morning resulted in $1,800 damage to the vehicle involved but the driver was uninjured.

Gwendolyn Crowle, of Prospect Hill, Trenton, was driving her vehicle about 11:35 a.m. Thursday when the accident occurred.

Trenton May Offer Gardening Plots

TRENTON — Apartment dwellers who want to apply their now idle green thumbs to the good earth may some day soon have the chance in Trenton.

The idea to convert 2.7 acres of land in northeast Trenton into garden plots has budded in the minds of the town parks board.

But, says parks director Deno Gettas, the buds have yet to bear fruit. The plan was considered during a "brain-storming" session recently and no action has been taken to bring it to life.

Currently, said Mr. Gettas, Thursday, the parks board does not even have control of the 2.7-acre site in the Burttdale Heights subdivision off Reid St.

He said the site — roughly 100 by 750 feet — is too small to be effectively used as parkland and is "unusable for anything else" but a garden project.

The land was turned over to the town some two years ago as the required five per cent parkland dedication in the Ontario Housing Corporation subdivision.

If the parks board follows through with its idea, apartment dwellers and others without ready access to land may have the opportunity to lease from the town small lots on which to grow a vegetable garden.

Neither rental fees nor plot size have yet been set, but Mr. Gettas suggested a lot, 25 by 25 feet, might be ideal.

It seems unlikely that the elongated strip will become a testing ground for the horticultural skills of Trenton residents this year. Not only does the land still have to be turned over to the parks board, but water pipes must be laid and the ground itself partially prepared.

Once under way, it would be a pilot project for Trenton, but not a new one for various other municipalities in Ontario.

This spring, Bellevillians will be breaking ground on 28 lots — 20 by 50 feet — made available by Albert College, but run by the city. The garden plots are now being leased for $15 on a first-come, first-served basis.

The gardens-for-landless-urbanites concept has grown rapidly in the past couple of years, and, says parks director Gettas, is a good idea.

"It's some type of saving for people and it teaches children something about growing and nature," he said. Plus, it gives people who are locked in six-plexes, eight-plexes and bigger apartment buildings some physical activity and an outlet.

Pressure on Space

Industrial Commissioner Fred Bemis has referred to the pressure on housing and industrial space between here and Trenton. It is tightening up in the whole area and it is a symptom of the catalyst effect that ultimately, and most probably inevitably, will see this entire area of Belleville and Trenton and surrounding townships as one large community.

Housing in Belleville is still hard to come by. For young people starting out, available units tend to be new and costly; or old, too large and still costly, with little in the medium price range. The government grant of $500 to new home owners is little more than a drop in the ocean. And all the time inflation is wreaking persistent havoc with the economy.

The provision of adequate housing remains one of the principal responsibilities of government and the construction industry. As Belleville and surrounding communities grow there will be both further pressure and commensurate incentive to this end. There can be no standing still, and it will mean also new services — for additional housing and industry, as well as in the realm of policing, social and cultural needs and the like.

It is a time of growth, in spite of inflationary pressures, and a time to give priority to what might be termed "people needs." If this is to remain the attractive community it is, we must keep pace with such growth.

Many a Hurdle

As if flu is not enough these days it is no consolation to read (in The National Enquirer) of milk being a factor in heart trouble.

However, we are not advocating anyone giving it up, except on doctor's advice. As with various foods, it is a case of one man's meat being another man's poison.

For those who have no weight or cholesterol problems, milk is a wonderful pick-me-up and let's not forget it.

There is another report out, which says there is now reasonable evidence that drinking of soft water is an additional factor in causing heart attacks.

This is from the Journal of the American Medical Association and it is quoted in a publication called The Universal Inquirer.

The journal quotes a British medical scientist, Dr. Andrew G. Shaper, as saying statistics comparing death rates in large geographical regions show that the rates from heart attacks and strokes are higher in soft water areas than in regions drinking hard water.

Dr. Shaper is quoted as saying further that it would be premature to suggest that all soft waters should be hardened, but he advises it might be reasonable to urge caution on those with hard-water supplies who wish to soften their water. Those who do, he said, should perhaps leave one tap still producing hard water for drinking.

When all is said and done there is no one factor in either heart trouble or cancer which again, as witness a report of recent days, is reported to be increasing. Smoking, industrial pollution, the air we breathe, lack of exercise, not to mention chemical additives in food would all appear to have a bearing on the medical problems of the day. And some of us are luckier than others, living to a ripe old age.

Slapstick

The seagoing part, at least, of the saga of Captain Brian Erb and the good (bad?) ship Answer, is ended. Hitherto, the on-again off-again pursuit by the Mounties had begun to look more and more like a Keystone Cop slapstick commedy. In fact it would make a good story for some humorist, with a scenario of St. Lawrence ice floes, helicopters, and pursuing Mounties getting redder in the face by the hour.

Choice of Leader and Timing Issue

Party Concern That PC Convention Will Be 'Fixed'

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — As former veteran Conservative cabinet minister, and ever the Diefenbaker loyalist, Gordon Churchill says, nobody in the party's parliamentary caucus has any idea when the leadership convention is to be called.

Robert Stanfield, immediately after loss of last summer's election, said he would retire within a year.

Conventions take months to organize.

If the convention's to be in September, Mr. Stanfield will have to make his move without further delay.

He will have to move almost as quickly if the date's to be November.

There will be a little more time for him if the leadership race is delayed for another year, and timed for next February or March.

Rumors are floating of tentative hotel bookings made for the 2,500 or so delegates who'll be voting on the leadership, with the reservations blocked out in both Ottawa and Winnipeg for November and February.

And that is just what is bothering Gordon Churchill, for 17 years a Conservative MP, a member of three successive Diefenbaker cabinets, and still a working — and worrying — Tory of influnce, if not actual power, in the parliamentary caucus and the party's powerful western wing.

He is concerned — and so are all but a very special few MPs in the caucus — that, as almost always happens, the party organization of headquarters and backroom operators will manipulate if not actually fix the convention, and for all practical purposes select and elect the new leader.

Dief was the only leader to break the party custom of control from the organizational top, and win with popular support from the grassroots.

But the party organization "got" him in the end.

Now Gordon Churchill fears the same backroom manipulation and control, and is urging the working Conservative politicians — the ones who run for and win election in Parliament — to take charge while they still have the clout as representatives of the taxpayers, and just as important, the time to act.

And Gordon Churchill has something.

Because it was the headquarters organization and the backroom party power brokers who backed and beat the Conservative parliamentary caucus at the last annual meeting in the selection and election of a president.

The bosses wanted Michael Meighen

The MPs didn't — they had their own man.

Michael Meighen, of course, took it.

And now, he has been offering opinions — with the weight of his presidential office behind them — on what sort of man the new leader should be.

Not so oddly, his ideas are being given some support by Mr. Stanfield who is coming down hard on the party line as he draws it, that the Conservatives will never come to power without heavy representation from Quebec.

They did once — in 1957 — when Dief, breaking 22 successive years of Liberal rule, won on Gordon Churchill's campaign strategy that there could be victory without Quebec if support in the rest of Canada is substantial enough.

Out in Edmonton not long ago, conferring with Alberta Conservatives, Michael Meighen offered his presidential opinion that a young, bilingual candidate would offer the best bet of leading the Tories back to power, through support in Quebec.

He was quoted as saying, too, that "while it might make it easier for the candidate if he sits in the Commons or has some parliamentary experience, I don't believe it's necessary."

Read the two statments together and the hint drops like a brick on the floor.

For Michael Meighen just happens to be a young (35) fluently bilingual lawyer from Montreal with no "unnecessary," as he terms it, parliamentary experience.

Dief, speaking to Saskatchewan Conservatives, has called for convention preparations "early this year" for a leadership election in July.

He has said the leader must come from the parliamentary caucus, for the only time the party came to power in the last 50 years was when it was led by one of its elected MPs.

Every time, he noted, the leader came from outside Parliament, heavy election losses resulted.

He wants the convention in Winnipeg — removed from the backroom influence of Toronto and Montreal — and out in the broad sweep from the Ontario border to Vancouver Island where Conservative power is based.

So it is Michael Meighen and the party's Toronto establishment with its loser's record against Dief and the parliamentary wing with its winning image.

Time for a choice shortens swiftly.

Career of a Man of Power

Highways Scandal Ditched Minister

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO. This was politics: George Doucett was largely responsible for putting Leslie Frost in office as party leader and premier in 1949.

Doucett at that time was a man of great power politically in the province.

He had held the dual portfolio of Minister of Highway and Minister of Public Works since 1943 and had been constantly on the road.

He had visited every riding in the province at least once a year. And before entering the provincial field he had been prominent in municipal politics at the provincial level having been a leader in various municipal associations and the Good Roads Association.

It was generally agreed that he could easily take the leadership himself if he wanted it. But he knew he would be in over his head. (For one thing he was a poor speaker.) So he threw his tremendous support to Frost.

In gratitude Frost named him deputy premier, the first time there had ever been such an office.

Shortly after the convention I was talking to A.A. MacLeod the MPP member and he said "Don you watch for the way Frost gets rid of Doucett. He won't do it today or tomorrow bu he will do it. You simply can't have two men at the top.

MacLeod was one of the wisest politicians we have ever had in Ontario so naturally I did watch.

For quite some time nothing happened. Then early in the fifties, after Frost had gone through an election and consolidated himself, there came the highways "scandal".

This broke in a small way, with the discovery by the auditor of some relatively petty skulduggery in an asphalt plant in northern Ontario.

But the Toronto Star found out about the story and grabbed it and ran with it.

Soon it had built it up into a major affair and the public was getting the impression that Ontario officials and its highway contractors were swindling the public purse of millions.

Actually there was no real "scandal", or at least nothing of the proportions that were indicated.

What had happened was that in the great need for roads after the war, and we were still in effect in the post-war period, there wasn't enough time for proper pre-engineering before tenders were called. So contractors were given more leverage on jobs than they normally would have been.

It was a practice that was being followed right across America.

I knew this and waited for Frost to make a major speech explaining it and killing the "scandal".

But he didn't make the speech. Month after month went by and he didn't make this key point.

Finally about a year after the whole thing broke he was due to make a speech in Fort William.

We were in Cornwall the day before at the Seaway. He was flying and I was driving but I made it to the Lakehead in time for his speech.

And that night he did explain the whole background.

But by then, of course, it was too late. The story had been running prominently for 12 months. And Doucett's goose was cooked in the eyes of the public.

A few months later, over the Christmas holiday Frost called him down to the Royal York one evening and told him he would have to resign.

And that was that.

Frost had got rid of his man, and incidentally made marks with the public for his great political integrity. (Which was real enough, but he was not unaware of the political implications.)

And there never has been another deputy premier.

Busiest night spot in Belleville is the city's collegiate where four evening a week are optimistically given over by people who want to learn skills and crafts as well as academic material. Instructors are regular day-school teachers and people from the community who are able to pass along knowledge of the matters in which they are proficent. If 12 or more students apply for instruction in a subject — every effort is made to add that course to the curriculum.

At yesterday's Kiwanis luncheon the topic was "family allowances" as proposed by the Dominion government — to come into effect in July. The speaker was Dr. Stapleford, intermin minister, at Bridge Street United Church who spoke in favor of the plan as a measure to bolster the country's falling birthrate.

Peas, corn and green bean growers in the Hasting County district will meet on Saturday to hear the aims and objects of the marketing scheme as set forth by the provincial organization of the Community Producers' Association. At the close of the meeting a vote will be taken to ascertain their approval or objection to the proposed scheme being recommended to the Farm Products Control Board for approval.

The metre is much like that of Longfellow's Hiawatha and it is said that some of the heroes became prototypes of those of Longfellow.

Combines Investigation Changes Militate Against Small Businesses

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer
Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The changes proposed in the federal Combines Investigation Act could wipe out some of the familiar ways of doing business in Canada.

That's why hundreds of small businessmen across the country are protesting, through their national associations.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet has said that Parliament will pass the amendments, Bill C-2, by the end of this month.

The president of the Canadian Real Estate Asociation, Georges H. Couillard of Quebec City, said in Ottawa March 4:

"This act would outlaw such things as the code of ethics and standards of business practice, which our industry designed to protect the public."

The Investment Dealers Association of Canada has pointed out another paradox:

While the federal government purports to encourage savings and investment, Bill C-2 would reduce the availability of research reports and information on public companies and economic developments, "all of which are essential to the effective operation of the capital markets."

The investment dealers fear that any inaccuracy in such a report—and even financial analysts are human—could expose them to potential liability for years after the publication of a research report.

They have asked the government to make several changes in the proposed wording of the amendments, to render them more workable.

The real estate people have suggested that their activities be made exempt from the proposed legislation.

They point out that under the sweeping terms of Bill C-2, the industry's educational standards could be interpreted as restraint of trade, and the familiar multiple listing service as a combination in restraint of trade—both offences under the proposed law.

The net result of the legal changes could be the abolition of every real estate board in Canada, the CREA contends.

(At the moment, there is no legislation authorizing the boards to operate as self-governing bodies, but the industry is seeking such legislation from the provinces. If they were made self-regulating by the provinces, the boards would be exempt from federal anti-combines law).

Is industry over-reacting to the government's anti-combines policy?

That's a possibility—industry often does over-state its case in such circumstances.

Another possibility, however, is that the politicians and their armies of bureaucrats are themselves over-reacting to what they consider to be the abuses of industry.

The machinery of government, right from the top on down through the cabinet and the ranks of influential civil servants, seems to be permeated by an inordinate suspicion of and apарpathy toward the business community.

Certainly the business community is not without fault, and some sections of it need to be watched closely.

The anti-combines cops have shown a penchant for seeking cut technical offences, however, and have thus alienated a good many well-meaning people in business.

Mr. Ouellet would do well to consider his amendments in terms of their benefit (or otherwise) to the ultimate consumer, rather than in terms of punishing entrepreneurs or gratifying bureaucrats.

Manitoba's Costly Auto Insurance

Winnipeg Free Press

Manitobans will soon discover — once they cut through Autopac doubletalk, attempts to hide increases by scattering them on drivers' licences and gasoline taxes, and the continued secrecy about last year's deficit — that they have been handed the largest automobile insurance rate increase in the province's history.

It will do Autopac little good to distribute charts showing that Manitoba motorists pay less than motorists elsewhere. They always did, even before the Manitoba government began what appears to be a most disastrous foray into the automobile insurance business. Manitobans will look at comparative costs in the knowledge that, while motorists elsewhere may get a larger premium bill, that bill represents the total cost of insurance, with no continuing gas tax, no hidden extras in drivers' licence and no deficit which, by all reports, is growing at a rate of close to $10 million a year.

Motorists will wonder why Autopac is reluctant to reveal its true costs. Do government officials really believe that the average Manitoban doesn't realize what his automobile insurance is costing him? Do they believe that simply by remaining silent they will persuade Manitobans to forget about a deficit which has already surpassed $20 million?

There is a simple way to cut through the charts, the statements and the myth that government insurance is cheap insurance. Look at the total amount Manitobans have paid for insurance premiums in the past five years. The year before the provincial government took over the automobile insurance business in Manitoba, motorists paid less than $36 million in automobile insurance premiums. The losses, if any, were not the responsibility of the taxpaying public. Last year, according to the minster responsble for Autopac, Bill Uruski, the public corporation took in more than $50 million in premiums, an increase of more than $14 million. Using this increase by itself, there is no possible mathematics which can justify the government's claim that Autopac premiums have risen only four per cent a year.

But the $14 million does not represent the total cost of Autopac. To this must be added an estimated $6 million in start-up costs, costs which so far have been conveniently forgotten in the government corporation's bookkeeping procedures. Then there must be added last years loss of $9.3 million, and this year's loss, whatever it might be. Mr. Uruski has alrady stated that the loss will be at least that experienced the previous year.

The true costs of automobile insurance in Manitoba, since the government takeover, have risen at least $39 million. If private costs had risen 50 per cent, as Autopac claims they have done elsewhere, Manitoba motorists would be looking at a yearly bill of 51 million, substantially less than the $61 million Mr. Uruski claims he will collect in 1975. The government will make much of the figures which will appear on premium notices to be mailed later this month. But thinking Manitoba motorists will not be fooled by these notices. They will represent only part of the insurance bill.

How Many 'Borderline' Illiterates?

Oshawa Times

Hard on the heels of an announcement by Education Minister Thomas Welles that more emphasis would be placed on the Three Rs in our school system comes yet another survey indicating that our secondary school graduates are borderline illiterates. We draw attention to this latest example of what is being turned out of our schools only because some editors saw Mr. Wells' move as a return to the dark ages.

Item: Carleton University in Ottawa gave 150 Grade 1 students a test in basic grammar. They averaged 45 percent. They should have scored in the 75 to 80 percent area.

Item: Montreal's Concordia University's literacy committee found that 10 percent of its students have extreme problems in writing simple sentences. They even found a number of students whose ability to write prose was so poor that "it is hardly possible to understand what they are trying to say."

Item: Professor D.J. Dooley, of St. Michael's College at University of Toronto found English standards deteriorating to such a degree that he has written a guide to basic composition for first-year students.

Item: Most Ontario universities do not require a Grade 1 English course for admission. The reason? "There's no guarantee that what appears as a Grade 1 English course has anything to do with composition," says one admissions officer at University of Toronto. "It may have been a course in films and television."

All the time we heard our teenagers using the word "like" in every sentence and resorting to the word "cool" in every description, we thought they were talking a "swinging" language we were not "hip" to (or is it hep?) What we are hearing is the mutterings of a generation of illiterates who have been avoiding the hard core of education lest such work would "stifle creativity."

Let's lose no more time experimenting with basket weaving as an option. Let's get back to the Three Rs.

Stewart Worries About Help

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Agriculture Minister William Stewart says he is worried that the federal government's manpower immigration program may leave Ontario farmers without sufficient field laborers this year.

In an interview Thursday, Mr. Stewart said Ottawa is telling some commodity groups that off-shore work permits will not be granted this year.

Unless Canadians show they are ready and willing to do field work, Canada cannot abandon the program of bringing in laborers from outside the country, Mr. Stewart said.

Earlier in the week, Bill Andres, Liberal member of Parliament for Lincoln in the Niagara Peninsula area, said Caribbean and Mexican seasonal workers will be admitted as usual this year to assist farmers and processors.

The program will not be curtailed because of the current rate of domestic unemployment, Mr. Andres said.

Seasonal recruitment of Caribbean workers to overcome shortages of domestic farm labor has been in operation since 1966 in co-operation with the governments of Barbados, Jamaica, Trinidad and Tobago. A similar program was set up with Mexico last year.

Ferry Capsizes

DACCA (Reuter) — At least 50 people were drowned or killed by sharks when a ferry capsized near Sandwip Island, off the coast of Bangladesh, officials said Thursday. The ferry was carrying 190 passengers on Monday when it overturned after striking rocks, the officials said.

Strike Threatened

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — The 22 support-staff employees of the Muskoka-Parry Sound health unit voted Wednesday to strike failing satisfactory settlement of their contract dispute. The group is seeking a one-year contract which would require the health unit to pay employee OHIP, life insurance and Blue Cross extended health care premiums. No strike date has been set.

Replace Soil

TORONTO (CP) — A public park situated near a lead-smelting plant will be dug up and top-soil contaminated by lead will be replaced.

The city's parks committee directed its officials Thursday to have the topsoil three inches deep in the two-acre park removed and replaced with 800 tons of uncontaminated earth.

Want to Wed

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand will be getting a rather unusual letter soon.

Robin Shaw, 19, and Darlene Thomas, 20, prisoners at the Prince George jail for men and women, said Thursday they will write Mr. Allmand in Ottawa seeking permission to be married, after being denied permission by the provincial attorney-general's department.

Both say they don't want to wait until their release from jail to take the vows.

Ear Pierced

TORONTO (CP) — Wayne Gordon Lanning, 22, of Smiths Falls, Ont., was recovering in hospital here Thursday from a fall in which a car antenna pierced his neck and went out through an ear.

The accident occurred at nearby Ajax when Mr. Lanning fell from a second-floor hotel balcony.

Police said the man climbed onto the hood of his car, parked at the hotel, while attempting to crawl onto the balcony. He lost his balance and fell backwards.

Medicine Arrives

TORONTO (CP) — Medicine needed for a six-month-old Toronto infant with a rare kidney disease arrived at the Hospital for Sick Children Thursday, 13 days after it had been sent.

The special vitamin B-1 derivative, available only from Yale University in New Haven, Conn., arrived in the hospital's regular mail delivery.

Fraud Charged

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — Seven men charged with conspiracy to commit fraud in the sale of $35,330 worth of anti-freeze were remanded in provincial court Thursday to March 13 for a preliminary hearing.

The men were charged after Guelph police received a complaint last August from the city of Guelph about a purchase by the city of $7,875 worth of anti-freeze from Jaycrest Chemicals, Cambridge, Ont.

The city and other customers claimed they understood they were buying glycol-based anti-freeze and instead were sold alcohol-based anti-freeze that has a lower boiling point.

Beavers Imported

TORONTO (CP) — Five beavers have been imported from Utah to star in a KEG Productions film on the life of Grey Owl, a British-born trapper and conservationist who masqueraded for years as a Canadian Indian.

Bill Carrick, a Canadian wildlife photographer commissioned to shoot the film's beaver scenes, said he was unable to find live beavers in Canada despite a growing beaver population in southern Ontario.

Accord Reached

THUNDER BAY (CP) — A tentative agreement has been reached between the Lakehead Terminal Elevator Association and 1,700 grain handlers on a two-year contract.

Frank Mazur, chairman of Local 650 of the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Workers, said Thursday the proposed settlement will be presented to the membership Sunday.

He said he is "very optimistic" the settlement will be accepted.

Metro Sets Record

TORONTO (CP) — About 18.5 million persons visited Metropolitan Toronto last year and spent $350 million—both records — Metro's Convention and Tourist Bureau reported Wednesday. The bureau said that 19 per cent of the visitors were from the United States and 21 per cent from Canada other than Ontario. Number of visitors was up 13 per cent over 1973.

Feed Bill Passed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate approved Thursday a bill to increase restrictions on feeds manufacturers. It would provide fines and jail sentences for those who produce sub-standard products.

The chief executive officer of a feed company could be fined up to $500 and sentenced to a maximum six-month jail sentence if the bill, which now goes to the Commons, becomes law.

Whelan Attacks

'Rip-off' Charged In Fertilizers

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan accused fertilizer manufacturers Thursday of charging "rip-off prices and warned that farmers will not stand for it.

Mr. Whelan invited himself to the annual convention of the Canadian Fertilizer Institute and blasted about 100 fertilizer manufacturers and blenders for more than doubling their prices in the last two years.

In reply the manufacturers said the allegation was unfair and that their prices remain the lowest in the world.

The minister asked for time to talk to the delegates and told them in a hastily-prepared speech that price gouging "is not going to be tolerated within Canada."

He said government studies revealed a doubling of the price since 1973 and that manufacturers could produce fertilizers, important elements in generating higher yields in crop production, for about $142 a ton and still receive a 20 per-cent return on investment.

Despite this, the current price is $200 a ton with pressure from the manufacturers for further increases, he said.

Institute president Russell Neal of Toronto said the institute wanted time to analyze Mr. Whelan's figures before issuing a response. The institute normally avoids discussing prices for fear of being accused of price fixing, he said.

The manufacturers were "very cool" to Mr. Whelan's action in attacking them at a public conference, Mr. Neal said. Normally such arguments take place in closed meetings.

Mr. Whelan said eastern farmers now pay $70 per ton more for ammonium nitrate and ammonium phosphate than western farmers while three years ago they paid $5 to $10 a ton less.

He said there was "no way" that transportation costs could eat up the difference and that the cost of natural gas, a big factor in fertilizer production, could account for only $15 of the difference.

Her Lottery Tickets Like Money in Bank

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Sima Gorelenko wants to win about $5,000 in the next Olympic lottery, and she just may.

After all, she has won money in every Olympic lottery draw so far—eight winners out of 18 tickets. Seven of the tickets were worth $100 each and one $5,000.

Her luck is so incredible that fellow workers at the Kaufman Footwear Inc. plant here hoped some would rub off on them. They asked her to join them in purchasing five tickets on the draw last month which she did.

But she bought four tickets of her own.

Three of her four won $100 each. None of the five jointly-owned tickets were winners.

Her Olympic Lottery luck began with the first two tickets she bought for the April draw last year.

She sensed before the draw that she would win the $5,000—and she did.

She bought five tickets for the July draw, and two of them were $100 winners.

She bought seven tickets for the November draw, and again two were $100 winners.

And she bought those four tickets for herself for the Febrary draw and three were $100 winners.

A mathematics professor at the University of Waterloo says the odds on her luck are one in about 19 billion.

Agreement Signed

OTTAWA (CP) — A 15-month collective agreement has been signed between the government and the Public Service Alliance of Canada, covering 1,100 employees in the technical inspection group, the treasury board said Thursday. Over a 15-month period, the minimum annual salary will be raised to $9,885 from $8,620 and maximum annual salary will jump to $25,779 from $22,630. The workers inspect measuring equipment and other federal government products.

Energy Meet Called

WASHINGTON (CP) — A Canada-United States conference on energy postponed from Feb. 10, has been rescheduled at Canada's request for March 18, a Capital Hill source said Thursday. The source said the U.S. had scheduled bilateral discussions with Canada on several energy supply issues for Feb. 10, but the meeting was postponed at the request of the Canadian government which wanted more time to prepare.

Press Assailed

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Yakabuski Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Renfrew South, refused Thursday to name two Queen's Park press gallery members he says he saw prompting the opposition to attack Premier Davis.

On Wednesday, Mr. Yakabuski told the annual meeting of the Renfrew South Progressive Conservative Association that the press is part of a "dastardly plot" to destroy the premier.

Workers Escorted

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Police took four hours Thursday to escort about 100 office workers from Standard Tube Canada Ltd. while about 100 pickets marched outside the plant, Police Chief James Miller said Thursday.

He said the workers were afraid to leave after windshields on trucks and police cars were smashed by rocks when two trucks went through the picket line earlier in the day to remove equipment from the plant, where about [illegible] members of Local 636, United Auto Workers, have been on strike since Feb. 16.

Reserves to Get Indian Police

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian reserves in Ontario in future will be policed by Indian constables recruited, trained and supervised by the Ontario Provincial Police.

The announcement was made Thursday by federal Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan, federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand and provincial Solicitor-General John Clement.

The approach, similar to that employed by the RCMP in the western provinces, is designed to stress preventive policing and community relations.

The Indian constables will receive the same salary and fringe benefits as OPP personnel, and advancement is open in the regular force. The OPP formerly policed the reserves.

Report Released

OTTAWA (CP) — The labor department Thursday released a conciliation report on a contract dispute between Algoma Central Railway of Sault Ste. Marie and about 90 trainmen of the United Transportation Union (UTU).

The report, prepared by Toronto lawyer George Ferguson, offers a 15-per-cent raise for workers on weekly salary and 10 per cent plus 23 cents an hour for hourly-paid employees. The increases would be retroactive to Jan. 1 this year.

Want Right to Strike

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — Local teachers say they want the right to strike. Ronald McNeil, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature for Elgin, said Wednesday after meeting teachers to discuss legislation governing board-teacher negotiations, being drafted by the ministry of education. Stuart MacLean, president of the Elgin association of Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation, said Mr. McNeil indicated the bill will be introduced during the next session.

School Boards Lack Freedom

OTTAWA (CP) — Local school boards do not have the freedom of action they need to bargain with teachers because of provincially-imposed spending limits, Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said Thursday.

"As a result, the number and frequency of prolonged and bitter teacher strikes, like the one that has halted secondary education here, is increasing," he told the Canadian College of Teachers.

About 26,000 high school students have been left without classes since last Thursday when 1,650 teachers walked off work in a contract dispute with the Ottawa board of education.

U.S. Dairy Prices May Increase

WASHINGTON (CP) — A bill that government economists say would raise the consumer price of milk by eight cents a gallon, butter 20 cents a pound and cheese 10 cents a pound has been approved by the House of Representatives agriculture committee.

The measure raising the regulated floors on the prices of dairy products, wheat, corn and cotton passed Thursday by a 32-to-8 vote.

The measure would increase dairy price supports to 85 per cent of parity. President Ford vetoed such legislation after the last Congress.

Mistake

OTTAWA (CP) — The health department apparently does not know how a company partly owned by a Liberal party executive received a $40,700 federal contract in 1972 when John Munro was health minister.

"It seems to have been a straightforward error by the department," a department official said Thursday. "I am sure it happens this way from time to time, but this one is particularly unfortunate at this time."

Tenders apparently were not called.

Librarians May Strike

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Contract talks between the public library board and library workers broke down Tuesday. Olga Tilk, president of Local 9089, Canadian Union of Public Employees said the workers legally may strike 14 days after a conciliator's report is handed down, probably sometime this week. The 44 union members, seeking higher wages, have been without a contract since last Oct. 31.

Professor Suggests Postponing Pipeline

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A University of British Columbia economics professor who said Thursday that the proposed northern Canada natural gas pipeline should be delayed until the 1980's is to be recalled for cross-examination at a later meeting of the Berger inquiry.

Prof. Stuart Jamieson told a reporter after giving evidence Thursday that he is not concerned about being questioned on his views that the $7-billion project to bring Mackenzie Delta and Alaska gas south should be delayed.

He said his recommendation is based on government and private reports.

"If Arctic Gas read those volumes, I don't see how they could arrive at any other conclusion," he added.

Lawyers for Canadian Arctic Gas Pipelines Ltd., who want to complete the 2,600-mile pipeline by 1979 or 1980, asked for Prof. Jamieson's recall.

Grain Markets Seen Threatened

OTTAWA (CP) — Amid growing appeals that it legislate an end to strikes affecting grain exports, Parliament continued Thursday to plow through a bill designed to stabilize a wide range of agricultural incomes.

The bill, likely to get Commons approval in principle today, would amend the Agriculture Stabilization Act and compensate farmers hit by poor crops or depressed markets. They would receive at least 90 per cent of their average income for the previous five years if markets went sour.

It would affect cattle, hogs, sheep, oats, industrial milk and cream, corn, soyabeans and barley produced outside the designated wheat board area that includes the Prairies and part of British Columbia.

The opposition continues to criticize the bill as nothing more than rewarding of the existing act, passed about 16 years ago and considered outdated.

Meanwhile, the latest in a series of strikes that have tied up grain exports for 3½ months out of the last seven dragged on.

Parliament had to legislate an end to a grain handlers strike that began Aug. 1 and lasted six weeks. That was followed by a strike by federally-employed primary products inspectors, which include grain inspectors. It ended after a mediator was appointed.

Involved in the current West Coast tie-up are 4,000 longshoremen and about 200 grain weighers, the latter included in the 18,600 striking general labor and trades (GLTs) employed by the federal government.

However, concern was expressed Thursday that Canada's export markets will suffer irreparable harm if shipments do not begin moving soon.

But the government remained unreceptive to suggestions of intervention, preferring to let collective bargaining take its course.

Jail Filthy

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Brampton's women's jail, which houses about 120 prisoners from all over the province, has been called "filthy" and "drab" by a Peel County grand jury.

The report, released Thursday, said "the floors and windows in the buildings and cottages were filthy, giving the areas a drab over-all appearance."

Canadiana quality includes: National Building Code, C.M.H.C. and C.S.A. approval; plus broadloom, wiring, heating and plumbing.

What Price Nutrition — Can You Afford to Eat Well?

It is the fundamental right of every Canadian to be well—nourished.

At least, that's what the 1973 report of Nutrition Canada says and it encourages government, industry and consumers to be "geared toward the fulfillment of that right."

To that end, the Food Prices Review Board undertook to prepare a basic document on the cost of eating adequately today in Canada.

It studied what people generally do eat and then modified that diet to make it nutritional within the generally accepted criteria for nutritional adequacy. The Review Board points out that new research findings could alter what is considered an adequate diet. Its diet is not necessarily the only diet; within the Canada Food Guide, many combinations of food may be made to provide good nutrition.

On this page, a condensation of what they found about what nutrients you need and where you can get them and tomorrow you'll read what it costs to eat across the nation and in Belleville.

A nutritious diet combines different foods to supply all the nutrients needed to promote and maintain good health.

Simple, isn't it?

All you need to do is eat a variety of foods in proper proportion.

The problem, though, is that you shop for food, not nutrients and people aren't always aware of what foods contain what nutrients.

Foods come either from animals or from plants. In general, food from animal sources contains nutrients in better balance for human needs than plant foods, but plant foods in conjunction with animal foods provide adequate nutrition at a lower cost.

The nutrients we derive from food are protein, fats and carbohydrates, vitamins and minerals.

PROTEIN

Protein is the largest component of the body, making up the main part of the muscles and organs. It is used to build and repair body tissues, maintain normal fluid balance, regulate body functions and form antibodies to fight infection.

Proteins are made up of many different amino acids; some are essential — your body can't make them — and some non-essential — your body manufactures them from other amino acids. The nutritional quality of protein depends on the amount of essential amino acids present in the food.

Thirty five per cent of men over 65 and 30 per cent of women at that age are deficient in protein.

Proteins from animal sources — meat, eggs, milk — are of high quality; proteins from cereals, bread, beans, peanut butter, peas and other plant foods, are of lower quality because essential amino acids are missing. They may be combined with animal foods or with each other to make up for this deficiency; for example, eat bread with peanut butter, beans with rice.

FATS AND CARBOHYDRATES

These nutrients are sources of calories which provide the body with energy for warmth, work and body maintenance.

Carbohydrates are the foundation of our food supply: starches and sugars supply energy, the foods which contain them also supply proteins, minerals, vitamins as well as cellulose for bulk in the diet. Sugars supply only calories.

Fats supply essential fatty acids needed by the body and carry fat-soluble vitamins; they are necessary in the diet for the absorption of these vitamins.

VITAMINS

Vitamin A works in the maintenance of skin; eyes and mucous membrane linings; it contributes to normal growth in children. It is manufactured in the body from carotene which is available from dark yellow and dark green vegetables. It is stored in the fat of milk, butter and cheese.

There are many separate vitamins in the vitamin B group. They include thiamin which is available in enriched or whole grains, eggs and nuts and which aids in metabolism and breakdown of carbohydrates; riboflavin, available from eggs and milk and necessary for growth and reproduction; and niacin, which the body manufactures from an amino acid found in protein food and which aids in normal growth

Vitamin C is necessary to maintain healthy teeth and gums and strong blood vessel walls; the body does not store Vitamin C and it is easily destroyed when exposed to heat in the presence of air and alkali. Citrus fruits and vegetables like broccoli and cabbage and potatoes are good sources when steamed in a small amount of water until tender crisp.

Vitamin D is used by the body for the maintenance of bones and teeth and is produced by the body when the skin is exposed to ultraviolet radiation. Most milk, skim milk powder and margarine contain added Vitamin D.

Other vitamins are E and K, which come from whole wheat bread and margarine and green and yellow vegetables respectively.

MINERALS

Minerals act as body building materials. Calcium is necessary to the normal contractability of muscles and the clotting of blood. Milk is an excellent source of calcium as are cheese and yogurt. Phosphorous is an important building element in the nervous system. Meat, fish, poultry and milk are sources. The metabolism of calcium and phosphorous is aided by magnesium, a mineral obtained in nuts, whole grains and seafoods. Iron forms part of haemoglobin in red blood cells and is particularly important to growing children and menstruating women and girls. It is available from red meats, leafy vegetables, live and whole grain cereal products. You need copper to utilize iron.

These Foods are Best

The components of a nutritious diet are grouped according to the nutrients each contains.

The milk and other dairy products group provide a balance of the majority of nutrients with the exception of Vitamin C and iron. Milk is an exceptionally good source of nutrients and considered essential Yogurt is its nutritional equal: ice cream is not.

Fruits provide vitamins and to a lesser extent, iron. When fresh fruits are out of season, canned or frozen fruits or their juices are adequate substitutes.

Fruit-flavored drinks are a source of Vitamin C only when it has been added by the manufacturer but they are not the nutritional equivalent of real fruit juices since they do not contain the other minerals and vitamins found in fruit juices. In particular, orange juice is preferable to orange drink made from flavour crystals because it contains, in addition to vitamin C, thiamin, folic acid, iron and potassium.

Vegetables provide a variety of vitamins and minerals and it is essential that a variety of vegetables be included in the diet. Canned and frozen vegetables are considered generally equal nutritionally to fresh vegetables. Cooking should be done in little water and little time in minimize the loss of water soluble vitamins.

Breads and cereals are important sources of protein, calories and B vitamins. Whole grain flour contains more nutrients than refined white flour. Many brands of macaroni and other pasta, buns, biscuits and some breads are made from white flour which is not enriched.

Whole grain breakfast cereals are superior nutritionally to refined grain varieties. The processing of breakfast cereals is another factor affecting their quality: high temperatures destroy some of the essential amino acids while the addition of sugar at high temperatures affects some amino acids so that they are no longer available to the body.

Generally puffed cereals have a lower quality protein that do flaked, shredded or rolled cereals. Sugar-coated cereals are inferior not only because the extra processing lowers the protein quality but also because sugar, which constitutes one-third to one-half the cereal weight, dilutes the content of all nutrients present.

Meat and fish provide protein, iron and a variety of vitamins and minerals. Legume protein, mixed with animal protein, provides protein of a quality as high of that as animal protein served alone.

These groups of foods are the ones listed in Canada's Food Guide.

There are others that are not so conveniently categorized.

There are a number of food items which provide little nourishment other than calories. These include sweets, confections, soft drinks and a number of cereal based fried or puffed snack foods. Not only are they an expensive form of calories, they usually provide calories the body does not need.

AROUND TOWN with
LANA ROBINSON

(. . . an advertising feature designed to keep you better informed of what's new around town.)

Monday It Starts

Monday it starts and I mean it — the first anniversary celebration of Murray's Food Market on Front St. (And they said it couldn't be done, eh Murray?) For a whole week, you can celebrate Murray's success and your own smart shopping sense by taking advantage of 60 — yes 60 — specials being offered during this very special week. Murray Atkinson is a master wizard when it comes to grocery-store magic, but this week he and his magic wand have outdone themselves. Murray knows that a store is only as good as its customers. And he think's you're pretty special, so hence, his specials. Happy Murray's Birthday everybody!

Some Bright New Lights

Ruddy Electric's Consumer Division, 291 Coleman St. is aglow with some of their new collection of lighting fixtures. Dave Chalmers predicted earlier in the column that this year would be a year for remodelling, and based on his customers, he's right. This new lighting collection will add just that change to make "what's new" look like "what's different"! If your kitchen is on your list of remodelling priorities, then Ruddy Electric can help you there too with a complete selection of fine Moffat appliances which they carry — stoves, fridges, wall ovens, counter top units. If you're redecorating, do it properly with Ruddy Electric's help.

Doing It Now

The range of services provided by Moira-Schuster, 17 South Pinnacle St. continues to astound me. Last week I talked about Smoke-Gard, the new fire-warning system for homes now carried by Moira-Schuster. This week, when talking to them, I was told about the number of air conditioning and air furnace installations now being done. People have had such systems on order since the fall and they are now being installed in preparation for these sweltering summer days. It's hard to believe that we'll curse the hot ones too isn't it? Such installations aren't different nor do they involve a lot of tearing up and ripping down. So there's no mess — and such comfortable results! Call Moira-Schuster at 962-4504 and get ready for the hot ones.

Something New

Gibbs and Son, 37 Albion St. have an announcement to make: They are now the holders of a franchise for a super-efficient, top quality vacuum cleaner called "Air-Way Sanitizer". As the name implies, this vacuum takes its dust intake seriously and less is returned to the air. This is a higher-priced machine because it is an engineering masterpiece. Home demonstrations at absolutely no obligation, can be arranged by calling a special Air-Way number. That number is 968-9197. Please call and Gibbs and Son can arrange your demonstrations of this quality vacuum.

Some Spring Cleaning Help

It's as true as the robins coming eventually and the daffodils and tulips. Spring cleaning comes right along with the rain and flowers. But there's a way to get around it and enjoy the robins and the rain even more — have Service-Master do it all. A simple call to 967-1672 and then the walls, windows, carpets, floors and furniture can all sparkle and glow. And your back and fingernails are still intact. Service-Master is an internationally renowned cleaning company. If it can't clean it, it can't be cleaned. So cheat a bit, use your head and not your hands and knees. Call Service-Master.

Where Good Fashion Starts

You say a lot about yourself by what you wear. We all knew that. But you make the same kind of statement about yourself with your glasses. And all the most fashionable spring clothes in the world are going to look out of place if the glasses don't say you're modern too. Style in glasses frames isn't just a frivolous consideration either. Modern glasses frames are lighter, made of better materials especially created for optics and the lenses can be safer and more protective. We wear glasses in the first place to improve our sight. But wearing glasses from Trenton Optical, 54 Bridge St. E. can also be a fashionable as well as the right thing to do.

He Means It

Hud Marcotte of Holiday Truck and Car Rentals, 11 West Moira St. has some straight facts about his business practice that he'd like to get across in this week's column. For one thing, Hud believes in and welcomes competition. "It keeps us all on our toes", he says. "It's the best thing any business can have". And when you're looking at car rental companies, listen to everything said and think about it. Hud doesn't offer any "free mileage" claim with his service. But his day rates are generally less than some of those who do. If you want the straight facts about renting a good car from a reputable firm, call 962-9114 and ask for Hud. He'll tell you.

Spring Has Arrived

It's still pretty chilly out there and there aren't any robins yet. But up at the West Wind Boutique in Acinolite, spring is really official. There aren't any swallows or martins but there are gorgeous spring and summer ensembles from Italy, Israel, Germany and Switzerland. Such as . . . suede-trimmed pant suits in beautiful pastels; dresses and coats and dresses and jackets; spring prints, and spring and summer evening wear that floats and drifts and sings and shouts — that it's spring and time for lovely things from the West Wind Boutique on Hwy. 7 at Actinolite.

Your Own Exhibition

Donnah Cameron, one of the three talents of the Cameron Gallery, 1½ miles west of Rednersville has had some excitement with her work. Her painting of trilliums which hangs in Queen's Park was recently used in a home show to accent fine furnishings and three of her paintings are on exhibit in Toronto for a charity show. You can have your very own Cameron exhibition with just a short and pleasant trip to the Cameron Gallery this weekend. The weather is getting more condusive to such excursions and none could be more pleasant than this one. You can see oils, watercolors, prints and pottery, all interesting and all Cameron. Gallery weekend hours are 10:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Something For Your Heart and Soul

You have to admit our hearts and souls require a fair amount of nurturing if we're to get it together and keep it that way. Right now, there's a group entertaining in the Terrace Lounge of the Four Seasons Hotel called Hart and Soul. And the kind of music they provide would sooth the hearts and souls of anybody. An evening in the relaxing surroundings of the Terrace Lounge will do the trick for a mean week or a mean day. And it won't hurt a good day either. Visit the Four Seasons tonight and get that heart and soul of yours to the right place.

Orders Are Coming In

It's certainly gratifying for me to know this column is being read and judging from the response which Highland Construction has had about estimates for vinyl siding, it certainly is getting read. If you want to get your house sided in reasonable time, you'd better respond a little yourself by calling 962-1184 so that an expert from Highland Construction can come and give you a free estimate on the cost of this remarkable siding. Vinyl is lasting in its durability and in its looks. It also comes in a range of colors too, which don't fade. March 21 isn't far off. Getting new siding shouldn't be far off either.

Ann Landers

His Birthday Salute For 'Just a Housewife'

Dear Ann Landers: As for that character who wanted to know what unemployed housewives do all day besides shop in the stores and talk on the phone, I'd like to enlighten him. I became an authority on the subject last month when my wife went to the hospital for a hysterectomy. She scheduled the surgery during my annual two week vacation so I could stay home and take care of our children, 6 and 8.

I cooked three unbelievably rotten meals every day, did the laundry five times, tried to iron a few things, burned a hole in our daughter's best blouse and scorched a couple of pairs of the boy's pants.

Housekeeping was impossible. As soon as I got the place looking halfway decent, the kids and their friends messed things up.

My wife deserves a gold medal. How she manages to keep the house spotless, do the marketing, cooking, washing and ironing, take the kids to the dentist, for piano lessons, sew costumes, drive my mother around, bake cakes for sick neighbors and be active in the American Cancer Society, is beyond me.

I hope you will print this on March 7, her birthday. My so-called "average" housewife is a miracle worker and she deserves to read this letter on that special day.—True Believer

Dear True: Here's your letter—and on the day requested. That sound you hear is millions of women blowing kisses. (P.S. Whenever I hear that phrase "unemployed housewives" I hit the ceiling. Many women work as hard IN the house as others do out. Maybe harder.)

Dear Ann Landers: Our nephew, a physician, was recently married to a young woman who has a PhD in history. How should this couple be addressed? We feel that Dr. and Mrs. John Smith is incorrect since the woman is not getting proper recognition for the title she has a right to be proud of. Please inform us.—Status Minded

Dear S.M.: You may address them as Dr. John Smith and Dr. Jean Smith, or Drs. John and Jean Smith. If none of these satisfy you, I suggest that you ask them the question.

Dear Ann Landers: In reference to the 2½-year-old hyperactive boy, your advice to seek another medical opinion was good. However, I wish you had suggested a physician trained in neurology and psychology—one who would take the time to do exhaustive tests and find out if the hyperactivity is physical or psychological.

Physicians who lack the training or refuse to take the time to get to the root of the problem often prescribe drugs which can lead to dependence or even death if the child has a heart dysfunction. I am not a doctor, but my friend's 5 year old is hyper and the first doctor put him on a certain drug. His mother got a second opinion from a specialist. He said continuing on that drug could have been disastrous. Please print my letter.—Northport Reader.

Dear N.R.: Thank you for reinforcing my original counsel: "Get another medical opinion." It's excellent health insurance and could spell the difference between life and death.

Doris Clark

European Work Ethic Dismays Reader

Dear Doris: I would like to know what you and others think of the way some people from Europe, who have been in Canada for years, treat their children.

Seems to me they brainwash them from the time they are born. I don't think these children are born out of love; they must have them as an asset. As soon as it is possible they are put out to work. I agree that teen-agers should have a part-time job when they are old enough to work, but these same young adults have their nose to the grindstone and are old before their time.

They are not even taught to think for themselves. These young adults are born here, and should be allowed to live and think the way they want to.

At least in our family, our teen-agers have the ability to think for themselves and to make their own decisions. Plus they can handle their finances. What do you think?

Makes You Think.

Dear Makes: You have raised a point which has been the despair of many a young Canadian born of European parents. Our way of living is so different from the way the parents were raised; and it is hard for them to understand our love-and-let-live ways.

Cultural differences are hard to live down or to live with: it may take another whole generation to make the change-over to the point where everybody is happy with our Canadian ways. Yet our European-born citizens are some of our best, and can teach us much when it comes to work, and craftsmanship, and discipline.

So don't write them off. Work at understanding and befriending them.

Dear Doris: I'm writing you for advice for a friend. She has a boy friend, but now she's met another guy whom she likes as well. Her boy friend is very jealous and displays it; the other guy likes her and displays it. She has no idea what to do. It's the old story of "I love them both".

She usually discusses these problems with me, but even I am at a loss.

Abbey.

Dear Abbey: Your friend obviously isn't ready to settle down to one boy friend yet. Tell her to explain that to both boy friends. She needs more time to play the field. Then when she meets the right man, she'll recognize him at once. There'll be no question of "which one?"

Confidential to Weeping: Get to that doctor. You let your parents talk you out of keeping an appointment which was difficult for the doctor to arrange. Ask him for another chance and explain the situation.

Your family obviously doesn't realize the seriousness of your problem, since you definitely need medical and psychiatric help. You say your social worker will not help you, but just what are you doing to help yourself? You are not ready for a firm commitment of any kind right now.

S. ALEC GORDON: WEDDINGS I HAVE MET

"I have relived some of the accounts recorded herein and can therefore vouch for their authenticity." — Harry M. Davis, former minister of Bridge Street United Church; from Preface of "Weddings I Have Met."

* * *

In a humorous booklet of collected stories entitled "Weddings I Have Met" written by the well-known organist of Bridge Street United Church, S. Alec Gordon, the author explains, in part:

Although the event takes place in church,
A place which for humour you would not search . . .

I often thought, "I'll write a book
At which my friends might care to look,
About the 'Weddings I Have Met',
Before these happenings I forget."
Well, here it is. I've got it done:
By reading it, you may share its fun.

You, the reader will agree that all eighteen stories of this amusing collection are delightfully recorded. The place "mentioned are real" and the events "really did happen as described" though all names "are fictitious."

In "Mother's Favourite" a bride wanted "The Bells of St. Mary's" played at her church wedding. She said it was her mother's favorite piece

"Good Heaven's, girl," I gasped, "That's not a sacred number. I can't play that in church!

"Listen, honey," I protested, "Mother's had her chance. It is not her wedding. It's yours. No. That number is definitely out. You can't have that one played in the House of God.

Did Mr. Gordon play it? — You must read it!

Wedding ceremonies are most simple. What problem could arise? What funny situation could come up? Yet crucial moments do surface when:

—The bridegroom leaves the wedding ring in his other suit. The best man dashes down the aisle where Aunt Martha is sitting, to borrow her ring and returns for the ceremony in the nick of time.

The organist, tangled up in his own thoughts, absentmindedly plays Mendlessohn's "The War March of the Priests" instead of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March".

— The newly ordained young minister admits to the middle-aged couple before him "I am a bit nervous, today, since this is my very first wedding."

"Oh, don't worry, parson," smiles the groom, "If you get lost, I'll prompt you. It's my third!"

Reverend Davis says he recommends these stories, not only to prospective brides and grooms, but to those "who were fortunate enough to have the nuptial knot tied without any untoward incident, as a reminder of how many misadventurous mortifications they were spared!"

Mr. Gordon was a former teacher at the Ontario School for the Deaf, where he taught for 39 years. A graduate of the Toronto Conservatory of Music and studied music at the Juilliard School of Music in New York city, Mr. Gordon was the first in Ontario to introduce Rhythm work in the schools.

As a teacher, an organist and author, Mr. Gordon serves his community well — and with a smile.

Over the Side

A load of logs slides from the deck of the Haida Monarch into a log pond at MacMillan Bloedel's Powell River, B.C., division. The new $8.2 million self-propelled, self-dumping log carrier — first of its kind in the world — utilizes a system of ballast tanks and pumps to tilt its log loads over the side. (CP Photo)

Cruising South Seas Frustrating Ordeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Daydreams of a prolonged South Seas cruise don't always stand up to testing.

John Hyndman, 35, of Vancouver sold his real estate and photography business in 1969 to buy the Velaris, a 50-foot racing sloop. After a trial run to Hawaii, he set out in the summer of 1971 for a three-year trip to the South Pacific.

"We lost the rudder after 500 miles, Mr. Hyndman said. "We had to use parts from the boat to improvise a jury-rigged rudder lashed to the side."

He and the crew limped to the Christmas Islands, where they grounded on a coral reef. The voyage was halted until September, 1971.

But troubles were just beginning.

"We broke two head stays in rough seas and had to do some more jury-rigging. We almost lost the mast.

By the time they reached Papeete,the hurricane season had started. The crew disbanded and Mr. Hyndman spent the winter in Tahiti.

The following spring, with a new crew, he sailed to the Windward and Leeward Island, then on to the Cook Islands. At the capital city, Rarotonga, the anchor was entangled on a reef and lost.

By the time the Velaris was seaworthy again, several members of the second crew had quit. Mr. Hyndman and one other sailed to American Samoa.

"We did two hours watch, two hours off, all the way," he said.

At Pago Pago, in American Samoa, another hurricane season was beginning, so Mr. Hyndman decided to return to Vancouver.

He sold the Velaris and returned home at the beginning of January, but still hears the call of the sea.

"Oh, I'm ready to go off again," he said. "I already have a couple of trips lined up."

He doesn't know whether he would do it differently.

"Well, I did enjoy the challenge of the first big cruise. But I'd advise anyone who's thinking about it, even if he could afford a yacht at over $1,000 a foot, to go as a crew member on someone else's boat. It's much easier that way."

Demand Economy

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Economy cars are in big demand everywhere, even among car thieves. Within one hour, thieves made off with five late-model Mercury Cougars and four similar Ford Mustangs from this suburban Boston community. Police were investigating the possibility of a stolen car ring operating in the area.

Rains Block Higway

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Torrential rains, lack of building materials and disease have forced suspension of construction on the nearly completed highway that was to link Brazil and Colombia by 1977, says Brazil's transport ministry.

SEX VS. MARRIAGE?

What part does sex have in the breakup of a marriage? It's a complicated question. But there's no doubt that today's liberated attitude toward sex has led to unreal expectations and a "tyranny of performance". A wife must be not only a good mother, cook and housekeeper, but a terrific sex partner. A husband must not only be a good father, provider and companion, but give full satisfaction at night. Find out why there's trouble at the "Bedroom Olympics"! Read REPORT FROM THE SEXUAL REVOLUTION. One of 32 articles and features in the March Reader's Digest. At your newsstand today!

Middle Ages Architecture Regarded as Imperilled

CHICHESTER, England (CP) — Less is known about European architecture of the Middle Ages than about much earlier periods.

In the last two or three decades there has been an upsurge of interest in archeology and countless masterpieces of Roman architecture and mosaic work have been uncovered and preserved.

Much of it has been unearthed by the giant earth-moving equipment of construction firms making way for new housing, tower blocks, factories or highways. When an important find is made, the machinery is halted, the archeologists are called in and arrangements made for removal to another site. All that is historically valuable is preserved.

But what is beginning to concern people interested in the culture and traditions of their country is the rapidly increasing destruction of architecture from more recent times, up to the early 18th century, and there is likely to be a curb on these activities.

At the same time the public has become aware of the threat to the dwellings of town and country workers, market halls and meeting places of yesteryear. Many of these have already disappeared.

To rescue what remains, a lead has been taken in a large rural area of Hampshire and Sussex where efforts are being made to preserve as much as possible of what is known as "vernacular architecture"—that is, the architecture characteristic of the neighborhood in the past.

An open-air museum covering 35 acres near the old cathedral city of Chichester has already saved many structures and has set an example that will soon be widely followed.

At the Weald and Downland Open-Air Museum are buildings brought by road and rail in dismantled form—bricks, stones, timbers all marked and numbered—and re-erected.

The first was Wynkhurst house, from a village 40 miles away. An interesting medieval house—probably late 14th century—it was rescued from the site of a new reservoir. It is a perfect example of what was probably a farmhouse of the period with its typical timber frame and wattle-and-daub infill and beaten-earth floor. A few items of replica medieval furniture have been added.

Bayleaf Farmhouse, built between 1420 and 1480, and with additions and alterations of the 16th and 17th centuries, was also rescued from a reservoir scheme.

A toll cottage and other small buildings that would have been bulldozed in road-widening operations are re-established in appropriate settings at the museum, but perhaps the most intriguing exhibit of all is a market hall from the rural outskirts of Southampton.

It is an Elizabethan timber and brick structure reminiscent of paintings and drawings of the period. It had fallen into such disrepair that it was dangerous and was about to be destroyed. The museum spent £8,000 ($19,500) to remove and renovate it.

There are humble structures such as cattle sheds, charcoal-burning kilns, a water treadmill, a blacksmith's forge, all rebuilt as on the original site.

109 Men and Women Get Churchill Fellowships

LONDON (CP) — Butchers, bus drivers and housewives are among 70 men and 39 women chosen from nearly 4,000 candidates to carry out individual study projects this year in many parts of the world under the travelling fellowships scheme of the Winston Churchill Memorial Trust.

The projects include studies of criminal behavior and recent medical developments in the United States, adventurous journeys calling for physical skills and endurance such as a climb in the Karakoram Himalayas, exploring the caves of Papua-New Guinea and a canoe venture around the North Cape of Norway.

Other studies, taking from one to three months, include observation of the autumn migration of arctic gulls in Alaska, involvement in worker participation schemes in Sweden and West Germany, learning from the Indonesian Story Theatre, studies of the St. Vincent parrot and Soufriere tree and conservation research into Iran's wading birds.

The Churchill Fellows are chosen for their initiative and enterprise. All expenses are paid by the trust, which is endowed with £3 million ($6.9 million) as a tribute to Sir Winston Churchill to enable Britons who would not otherwise be able to afford it to carry out projects they have always dreamed of undertaking.

There's a real shortage of rental housing across Canada for modest income families.

Builders, you can help us change that. Fast.

1. Submit proposals to us before April 30th for projects that provide good quality rental accommodations for families (i.e., highest number of bedrooms) at the lowest possible cost.

2. Under our Special Rental Housing Program, a loan of up to 95% of project costs at 8% interest, with 50 years amortization, may be approved.

3. Your project must offer rents at or below the average market price of comparable new accommodation in the area where you propose to build.

4. Once approved, a project must begin construction within 90 days of the loan commitment. Projects in areas with the lowest vacancy rates are most vital. Priority will be given to those that can be started and completed quickly.

5. Rents will be set by agreement between CMHC and you to meet the needs of modest-income families. In fact, families whose incomes exceed four times the rent will not be eligible.

6. We emphasize that the benefits of our low interest loans must flow through to the tenant.

7. Your project will be judged on the quality of architectural design and site development; efficiency of internal layout; economy of operation and maintenance; relationship to community, educational and recreational facilities; and quality of construction.

8. For complete information about the Special Rental Housing Program, and to obtain a "Proposal Call" package, write or call.

Russia Redeeming Post-war Bonds

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Soviet citizens who wrote off their large collections of post-war national investment bonds as a bad debt to the state must be gnashing their teeth this year.

After 30 years in which bonds were devalued, used as wallpaper or shelf-lining or simply lost, the Soviet government has begun redeeming them.

For many years, they were compulsory substitutes for one or two months' wages in the pay packet of every worker, so almost every Soviet family had some bonds hidden away.

The first repayment of 100 million new rubles (about $138 million) came at the end of December against bonds issued in 1948 in exchange for all pre-war holdings.

"I never thought they would be paid back," said one Russian who received back 20 of the 250 rubles in bonds he had put aside. "But the bonds didn't ask to be fed, so I put them in a safe place and forgot about them."

The initial repayment is less than half the total value of the 1948 issue—and compares with a final state debt of 2.8 billion new rubles accumulated by 1958, when the government halted bond issues.

Official statements have pledged to pay back the last kopek by 1997—although with none of the interest promised in the small print on the back of each certificate.

The main reason for previous doubt that the state would honor its debt was an announcement by former Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev in 1957 that both the issue and redemytion of the bonds, called "obligatsiya" in Russian, would be frozen for 20 years.

Bonds by the million were discardel when workers heard Khrushchev explain that the economy was not strong enough to halt sales and begin repayments. In some cities, angry citizens plastered their obligatsiya on public advertisement pillars in protest.

Now, anyone who has had the luck to find someone else's abandoned hoard can cash it in. Bonds have been found in old furniture, books and dusty boxes. Hunters visiting deserted villages in the northern forests have discovered mouldy trunks filled with them.

The bonds were first issued during the rapid industrialization of the 1930s with a four-per-cent interest rate and promise to repay the buyer within 20 years.

Although the bonds were nominally voluntary, a worker declining to subscribe risked dire pressure at work and possibly being sent to a labor camp.

With the Second World War and the huge task of reconstructing a devastated country, the Soviet government stepped up its output of bonds.

Stamp Collectors May Beat Inflation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Saving stamps may be a good way of outracing inflation.

Lt.-Col. F. E. Eaton says a $1 Canadian stamp with a lot of fish on it, minted in 1953, now sells for about $20.

An international stamp authority, he runs auctions at his headquarters in Vancouver.

"Anyone who started with a simple collection of stamps of good quality 20 years ago is bound to have something worthwhile," he said.

"When I started in the business in 1937 it was possible to get a set of 1897 Queen Victoria Jubilee stamps for $30. The same set of 15 in fine condition now is worth $3,000."

Col. Eaton said the pleasure of ownership and the search for material are what counts with the dedicated philatelist. Scarcity and fashion dictate the value of stamps.

"Stamps of independent African countries issued since 1960 are definitely not in favor. But those from British colonial Africa, French or German areas where they were issued under a colonial power and used as the postal service, rather than for the benefit of stamp collectors, these colonial stamps are valuable.

"Today a lot of stamps are issued first for stamp collectors as a vehicle for governments to raise money. The Canadian government earns millions from the sale of its stamps to collectors."

Irregularity adds to the value of a stamp.

"It has to be something with a visual impact, such as being upside-down or a color missing. This does not happen frequently and makes the price high. It's a genuine mistake."

F. E. Eaton and Associates Ltd. is the only company west of Toronto which runs a regular stamp auction, usually every five weeks.

Col. Eaton opened his business in 1937 and later served in the Second World War while his father ran the business.

After the war, Col. Eaton was with the United Nations peacekeeping force in Kashmir and then served in China and Malaya with the Canadian department of external affairs. He came home to serve as commander of the militia regiment of the Irish Fusiliers, retiring in 1956.

His military career enabled him to collect stamps all over the world.

Smoking City Sign A Mystery

TRENTON — The fire department here still has no explanation for clouds of smoke that billowed from the illuminated municipal parking sign at the rear of the town hall Thursday night.

Firemen stood by for an hour at the town hall but could not find the cause of the smoke or how to turn off the power to the sign. They were called out when town police noticed smoke.

The town hall spokesman said today no damage was done and not even the fluorescent lights went off.

An electrician is being called in today to look at the sign.

Board Decisions On Record

Loyalist College's board of governors was relieved to learn Thursday night the shop is kept in good order.

The question was raised by board governor Dr. Bruce Cronk when he asked how the administration recorded previous decisions made at board level.

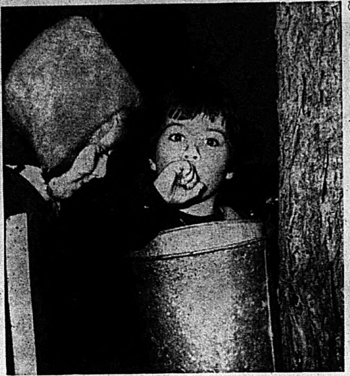
Dr. Cronk expressed concern that the board could pass a new policy which contradicted a former policy set by a previous administration.

Several board governors assured Dr. Cronk errors or contradictions would emerge in due course.

The issue was discussed for about 20 minutes and most agreed the college had built-in methods for assessing the failure or success of new policies.

Board secretary Marjory Cross came to the rescue and informed governors she has kept a cross reference file of all board business.

Miss Cross said she frequently checks current board actions against the policies set by previous administrations. She said she does provide complete background information for new decisions.



Syrup Time in Town

Soon maple-syrup time will be in full swing around the Quinte district. But, it's not necessary for these Belleville youngsters — Peter Ferguson and Jennifer Young, both six — to go to the country to find out the fact. On Howard Street, a maple already has been drilled by an expectant householder to collect sap already flowing intermittently with weather changes.

Interest Sought in Cabinet Session

All civic-appointed groups involved in Belleville's municipal operations are being hurriedly consulted about possible participation in next month's meeting of the Ontario cabinet in Kingston.

The contact follows arrival of an official invitation at city hall from Premier William Davis for presentations from Belleville at the April 16 session.

But, the city presented a brief two weeks ago to the conference of provincial resources ministers in Belleville.

The brief contained policy suggestions evolved by city council.

Now, with the arrival of the invitation to Kingston, Mayor Robin Jeffrey is pondering whether council — or its supporting civic groups — may wish further presentations.

As a result all city boards, committees and commissions are being contacted by city hall, she said Thursday.

Any suggestions should be filed as promptly as possible, she said.

Sidney Balks at Idea Of Relocating Rail Lines

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Hope of relocating Canadian Pacific tracks running along Dundas St. in Belleville faded Thursday at a Quinte Planning Board meeting.

The idea of relocating the lines was broached several weeks ago by Ald. Art Keegan, who, at that time, said the city is losing millions of development dollars with the tracks situated in their present location.

Standing in the way of track removal is Sidney Township Reeve Gordon Wilman. He said following the meeting: "No, I'm not in favor of moving the tracks. If they were moved from the city into the township, then they would interfere with our development."

Of the four municipalities that could be affected by the track question (Belleville, Trenton, Sidney and Thurlow townships) one dissenter can stymie the plans.

Davie Winkworth, of the ministry of tranpsortation and communications, present at the meeting said "unanimous consent" would be required before the province involved itself in a feasibility study.

Under the recently-passed Relocation and Crossing Act, the province and the federal government pick up the lion's share of relocation costs.

Sidney Reeve Wilman explained his position, saying "we've spent a whole lot of money on signals . . . if there are any changes it will have to be using Canadian National tracks,". He said he would not agree to a new track parallel to the existing CN line.

The first step in relocation is a study — half of the cost borne by the federal government and the remainder divided equally between the province and the municipality.

Reeve Wilman said he would not agree to a study saying it would be "too expensive".

Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey said he would support a motion for a study — providing local planning staff working on township official plans are not taken from that project to work on the track study.

Trenton Mayor Robert Patrick said he would go along with a study and suggested a central corridor might be the best solution.

Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey, interviewed following the meeting, said she was not surprised in hearing the township comments

"As far as the city is concerned, we might not be able to afford it," said the mayor. "We'll have to wait for a study before we can determine if it should be a priority or if the taxpayer can handle the cost."

Nor formal discussion was held on the study issue though members of the board instructed planning staff to contact the ministry to obtain an "information package" which will outline steps to acquire study funds from the province.

Adult Education May Soon Top Day Classes

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

Loyalist College's education program has been growing at a rate of 60 per cent a year since its start in 1968.

College governors were told Thursday night there will soon be a greater demand for adult educaton courses than now is required by the student population.

Harold Butterill, director of the extension division of the college, told the governors he expects the college to enrol a record 8,000 night course students this year.

Already the figure has soared to 7,930 from 6,108 during the 1974-75 fiscal y3ar. This compares to 1,500 daytime students now attending the college.

Mr. Butterill said "the future for adult education at this college looks bright". He cited examples where other communities have sought direction from Loyalist in this area.

He said the emphasis on the program has now changed. "(our aim) is to be a leader in all phases of adult education . . to affect community change so that social and economic improvements will take place," he added.

Mr. Butterill said community colleges have pioneered adult education programs and now many boards of education model their systems after it.

"After seven years we are on the threshold of slow but positive success in the area of adult education," explained Mr. Butterill.

He said the extension division initially instituted credit courses and later developed into interest courses which were designed to attract a broader portion of the adult segment.

"Now we must enter into the area of advanced interest courses . . a type of upgrading of interest courses," he said. These courses would apply to related fields in agriculture, technology and business. .

"Our major problem is to help adults identify their needs . . . and in this way we can reach out into the community to reach the adults.

On a negative note he said government ceilings had forced his department to cut about 25 courses from this year's curriculum.

However, he said the college would maintain about 695 courses for next year, despite the ceilings.

Board chairman Wilfred Wilkinson, of Trenton, said "there is no other college in Ontario which gives the emphasis to extension programs and achieves the same degree of success".

Mr. Wilkinson added this was true with the exception of Georgian College.

Proper Band Makeup Key to Group's Sound

There is more than meets the eye in the makeup of a drum and bugle corps.

Hugh Bondy, director of the Belleville Yardmen Corps, has outlined the composition of his outfit, which includes a percussion section, a horn section and a color party.

The percussion group has three players apiece on spare drums, triple timp-toms, tuned bass drums, tympanis and cymbalists.

In the horn section are first-through-third sopranos, first, second and bass baritones, first and second mellophones and a contrabass. The baritones give a trombone voice, the mellophones a French horn voice and the contrabass is in the tuba range.

He explains the color party is composed of many banners which complement the music when the drill is being presented. There is a "national party" of three or four people who carry the national flags.

Desirable features are occasionally added such as a rifle and sabre team to give more effect, he adds.

Labor Head Questions Need for College Degree

The Ontario director of education for the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) says universities should not be regarded "as the ultimate goal" of education.

James Brechin told a recent gathering of Quinte-area labor representatives at Loyalist College unemployment lines are filled with people holding university degrees.

He said companies will not hire these graduates because 'they're over - educated. TED.

"They (firms) are afraid to hire because they're afraid they (graduates) might move on," he said.

Mr. Brechin pointed out companies require all kinds of workers to operate and even the custodial staff is an integral part to the success of any business.

He emphasized he is not against higher education but people should not place total emphasis on achieving a university degree to be successful.

Mr. B rechin is a member of Seneca College's board of governors, Ontario Association for Continuing Education and the national advisory committee on labor education.

Board Approves $10 Pay Boost

Quinte elected official serving as members on the Quinte planning Board voted themselves retroactive a raise Thursday.

Members — including the mayors, Reeves and councillors from Belleville, Trenton, Sidney and Thurlow Townships and Frankford — took four votes before most could agree on how much.

Member now will receve $25 for each (monthly) meeting they attend and 15-cent-a mile car allowance. This marked the first raise since 1971. Since that time member received $15 for each meeting the raise is retroactive to Jan. 1.

After two more votes, the entire motion was lost and replaced by a motion from Alderman Brian Knudsen who suggested $25 for any meeting — including any board committee meetings. The motion succeeded and is retroactive.

Members will receive $20 back pay for the January and February meetings.

Two Convocations Needed

Loyalist College of Applied Arts and Technology will hold two convocations this spring. An additional convocation will be held June 21 for the graduating nurses and allied health students. Joan Macdonald, head of colleges of nurses for Ontario, will be the guest speaker. The regular convocation will be held May 24. Ontario's minister of Colleges and universities, James Auld, will be the guest speaker.

Drum Corps Looking for New Members

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

The Belleville Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps, on a membership drive, has reduced its minimum age limit to 13 from 16 years.

Director Hugh Bondy explains the corps requires a new base of potential talented youngsters to be competitive in future years.

"If you can get the right people, especially when they're younger . . . over a period of a few years, we'll have a large senior corps of experienced and interested people," he says.

The recent decision to drop the age limit for all sections of the corps was made to both attract new members and widen its base, explains Mr. Bondy.

The lower age limit will mean players will be with the corps longer and [illegible] more years of top quality musicianship, he [illegible]

He notes the corps has a current membership of just over 50 but "we'd like to have around 100-120".

No experience is necessav, points out Mr. Bondy. "We take people in and train them from scratch — anyone who shows an interest in learning," he says.

Interest is first and foremost, he comments.

"From your interest, you develop an enthusiasm and a desire to learn," he says. "That's the most important thing."

Regular attendance is required and one must have a "desire to practise at home and improve oneself" Mr. Bondy emphasizes.

And if one has played in a brass or concert band, it is not difficult to change to a bugle corps, he says. "It's almost a natural Anyone . . . can learn almost immediately. It's an easy switch."

New Management Setup Aids Band Operation

The Belleville Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps has a new administration setup for a more efficient operation.

"We've added a number of positions as well as a constitution we've adopted," says director Hugh Bondy.

The new offices are secretarial and public relations managed by Dorothy Kidd of Belleville, business manager held by Tony Street of Trenton and publicity conducted by Evelyn Monkley of Trenton.

The corpss instruction staff includes drill instructors Steve Burns and Bob Peters of Kingston, who played with the Rochester, N.Y., Crusaders, ranked eighth in the world out of 30 senior drum corps. Mr. Peters doubles as corps manager.

Other instructors are Mrs. Monkley for marching and manoeuvering, Paul Cappabianco of Kingston for bugles and Greg Runions of Kingston, for percussion.

Sounding the Call!

Don Wilson, first baritone horn player of the Belleville Yardmen Drum and Bugle Corps, appears to be sounding the call for more members outside the corps' practice hall on Station Street.

Director Hugh Bondy says the corps, on a membership drive, will welcome any youngster down to the age of 13 years who shows both interest and desire.

Dodgers Hoping John is Ready

By WALT ALSTON
Manager,
Los Angeles Dodgers

Winning the 1974 National League pennant was, we hope, the start of something big for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

It would be fair to assume the young players who played key roles in a fine season gained confidence and experience they lacked in '73 — and will be even better players in '75.

Veterans such as Jim Wynn, Mike Marshall, Don Sutton, Andy Messersmith and Willie Crawford are capable of repeat performances. So was Steve Garvey, who was MVP last year.

We all have our fingers crossed for Tommy John, coming off a complex arm operation. When he suffered a tendon tear at mid-season, Tommy had recorded a brilliant 13-3 won-lost record and was headed for his biggest down the pennant stretch and season. He was sorely missed World Series.

If John's comeback is delayed into the season, finding a replacement may be the biggest task of spring training. There are, of course, numerous candidates. Sutton, Messersmith and Doug Rau, figure to handle three starting spots. If John is unable to assume his 1974 role, there are various possibilities.

Charlie Hough may become a starter. Geoff Zahn or Rich Rhoden both are promising youngsters. Al Downing, put in regular rotation, might very well be a key man in our plans. Rex Hudson and Eddie Solomon, who had fine seasons at Albuquerque, both will be given serious consideration if a starter's spot is open.

Don't ask me how many times Mike Marshall will pitch in 1975. Also don't bet he doesn't break his year-old record of 106 games. He has made a believer of me. Behind him in the bullpen we have Jim Brewer, Zahn, Hough, Solomon and Stan Wall and possibly Downing. It's a strong bullpen, headed by an amazing performer.

The rise of the Dodgers to the rank of strong contender in 1973 and to the National League pennant in 1974 is a tribute to the scouting and player development departments — plus successful trading which brought Messersmith, Wynn, Marshall and Ken McMullen to the squad.

The future will be governed by improved performances by the younger players. In several cases just "repeat" performances would be enough to keep the Dodgers at or near the top this season.

We have some outstanding young players in Davey Lopes, Bill Russell, Ron Cey, Bill Buckner, Tom Paciorek, Joe Ferguson and Steve Yeager. And there's another fine group coming up from the minor leagues.

2 Tight Fits In QHL Series

Reid's Dairy and Stinson Construction are encountering difficulty establishing a firm hold on proceedings in their Quinte Hockey playoff series. Going into last night's third game at Memorial Arena, the teams were all even at one win each. A 3-3 draw did nothing to improve the chances of either team.

In the other series, Ted Waite potted the winning Belvedere goal for the second game in a row as the Hotelmen nipped Cornerstone 4-3 to lead that set 2-1.

It was the second straight game in which Belvedere has shaded Cornerstone, after dropping the opener in the series.

Bob Boyle, Jerry Lucas and Carl Boomhower fired the Dairymen's goals in the draw with Stinson's. Replying for the Construction team were Bill Goodfellow, Kevin Allen and Rick Rosebush. Rosebush also helped himself to a pair of assists as did Fred Bedard.

Ron Urch sparked Belvedere in the squeaker over Cornerstone, firing a pair of goals. Waite had his winning counter and two assists, and Reid Mallory rounded out the winners' production.

Top operator for the losers was Phil Meeks with a pair of goals. Barry Pyear was the other marksman. Doug Jodoin and John Valvasori each earned two assists.

Racing Club Seeks Help with Gold Cup

PICTON — A $1,500 grant from Prince Edward County council will be sought this year by the Prince Edward Racing Club following information that Molson's Breweries will withdraw its support of the Gold Cup Races here.

A member of the racing committee, John Cole this week informed the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce of the brewery's decision.

In recent years, the Molson's Challenge Cup carried prize monies of $3,000.

It was suggested that a reduced contribution of $500 will be made to the power boat races by Molson's Breweries this year.

In 1974 county council granted $1,000 to the racing event held on Labor Day weekend at Hayward Long Reach.

Mr. Cole told chamber of commerce directors projected operating costs of the races for 1975 are $19,500 to $21,000. An additional $3,000 in prize money has been included to woo grand prix power boats.

In 1974 the races were run at a cost of $16,438.

Goring – Leading Scorer Out

L.A. Star Injured

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Centre Butch Goring of Los Angeles Kings underwent surgery for a facial injury early today following the Kings' National Hockey League game with New York Islanders.

A hospital official said Goring, the Kings' leading goal scorer with 27 goals, would "probably not play hockey for a little while."

Goring suffered severe lacerations under his eye when he fell on the heel of the skate of the Islanders' Dennis Potvin. He was taken to the hospital for x-rays.

Seals Lose Stewart

OAKLAND (AP) — California Seals' defenceman Bob Stewart underwent surgery Thursday for torn right knee ligaments and will be lost to the club for the remainder of the National Hockey League season.

Stewart, 24, was injured during Wednesday night's 4-2 loss to Chicago Black Hawks. He has played in every Seals' game so far this season and has five goals, 12 assists and 93 penalty minutes.

NHL Attendance Up

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Hockey League said Thursday that its attendance is up by about a half-million fans this season.

"For the first time in NHL history, we will surpass 10 million paid attendance," said president Clarence Campbell.

Campbell said attendance for 561 league games played through Feb. 28 was 7,355,747, an increase of 499,845 from the figure of 6,855,902 for the same number of games last year.

"Of course, this is comparing 18 teams with 16 teams," said enough, when we compare the same 16 teams with last year, we are virtually right on the nose."

Last year's 16-team total was 6,855,902 compared with 6,829,764 for the same teams this season. The difference of 26,138 represents a drop of about 53 fans a game, a change Campbell said was due to the number of standing-room tickets in several NHL arenas.

CZECHS ADVANCE

LONDON (AP) — Jan Kodes and Jiri Hrebec, both from Thursday to the semi-finals of a $60,000 international tennis tournament at London's Royal Albert Hall. Kodes, former Wimbledon singles champion, beat Adriano Panatta of Italy 6-3, 6-4. Hrebec, 24, defeated Hans Pohmann of West Germany 6-0, 6-2.

Petes Hang On For Win

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Peterborough Petes scored three first-period goals, then held on to defeat St. Catharines Black Hawks 3-1 in the only Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A game Thursday.

Replacing Paul Emms behind the Black Hawks bench was Rob Craig, father of centre Greg Craig and a midget coach in St. Catharines.

It was Craig's sixth game as a Major Junior A coach this season. Emms was suspended for six games following St. Catharines' loss last weekend to Toronto Marlboros.

Aim for Wild-card Status

Mariners Have Knack For Whipping Aeros

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

San Diego Mariners may not be the powerhouse of the World Hockey Association's Western Division, but they're mighty tough for Houston Aeros.

The Mariners, in fourth spot in the division, beat first-place Houston 7-4 in the only league game Thursday night—the fifth time in six meetings this year the Mariners have beaten the defending league champions.

San Diego, attempting to make the league playoffs with wild-card status, got two goals each from Ray Adduono and Wayne Rivers.

WAYNE RIVERS

Rivers, a 33-year-old right winger who has spent a good portion of his 14-season professional hockey career travelling between the American and National hockey leagues, now has 82 points for the season and is in sixth place in the league scoring race.

The Hamilton native has 47 goals and 35 assists—the most goals he has scored in a season since he notched 48 with Springfield Kings in the 1971-72 AHL season.

Adduono, 28-year-old centre from Thunder Bay, Ont., provided the insurance goal to give San Diego its 31st victory of the season in 61 starts.

The Mariners, who have 27 losses and three ties, trail Minnesota Fighting Saints by five points for third place and Phoenix Roadrunners by seven points for second and a playoff spot.

The top two teams in each division make the playoffs. The two teams among the also-rans with the next-best records get wild-card berths in the playoffs.

After trailing 2-0 and 4-3 at the end of two periods, the Aeros came back to tie the game at 4-4 on Andre Hinse's goal at 3:30 of the final period.

But Rivers scored his 46th and 47th goals at 5:52 and 10:53 to put the Mariners back in front 6-4.

Mike Laughton, Gene Peacosh and Rick Sentes also scored for the Mariners. Gordon Labossiere, Frank Hughes and Rich Preston also scored for Houston.

In games tonight, Baltimore Blades travel to Indianpolis for a game with the Racers, Vancouver Blazers take on the troubled Oilers at Edmonton, Winnipeg Jets plays at Phoenix, and Quebec Nordiques and Toronto Toros clash at Toronto in a battle of Canadian Division leaders.

LAUDS DECISION

— The government's decision Tuesday to allow racially-mixed rugby and cricket teams to play against two teams from abroad has been hailed as an important step toward elimination of apartheid in sport. All other sports have mixed competition at the international level.

Barrie Midgets Tie Spartak 5-5

MOSCOW (CP) — Right winger Robert Coulson scored three goals to enable the Barrie, Ont., midget team to tie the Soviet Spartak club 5-5 in the first game of a six-game tour here.

The Barrie squad won the Canadian midget tournament earlier this year at Oshawa, Ont.

Robert Garner, the centre on Coulson's line, and left winger Shane Pearsall scored the other Canadian goals. Goaltender Doug Keans came up with a brilliant skate save in the last minute of play to preserve the tie for Barrie.

For Spartak, right-winger Vladimir Zubkov had two goals. Sergei Yagotkin, Gennady Sazonov and Vladimir Novikov added single goals.

The Soviets took a 1-0 lead on a power-play goal at 14:03 of the first period when Zubkov scored on a 35-foot slapshot. John Garner, 14-year-old cousin of Robert Garner, was serving a minor penalty at the time.

Coulson tied the score at 18:25 on a power play and the Canadians made it 2-1 early in the second period before the Russians rallied to take a 4-3 lead entering the final 20 minutes.

Spartak made it 5-3 at 1:13 of the final period before Robert Garner deflected Coulson's pass by the Spartak goaltender on a power play at 11:51. Coulson evened the score at 14:20 when he tipped in Mike Gibb's drive from the blueline.

It was an impressive start for the Canadians, who play their next game Saturday against the Soviet national midget team. Last year, Verdun, Que., Maple Leafs, winners of the 1974 Canadian midget tournament, lost their first game 14-0.

Lloyd Pearsall, Shane's father and coach of the Canadian team, was jubilant. "The kids played a heck of a game, and we had a good chance at winning it. But they couldn't jam it in."

Floyd Smith – Dreams Coming True

Sabres Making It Happen

NEW YORK (CP) — In training camp last September, coach Floyd Smith of Buffalo Sabres was a dreamer

He was a rookie coach who would drift for the moment into the fantasyland of hockey championships. He would picture his Sares leadinbg the National Hockey League in the stretch drive to the playoffs.

"I dream about it all through training camp," Smith recalls. "I wouldn't believe it, but I dreamt it."

Now the dream is reality and the Sabres are involved in an intense struggle for position in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

General manager Punch Imlach helped the dream come true with two trades at the right time this season, acquiring defenceman Jocelyn Guevremont from Vancouver Canucks and centre Fred Stanfield from Minnesota North Stars.

This week, Imlach signed veteran goalie Gerry Desjardins as playoff insurance although rookie Gary Bromley and Roger Crozier have been outstanding.

The Sabres are the first team in the NHL to win 40 games this season and have the most points—93—with 15 games left to play.

That over-all points lead is crucial to the Sabres, because points are the determining factor in the matchups of the 12 teams who go into the playoffs from the four divisions.

In the pairings, the team with the most points gets the home-ice advantage and more than 60 per cent of playoff games are won on home ice.

Under the new playoff system, each division winner has a bye in the first round. But in the quarter-finals and semi-finals, the team with the most points plays the club with the least.

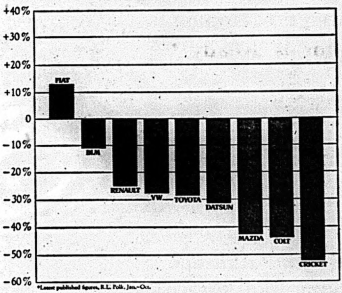
The Sabres are fighting to stay ahead of Montreal Canadiens as the club with the league's most points. Buffalo already has wrapped up the Adams Division while the Canadiens are fighting to keep ahead of Los Angeles Kings in the Norris Division.

The Kings were left three points behind the Canadiens when they tied New York Islanders 2-2 in Thursday's only game.

Jude Drouin scored on a rebound with 2:21 left to play to give the Islanders the tie. The Islanders are the only team Los Angeles has failed to defeat this year.

"Montreal is only one point behind us, and if we're ever going to stay ahead, we're going to have to keep on winning," Smith said in an interview.

PERCENTAGE CHANGE IN RETAIL SALES OF IMPORTED CARS.
(1974 vs. 1973)*



*Latest published figures, R.L. Polk, Jan.-Oct.

There must be a reason.

In a year when new car sales were down 4.3%*, how do you explain Fiat dealers across Canada having the best year in their history?

How do you make sense out of the fact that while the entire import industry was down 26%, Fiat sales were up over 13%?

The explanation is not really that difficult.

Many Canadians have simply given up on big, expensive, gas-guzzling, inefficient cars. The idea of the car as a status symbol has heard its death rattle.

What Canadians have started looking for instead is practical, intelligent, sensible transportation. And that's just what we offer.

By looking above, however, you'll notice that Canadians haven't turned to everyone's small car.

You see, people don't want to give up everything for practicality. And we don't force them to.

We've found ways of offering people the advantages of big cars without the disadvantages of small ones.

Our cars don't make you feel cramped or claustrophobic. They have good acceleration. Their handling is nothing short of extraordinary.

Our cars are economical. But they're by no means Spartan. Instead of loading them down with gadgetry, we've given them things that make them perform better. Things you don't find in cars costing hundreds, even thousands of dollars more. Front-wheel drive which gives you extra traction for winter driving. All-independent suspension for better handling and surer cornering. Power-assisted front-disc brakes.

Little by little, we're starting to see other manufacturers emulate our kind of car. A few are coming out next year. Some in 1978. But for now, if you want all of what we've got, your Fiat dealer is the only game in town. And the figures show it.

Canada's Toller Cranston

Hopes for Championship Evaporate

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (CP) — A disappointed Toller Cranston saw his hopes of a world figure skating championship evaporate in the thin atmosphere of this 6,000-foot-high mountain resort Thursday night as a skater from the Soviet Union won the men's singles crown for the first time.

Cranston, a 25-year-old five-time Canadian champion from Toronto who has revolutionized men's skating with his ballet-like artistry on ice, was the last of 22 competitors to perform in the free-skating windup.

Even then, although he was in fourth place, he retained a mathematical chance of overtaking the three men who stood ahead of him.

He needed almost all 5.9s for both artistic impression and technical merit from the nine judges but he was not at his electrifying best in the warm air of the Broadmoor Arena. He received marks ranging from 5.6 to a perfect six for artistic impression from the Hungarian judge.

That wasn't enough and the championship went to Sergei Volkov a 25-year-old Russian, who is not a particularly brilliant free-skater but had built up enough of a lead in the school figures to see him through

Volkov was the same man who barely edged Cranston to take second place in the world championships in Munich a year ago The 1974 winner, Jan Hoffman of East Germany, did not skate here because he is recovering from a major knee operation

The silver medal was won by another Soviet skater, Vladimir Kovalev who performed a triple loop and two triple salchows in a performance that was not overly exciting but was enough to move him ahead of John Curry of England.

Curry had been in second place after Wednesday's compulsory free skating but in the five-minute free skating finale he took a full minute before he did his first jump, then slipped on a triple salchow and missed one triple loop before landing another

Fifth behind Cranston was Gordon McKellen Jr., the United States champion, sixth was Yuri Ovchinnikov of the Soviet Union, strongest free skater among the Russians, and sixth was Terry Kubicka of the U.S., who put on the most dynamic performance of the night.

Eighth place went to Ron Shaver, 23, of Cambridge, Ont., who skated through the whole competition with a groin injury that had forced him to miss the Canadian championships in Quebec City in January.

RON SHAVER

Shaver, who admitted the injury still hurt a bit, missed four weeks of action before travelling with the Canadian skating team to Aspen, Colo., for training.

"Three weeks of skating is not enough time to get ready for the world championships, either mentally or physically," said Shaver, who was fifth in the 1974 championships in which he placed second to Cranston on the free skating."

Nevertheless, Shaver was pleased with his improvement in compulsory figures and also satisfied with his over-all performance considering the injury.

Shaver completed a triple toe loop combination but fell twice—on a triple salchow and triple loop jump.

Bob Rubens, 22, whose home is in Dollard des Ormeaux, Que., but who skates out of the Toronto Cricket, Skating and was 18th. He pulled off a triple toe loop but missed the takeoff on what was to have been a triple salchow.

There was beter news for the many Canadians here in the women's singles as Lynn Nightingale, 18-year-old national champion from Ottawa, recovered from a poor round of school figures to put on a brilliant display in the compulsory free skating.

The performance moved Miss Nightingale up from 13th to seventh and left her with a chance to match or better her sixth-place finish in the 1974 championships.

Kim Alletson, 16-year-old silver medallist who skates out of Ottawa's Minto Skating Club with Lynn, received respectable marks for her short program and moved up one place to 13th

Marilyn Thompson, who coaches both girls, said Kim's standing is about what can be expected for a girl competing in the world championships for the first time.

Miss Nightingale, who had talked of retirement after her disappointing performance in the compulsory figures, said her success in the short program had prompted a change of mind.

She now is looking forward to next year's Olympics and world championship. But first she has a chance to improve her position in tonight's free-skating program.

Dianne De Leeuw, a dual citizen who represents The Netherlands although she was born in the U.S. and trains in Los Angeles, is a virtual shoo-in for the women's title.

Christine Errath of East Germany, the defending champion, was in fourth place after the short program but had almost no chance of catching the leader.

Those who watched Cranston felt he was skating at less than his usual speed. His program included only one triple jump—a salchow—and it was slightly flawed because his hand touched the ice as he came down.

However, as at Munich last year, he emerged as the No. 1 free skater, the result of a third-place standing in the compulsory short program and a second in the free skating.

Highest marks for the free-skating windup went to Kubicka, who displaced Cranston as the exciting skater in the competition.

The American performed the first triple flip and first triple lutz of the competition, added a triple salchow and would have had a fourth triple jump but fell before his takeoff on a triple loop. Then he ended up with five consecutive Arabian cartwheels and skated off to a standing ovation.

In all, 21 triple jumps were performed successfully in the free skating but another dozen were either missed or ended up in falls.

Leeds Turns Attention To Game with Ipswich

LONDON (CP) — For the time being, Leeds United can forget about the European Cup soccer competition.

The English League First Division club, which blanked Anderlecht of Belgium 3-0 Wednesday in the first leg of the European Cup quarter-final series, now has to worry about Ipswich Town, its opponent in Saturday's English Football Association (FA) Cup quarter-final series.

If Leeds duplicates Wednesday's home performance, then Ipswich, despite its home advantage, will be in for a hard time.

Bookmakers have installed Leeds as 3-to-1 favorites to win the FA Cup. Ipswich, rated second at 4 to 1, is making its first appearance in the quarter-final round.

Leeds was beaten semi-finalists in 1967 and 1968, losing finalists in 1965, 1970 and 1973. The club won the FA title in 1972 by beating Arsenal, rated 9-to-2 third favorite in the betting. The club is at home Saturday for a game against West Ham United.

In another game, Carlisle—in the last eight for the first time—will be at home to Second Division Fulham, which upset favorite Everton in the fifth round.

The other quarter-final game will be between Birmingham City and Middlesbrough. Birmingham has reached the semi-finals of the Cup six times since the Second World War. Middlesbrough has never graced the semi-finals of any pro soccer competition

Skip Follows Rival's Example

Northern Ontario Moves in Front

FREDERICTON (CP) — Bill Tetley may not be the most superstitious skip here, but he knows a good thing when he sees it.

The Northern Ontario skip has taken advantage of other skips' know-how to lead the Canadian men's curling championships with only three rounds remaining.

Northern Ontario registered an 11-4 win over Nova Scotia Thursday night.

The result has Tetley's Thunder Bay foursome out in front with a 7-1 record with only two draws today and one Saturday remaining in the national championship

Tetley said he noticed Alberta skip Tom Reed marking some rocks he thought were bad, so he told his boys.

Manitoba's Rod Hunter suggested the flaws in the rocks earlier in the day, saying the stones were "doing strange things" on the ice in his key matchup with Regina's Harvey Mazinke.

Tetley admitted the ice was "tricky" and "very demanding to weight and broom," but "the texture is very good and the keenness is just super."

"So maybe you can't have everything. Maybe you can't have perfect ice as well as keen ice and good rocks. There's got to be something wrong somewhere."

Don Twa's Territories rink from Whitehorse stayed with the leaders at 6-2 with an 8-5 victory over Manitoba, breaking open a 5-5 tie with a three in the 11th end.

In other evening games, Quebec's Jim Ursel lifted his Montreal rink to a 12-6 win over John Clark of Fredericton, the host New Brunswick entry, Mazinkes Regina crew edged Frank Beutel of Penticton, B.C., 8-7, and Alex Scott and his Ontario entry from Kingston took John Fortier's Prince Edward Island rink from Charlottetown 9-5.

Newfoundland and Alberta drew the byes in the evening draw.

Bob Margeson, the Nova Scotia third, led the Dartmouth foursome against Northern Ontario in the evening draw after skip Dick Boyce went to bed with the flu.

In the afternoon draw, the scores were: Territories 8 Alberta 6; Northern Ontario 7 Prince Edward Island 5; Newfoundland 6 B.C. 5; Quebec 8 Nova Scotia 5; Manitoba 10 Saskatchewan 4. Ontario and New Brunswick had the byes.

The morning draw saw Saskatchewan take Newfoundland 9-7, New Brunswick down Nova Scotia 10-7, Northern Ontario trip Ontario 8-6, Alberta edge Manitoba 10-9 and Quebec romp 9-4 over P.E.I. with the Territories and B.C. getting the byes.

In today's 2 p.m. AST draw, Manitoba goes against British Columbia, Ontario against Quebec, Saskatchewan against Alberta, New Brunswick against Northern Ontario and Newfoundland against the Territories with P.E.I. and Nova Scotia holding the byes.

The Tetley rink has pulled into the lead almost without fanfare with most of the attention here on the usual powerhouses skipped by Mazinke, Hunter and Reed.

The Thunder Bay skip doesn't mind the westerners getting most of the attention.

"We're very capable," he said of his feelings for the rink. "No high percentage curlers," he admitted. "We get lots of pieces and roll-outs [illegible] misses, too. But we seem to put it together at the same time.

"Either that or the other team falls apart."

Opening Round 66 Does It

Courtney Takes Early Lead

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Chuck Courtney has long been noted as one of pro golf's premier scramblers, a master at the trouble shot.

But the chipper Courtney, last a winner in 1969 and a long-time struggler, didn't need to resort to his specialty in establishing the first-round lead Thursday in the $200,000 Citrus open golf tournament. He had a 66 that could have been much better.

It came in the best tradition—a drive down the fairway, an approach dead on the flag. He missed only one green. He had the ball 12 feet or closer on 14 of the 18 holes.

"That's the closest I've ever hit it," said Courtney, a 12-year tour veteran. "That's as good as I've ever played. I couldn't want to hit the ball any better."

He missed a six-foot birdie putt. He missed an eight-foot birdie putt. He missed five from 10 feet. But it didn't bother him.

A pair of tour sophomores, Mark Hayes and Pat FitzSimons, the winner of the Los Angeles Open two weeks ago, trailed the leader by one stroke at 67.

U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin, who hasn't finished lower than sixth in his last three starts, led a large group at 68, four-under-par. Also at 68 were Australian veteran Bruce Crampton, Jim Dent, Larry Hinson, Rik Massengale and Mike Reasor.

Lee Trevino was in another group at 69 as almost perfect playing conditions contributed to generally low scores.

George Knudson of Toronto had a sub-par 35 on his front nine and parred the back for a 71. Danny Halldorson of Brandon, Man., and Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg each shot a 75.

Arnold Palmer shot a 72.

Remi Cloutier Winner

MAGOG, Que. (CP) — Remi Cloutier of Lorranie, Que., won the first downhill race Thursday at the final event of the eastern division of the Pontiac Cup ski series.

Cloutier was timed in 68.21 seconds to finish ahead of Scott Finlay of Kingston, Ont., clocked in 68.43. Germain Barette of Causapcal, Que., was third in 68.88 followed by Daniel Bergeron of Shawinigan, Que., who registered a time of 69.03.

The women's race was captured by Andrea Esson of Toronto in 73.95 seconds. Martine Lussier of Trois-Rivieres was second in 74.21 while Jo-Anne Ness of Quebec finished third in 74.73.

The second race for both groups will be held today.
